"Nothing without labor."

To my Hubbard Kinsfolk:

For many years I have been of the opinion that there was sufficient material and data in regard to our family in general, which if properly compiled would make a very interesting volume and add to the history of our country and its records.

Some years ago I was urged by the late Edwin Hubbard, as well as Douglas Hubbard, to aid in publishing a Hubbard Genealogy, but I was firmly convinced, upon examination (and I am much more so now), that while what they had done was most excellent, that it did not go far enough to be broad, comprehensive and satisfactory to all the branches.

However, it is largely due to their patient work in exciting an interest in keeping records which makes this book possible to-day. A letter from each, to the publisher, after they had passed "three score and ten," will be found under miscellaneous on page 401, and both show that they felt the incompleteness of their work.

A bright, intelligent man, loyal to the memory of his Hubbard mother, was, however, already grown, who stood ready to pick up the broken fragments and cement them, with other data, together into presentable shape. I refer to Mr. Edward Warren Day, who modestly insists that his title shall be simply "compiler." Fully as much credit is due to him as to any one else, if not more, and I am sure that the army of Hubbards, of all "clans" and "tribes," will not be slow in according it to him.

I have known of the careful and painstaking work which he has given to all of the lines, taking up the broken and incomplete chains of Edwin and Douglas (with their forty years work) at their death a few years ago, spending his time and money freely, traveling and buying records from town, parish and probate clerks and other sources; and I have often marveled at his patience and perseverance in untangling the mixed threads, and keeping straight the mountains of dates and names.

When I had the opportunity, as a publisher of experience, of inspecting the mass of highly interesting and instructive manuscript which Mr. Day had prepared, in addition to the genealogical part, I felt sure that the time had come to perpetuate it, and give to our family a record of which all will be proud.

Here it is, not "absolutely perfect" perhaps, for we are only human, but it is from the best possible obtainable records. The book is of necessity a good deal like a good huckleberry pie, in that it will be found full of good huckleberries and with but little crust. Interesting matter kept coming up to the time of going to press, so that it has increased the size of the book, by at least 100 pages, over what I anticipated. Hence an increase of cost to me; hence the increase of price to all who did not order in advance of publication.

As publisher, I have spared neither labor nor expense to produce a book of highest grade and quality, as well as profuseness of illustration and general mechanical excellence. I am proud of its appearance and believe all other members of the "tribe" will be pleased with it. If so, should like to hear from you, saying how much you are pleased.

I know that it is the part of a host who is entertaining a distinguished company to see that the guests are properly introduced and grouped. What is true in a social gathering is true in such an eclectic book as this. Therefore I take pleasure in introducing all the Hubbards to each other, through this choicest mosaic history of one thousand years.

With kindest regards to each and all, I am,

Yours very truly,

Harlan Page Hubbard.

A FAINT frost of age is beginning to encrust this country, and saviors of historical salvage must at once rescue from oblivion that which will be precious and invaluable to posterity. The time is scarcely yet, perhaps, but is fast approaching, when genealogy will be highly prized. Genealogy and biography are the two eyes of history, yet the former is generally assailed and ridiculed, as most incoming strange customs are. Horses and dogs can have their pedigrees preserved with perfect propriety, but apply the practice to humanity and it becomes an idle conceit! So saith our worldly-wise neighbor. Yet preserved genealogical records have restored to rightful heirs many millions in estates that would otherwise have been lost to them.

It is not an indication of vain-gloriousness or empty conceit that prompts us to record the careers of our ancestors, environ their memories with circlets of laurel, or disparage the plebeian at the expense of the patrician. The great Cicero was of plebeian birth, though a monument of nobility of character, and quite fittingly did he crush the pompous patrician who said to him, "I am a patrician; you are a plebeian." "True," replied the grand Roman, "but the nobility of my family begins with me; your's ends with you."

George Lillo, a London dramatist, once said: "A respectable birth and fortune, though they make not a bad man good, yet they are a real advantage to a worthy one, and place his virtues in the fairest light." The compiler firmly believes this, and also that fifty years hence will find the published family genealogy occupying the centre-table or library shelf with the Bible, Shakspeare, and other standard literature. Our ancestors paid too expensively in sweat, suffering, and blood to cement the foundation stones of the governmental superstructure we now so peacefully and prosperously occupy to be forgotten, slighted, or ignored by succeeding generations, so largely made up of vandals and mammon-worshippers, and in whose breasts no Divine spark burns for things noble, holy, venerable, or antiquated, but, instead, a consuming fire to possess those riches of the earth that so often "take unto themselves wings and fly away like an eagle toward heaven." America is now peopled with restless spirits who "haven't time" for research, rest, or recreation—animation to-day, clay to-morrow! This is the condition of the present age. O tempora! O mores! We are told, also, that we are not "progressive" when we live in the past or indulge in retrospection, though the philosopher does it to learn his lessons in philosophy. The philosopher lives in the past, the animal in the present, the ambitious in the future. The writer rejoices that he is not in harmony with the spirit of the present times. He loves to exhume, wonder at, and admire the antiquated. He wants landmarks preserved and reverenced, be they old houses, decaying graveyards, ancient books, or venerable trees. Republishing historic literature, legends and traditions, building memorial monuments to the heroic, and perpetuating family names meet with his hearty approbation. William Makepeace Thackeray said: "As you like your father to be an honorable man, why not your grandfather and his ancestors before him?" Let us, then, venerate their memories, reset their falling tombstones, record their achievements-simple or great-chronicle their names and virtues, and avoid a prospective charge of being a generation of ingrates. The stimulation of such inward reflections brings forth this book, imperfect, and sprinkled here and there with errors, as it doubtless is. From those unused to untwisting genealogical tangles the compiler expects but little compassion for mistakes, but from those familiar with such distracting complications he looks for some charity. The novelist and the poet have much the advantage over the historian. They can let fly ubiquitiously their harmless darts of fancy, tipped and plumed with sentiment and poesies. but the chronologist must always abide in the domain of prosaic facts, a prev ever for the watchful, anabushed critic, who mercilessly trips him at every opportunity, and with malignant joy points out his errors. Verily there are but few roses, yet many thorns encountered in the genealogist's path. Volunteers to assist in such labors are few, financial donators still more scarce (philanthropists donate to libraries, not to the makers of libraries), and the votary must comfort himself with the solacing thought that "the reward of good works is like datessweet, and ripening late."

EDWARD WARREN DAY.

As it is the commendation of a good huntsman to find game in a vide wood, so it is no imputation if he hath not caught all—Plato.

THE compiler of this volume claims not that it is a Hubbard Genealogy per se. It is, to be more exact a compendium, or Hubbard Handbook. A genealogy, pure and simple, of all Hubbard lines, completed to date, would rival Webster's Dictionary in both size and expense. Such a volume will never be compiled. The obstacles are too great. Descendants will not answer letters, promptly or at all, furnish necessary data, or subscribe freely to these enterprises, so something less must we fain be content with. It is hard to stir the stagnant pools of genealogical indifference into a boiling enthusiasm. Better talent should have been secured to concrete these historical and genealogical scraps, but volunteers do not materialize. The mantles of Edwin Hubbard and Douglas Hubbard (veteran and painstaking genealogists) seem to have fallen to the ground. Both died very poor. They lived not long enough to enjoy appreciation or the harvest time. With them genealogy was an applied science, with the writer a diversion only, and he cheerfully admits that without their blazoning marks on the trees in the dense forest of genealogy he would have been many times hopelessly lost.

Beginning with the first ancestor of each line in this country, there are to-day seven or more distinct Hubbard branches. By adding to these the "Hobart" line, the "Hulbard-Hubbard" line, a "Line of Maryland Hubbards" and the line of "Virginia Hubbards," we have about a dozen lines producing Hubbards to enrich this great Commonwealth. The compiler is in correspondence with representatives of all these lines, and there may be still other lines extant. If so, they have so far escaped his winnowings. It is possible John Hubbard, son of Anthony Hubbard of Dedham, may have a living posterity; also the male children of widow Elizabeth Hubbard of Boston, and the issue of Benjamin Hubbard of Boston, who returned to England and there died, though signs indicate that some of his children came back, possibly Thomas and Richard. This can not yet be positively proven, those surnames being very common among early Hubbard families.

It being so easy to become bewildered in tracing genealogical threads, it is hoped the difficulty has been somewhat lessened by interspersing miscellaneous Hubbard matter between different branches. Blank leaves have also been added to permit descendants to take up their lines where the compiler leaves them.

The sources of information herein utilized are too numerous to more than briefly mention. A considerable portion came from England, the major portion directly from town clerks' records, probate records and early deeds, and from professional genealogists, a little from published histories, some from Bible and prayer-book registrations, some from tombstone inscriptions and some from "trees" loaned.

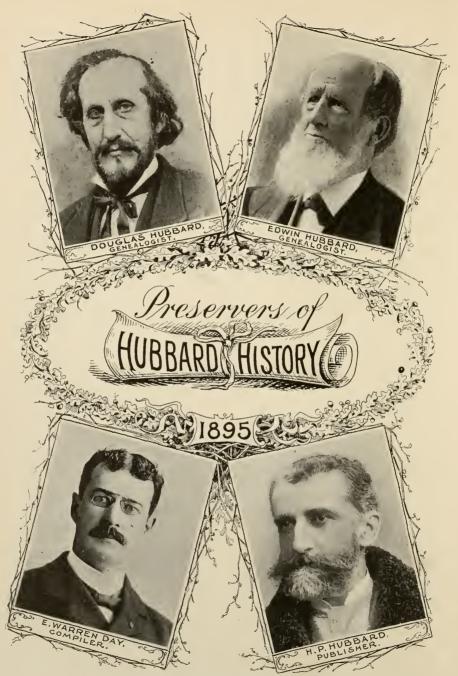

The compiler would be unmindful of the requirements of gratitude not to herewith record his deep obligations to Robert Sage Griswold, William Henry Hubbard and Hon, Gardiner Greene Hubbard for their loval support and substantial encouragement. Without their contributions and devotion to this enterprise the volume would have been longer delayed in appearance and less satisfactory in contents. Mr. Griswold is a great grandson of Jeremiah Hubbard (through Bathsheba Hubbard) and also of Constant Griswold, both Revolutionary War participants. He is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution, a genuine antiquary, and loval to genealogists, who write to him from every locality, and lives in Cromwell, near Middletown, Ct. Mr. William Henry Hubbard is a leading manufacturer of Duluth, Minn. (see Descent Line), a genealogist himself of no small attainments, and has contributed voluminous data to this book. Gardiner Greene Hubbard, President of the National Geographic Society (see Prominent American Hubbards), as soon as he became satisfied of the good faith of the enterprise, gave timely financial aid, and personally attended to procuring valuable genealogical matter outside of the compiler's reach. Such support can not be overrated or overlooked.

Non-contributors of family or ancestral data should not feel disappointed if much of their family data should happen to be omitted in this volume, or be printed incorrectly. Over 3,000 Hubbard descendants have been invited by circular to contribute their genealogical possessions, yet few have responded. Knowing full well that errors spring up like mushrooms, while truth rises but slowly, the compiler claims only correctness approximately in the contents of this volume. Many dates copied from miscellaneous sources he mistrusts, yet has had no means of verification.

He also presents his sincere thanks to the following subscribers for encouragement and data contributed: Mrs. Thomas Scranton Hubbard, Urbana, Ill.; Mrs. Lucy Lyman Hubbard, Kenilworth, Ohio; Lieut. E. W. D

(Descended from George Hubbard of Guilford and Middletown, Ct.)

A good name is like precious ointment. It filleth all round about and will not easily away. For the odors of ointments are more durable than flowers—Lord Bacon.

THE compiler having received from high English authority (notably from a Member of Parliament, the late Right Hon. John Gellibrand Hubbard, Baron, the first Lord Addington and Governor-General of the Bank of England) versions unanimously supporting the family traditions regarding the origin of the name HUBBARD, with considerable confidence presents herewith the following narrative, with its very dramatic climaxes, as the correct source of the name, which name, with its time-producing corruptions, has now overspread the world. From a crude, though reliable, semi-barbaric Danish and Saxon literature these historic gems have been mined and burnished, and are now offered to HUBBARD descendants with the compiler's strongest assurances that the appraisement of their historic worth has not been one of overvalue; nor has it been colored at the expense of probity with rich and sensational embellishment. The latter indulgence is the license of the poet and novelist but not that of the historian and genealogist.

Upon the accession of King Ethelwulf in 839 to the throne of Wessex—consisting of the provinces of Kent, Essex and Surrey, in Britain—about the first matter to spur his activity was the beginning of immediate preparations to resist the invasions of the rapacious Danes, or Norsemen, who ruled the northern seas, the Orkney and Shetland Islands, and Jutland (or the Scandinavian continent) with unquestioned authority and rigor. Scandinavia was the birthplace of a savage set of men who, like the Saxons of old, spent the best portion of their lives on the waves, despising the tranquil enjoyments of peace, and cultivating instead the art of unlawful acquisition and rapine. Their maritime situation familiarized them with the science of navigation. The children of these sea-kings were educated to piracy. The eldest son received the patrimony of the father, and the remaining sons were given swords and ships with which they were expected to go forth and acquire glory and riches. Until the ninth century these adventurous sea-robbers confined their operations to their own waters. But later on, possessed of the spirit of Alexander the Great, and hearing stories of the great wealth of the Latin dominions, they embarked for the southern seas on their freebooting expeditions. Their first attempts were directed toward the British Isles. Then they desolated the coasts of Gaul and Spain, and, venturing into the Mediterranean Sea, taught also the inhabitants of those shores how to tremble. The establishment of the duchy of Normandie, the Danish dynasty in England, and, afterward, a kingdom in Italy, are monuments of their courage, activity and perseverance.

They made three important descents into England during the ninth century, one being upon the Isle of Thanet, and the other two upon the coasts of Northumberland and into the county of Kent. famous King of the Franks, Charlemagne, sometimes called "Charles the Hammer," son of Pepin the Short and Bertha, and grandson of Charles Martel, conqueror of the Huns, Slavons, Saracens, Arabs and Britons, wept tears of sorrow at the future of his people at the hands of these wild Northmen. According to Guizot's History of France he thus expressed himself to his Court: "Know ye, my lieges, wherefore I weep so bitterly? Of a surety I fear not lest these fellows should succeed in injuring me by their miserable piracies; but it grieveth me deeply that whilst I live they should have been nigh to touching at this shore, and I am a prey to violent sorrow when I foresee what evils they will heap upon my descendants and their people." Charlemagne died Jan. 28, 814; and during the ninth and tenth centuries in verification of his prediction the Northmen made no less than forty-seven incursions into France.

John Lingard, D. D., a famous Catholic-English historian, says in better and more perspicuous language than the compiler can perhaps summon, that "among the sea-kings was Ragnar Lodbrog [Regner Lodbrok or Lodbrock] and his two* sons, Hingua and HUBBA [Ingua or Inguar—Ubba or Ubbo] who was one of the most adventurous and successful. On the shores of the Baltic, in the Orkneys and the Hebrides, in Ireland, Scotland, and Northumbria, he had diffused the terror of his name. In France the intrepid pirate had conducted his fleet up the Seine, spread the flames of devastation on each of its banks, and taken possession of Paris, which was redeemed from destruction only by the payment of $f_{0.000}$,000 of silver. By his orders ships of a larger size than had hitherto been navigated by his countrymen were constructed for an invasion of England; but, whether it was owing to the violence of the weather or the unskilfulness of the navigators, they were wrecked on the coast of Northumbria. Ragnar with several of his followers reached the shore, and, heedless of the consequences, commenced their usual career of depredation. Though the Northumbrians had cast off the voke imposed on them by Egbert, their country was torn by civil dissensions; and at this very moment their chieftains were divided by the opposite pretensions of two competitors, Osbert and Ælla. At the first news of the descent of the Northmen, the latter flew to the coast, fought with the plunderers, made Ragnar prisoner, and immediately put him to death. He is said to have been devoured by snakes, and to have consoled his last moments with the hope 'that the cubs of the boar would avenge his fate.' Nor was he disappointed. His sons, Hingua and HUBBA, who were in Denmark, swore to avenge his murder. The relations, the friends, and the admirers of the dead chieftain crowded to their standard, and eight sea-kings, with twenty jarls [noblemen] combined their forces in the pursuit of revenge and plunder."

In 868 King Ethelwulf having been dead several years—also his two older sons, Ethelbald and Ethelbert—the crown of Wessex descended about 871 upon Ethelred, the third son. There also remained the youngest son, Alfred, known afterward as Alfred the Great, who ably assisted his brother in their stout resistance against these ubiquitous Norsemen.

In the Fall of 866, with an immense fleet and 20,000 warriors, Hingua and HUBBA landed on the coast of East-Anglia or Kent to avenge the foul death of the "old boar." They fortified their camp strongly and awaited reinforcements from the Baltic, spending the winter in procuring horses and in corrupting the loyalty of some of the Northumberland chieftains toward their own king, Ethelred. In February, 867, they left their camp on the coast and marched landward and seized York. Osbert and Ælla patched up a truce between themselves, united their forces, and engaged Hingua and HUBBA outside of the city, and eventually drove them back within its walls. The Northumbrians battered breaches in the walls, rushed through, and fell upon Hingua and HUBBA'S forces with great vigor and fury, but the ferocious Norsemen in their savage desperation finally turned and dispelled their relentless foes. Osbert was killed and Ælla was taken prisoner. Hingua and HUBBA now enjoyed the exquisite pleasure of torturing the men who had thrown their father into a cage of snakes to be devoured, and well they used the opportunity. The punishment they inflicted upon Ælla is called in Danish vernacular "at rista örn." It consists in dividing the ribs, drawing the lungs through the opening and pouring salt upon them. Thus was King Ragnar Lodbrog (i. c., Ragnar of the "Shaggy Brogues") avenged by his loyal "cubs."

This last victory gave to Hingua and HUBBA undisputed possession of all that dominion south of the Tyne and north of Nottingham. The native inhabitants were constrained to purchase the friendship of Hingua and HUBBA, who immediately began to prepare for a southern invasion. Leaving a small force in possession of York to cultivate the country and retain possession of it, they proceeded against Ethelred and Alfred. They crossed the Humber into Lincolnshire, burnt the rich monastery at Bardenay and put its occupants to the sword. A small army of Saxons in the district of Kestevan stopped their progress for one day, however, killing three of the Danish chieftains, but soon the victorious invaders were sweeping on to the monastery of Croyland. Oskytue, a Danish leader, forced open the gates, and beheaded the abbot on the steps of the alter. Having pillaged and burnt the monastery, they marched to Medeshampsted, where the inhabitants resisted them stoutly and wounded Hingua. Soon the gates gave way and the bloodthirsty Danes slaughtered all whom they found, not sparing it is said women and children who had sought refuge in the abbey. HUBBA, to avenge his wounded brother, slew with his own hand the abbot and eighty-four monks. From the ashes of Medeshampsted they proceeded on to Huntington, destroying it, and then took the Isle of Ely. The nuns in this monastery were descended from noble Saxon families, and yet escaped not the cruelty and lust of these barbarous invaders. King of Mercia, St. Edmund, was captured at Hoxon-on-the-Waveney, bound naked to a tree, and, at HUBBA'S command, was whipped and otherwise tortured and finally beheaded. They met King Ethelred and Alfred the Great at Excesdune [Aston], and after a terrific battle were routed and in confusion fled as far as Reading. Bacseg, a Danish King, the jarls Osburn, Frean, Harold, and the two Sidrocs were killed. "A solitary thorn tree points out the spot on which the Danes were defeated." Other battles were afterward fought at Basing and Morton, in Berkshire, in which the Danes were victorious, they having received fresh reinforcements from the Baltic. Ethelred was killed, and then the invaders returned to Reading to divide their spoils and rejoice in the glory of their conquests.

In 878 Hingua and HUBBA with a fleet of 23 ships "ravaged the coasts of Demetia or South Wales, and, crossing to the northern coast of Devonshire, the sanguinous HUBBA landed his troops in the vicinity of Apledore. It appears as if the two brothers had previously agreed to crush the king [Alfred] between the pressure of their respective armies.

At the castle of Kynwith, built upon an almost impregnable rock, Odun,* the Saxon leader, took his position. The Danish leader [HUBBA] was too wary to hazard an assault, and calmly pitched his tents at the foot of the mountain in the confident expectation that the want of water would force the garrison to surrender. But Odun, gathering courage from despair, silently left his entrenchments at the dawn of morning, burst into HUBBA'S camp, slew him, with twelve hundred of his followers, and then drove the remnant of the routed army to their fleet. Odun captured HUBBA'S lucky battle-flag, the mysterious standard of Ragner, the "Reafan," [raven] which was "woven in one noon-tide by the hands of the three daughters of Ragner." The superstition of the Danes had accustomed them to watch this bird on their standard as they marched to battle. If it appeared to flap its wings, victory was certain, but if it hung motionless in the air they anticipated nothing but defeat.

Thus perished HUBBA, and also for a long time the martial fire that burned within the breasts of the adventurous Danes, though Hingua afterward invaded Ireland, but was killed there, while Halfdene and Gothrun, the successors of Hingua and HUBBA, made a very creditable stand against Alfred the Great at Ethandune. Gothrun was captured by King Alfred, but was permitted to live on the condition of his embracing Christianity, which he accepted, and, with thirty of his followers, was baptised at Aulre, Alfred being Gothrun's god-father. They jointly signed a compact wherein it was declared that "the lives of Englishmen and Danes were of equal value." It is not related what became of Halfdene [Halfdan or Halfdane], possibly the brother of Hingua and HUBBA

"The Hinguas," "the Gothruns," and "the HUBBA'S," then in the main adopted the names of their kings, with the habits of civilization, and, acquiring an interest in the soil, helped the Britains to protect it against subsequent marauding invaders; and sometimes these unwelcome visitors were their own erstwhile countrymen, but their allegiance to their adopted country was true, and they became during Britain's rapid advancement toward commercial and agricultural supremacy, her most skilled and reliable husbandmen.

The rapid and extensive movements of HUBBA over the territory now England and Wales, and his penchant for encamping upon and fortifying high places, has been of great value to the historical and archaeological student, leaving as he did indubitable traces of his remarkable marches. Throughout Britain and Wales have existed seven historic eminences that have borne the name of "Hubba's Hill." The picture of one spot has been happily preserved, though not located upon an eminence. Francis Grose, Esq., F. A. S., in his "Antiquities of England and Wales," thus refers to a spot known as "Hubba Stone Priory" (also Hubberston, or Hubbaston), and gives, with the foregoing inscription underneath, in the work, an illustration of it: "The ruin stands in Pembrokeshire, not far from Milford Haven, and is called by the inhabitants the priory; but whether for monks or nuns, or what order, and when and by whom founded, are particulars not handed down by tradition, or, at least, not known by the generality of the neighboring people. The building here shown seems to have been part of the gatehouse, in all likelihood the principal one belonging to the monastery. This view was drawn by Mr. Grimm anno 1771."

Mr. Walter Hubbell, in his

"History of the Hubbell Family," infers that this family might also have descended from Hubba the Dane, making still another addition to the long list of names that had for their root "Hubba." He quotes Rev. William Arthur, father of the late lamented ex-President Chester Alan Arthur, as saying in his "Etymological Dictionary of Family Names" that it had this origin, and surmises that Hubbell came from Hubba's Hill perhaps, rendered "Hubb'll" by local pronunciation. In his preface Mr. Hubbell says: "For me to assert that the early members of the Hubbell Family were lineal descendants of Hubba the Dane would be supposititious; but I do say, and without fear of contradiction, that the surname Hubbell is of Danish origin." He claims no kinship with the Hubbard Family, and the compiler found no proof either of any affinity with it, though the word Hubba could easily have been the common root of both.

^{*} From an etching in Grose's "Antiquities of England and Wales."

Referring to Francis Grose's account of Hubba Stone Priory, Mr. Hubbell says further: "It is most probable that the ruin thus described was never erected nor used as a priory, but was the remains of a fortress or castle erected and inhabited by Hubba; for his last permanent fortification is known to have been near Milford-Haven, where his fleet harbored and whence he crossed the channel, landed from his twentythree ships in Devonshire, England, where he was slain in battle. From the vast amount of historical research I have made in regard to this subject, I have been led to believe that several hills in Britain upon which he and his band had previously encamped afterwards bore his name. The name Hubba is not only very ancient in British history, but probably of great antiquity in Asia.* * * Mr. Hormuzd Rassam paid a visit to the mounds called by the Arabs Tell Abu Hubba: the mounds, which are very extensive, cover an area of two miles in circumference, and the position of the walls and citadels is clearly marked by mounds and embankments of debris. Like most Babylonian edifices, the buildings at Abu Hubba are built with the angles to the cardinal points [here follows a full description of the citadel and its environments]. * * * The remote ancestors of Hubba the Dane came from Asia, and it is more than probable from the very valley where the ruins—beneath the mounds of Abu Hubba—were discovered. Now, as personal names are handed down for centuries, why may not the name Hubba have been used by the remote ancestors of the chieftain in Asia? The very fact of the existence of the name in Asia at the present day indicates to my mind that it is of an antiquity probably as great as the ruins discovered beneath the mounds."

In a historical account of Whitby Abbey, Yorkshire, England, the subject is thus touched upon: "This monastery continued in a flourishing state until about the year 867, when a party of Danes under Hubba and Hingua landed at Dunesley Bay, two miles westward of this place, and encamped on an eminence on the east side thereof, still called Raven's Hill, which name it is supposed to have been obtained from the figure of that bird being worked on the Danish ensign which was there displayed. From thence, straggling into the country, they plundered and laid it waste, and among other depredations entirely destroyed this monastery, which lay in ruins for many years. The community being dispersed, only Titus, the abbot, fled with the relics of St. Hilda to Glastonbury.*

"Old English History" and David Hume also relate much of him. The following is another extract: "In 871 Hubba and Hingua took St. Edmund,† the King, prisoner at Thetford, in East Anglia. They offered him his life and kingdom if he would forsake Christianity and reign under them, When he refused they tied him to a tree and shot at him with arrows, and at last cut off his head. In the churches at Norfolk and Suffolk are to be seen pictures of him pierced with arrows. The Danes at the same time killed Humberht, Bishop of the East Angles, and after ravaging the country and burning the churches and monasteries, they went into Mercia and carried on their depredations."

The compiler in his researches has been often amazed at the number of grotesque mutations the name HUBBARD has undergone, fully equaling the number of ways the name "Shakespeare" has been spelled, which it is said overruns fifty. He has seen it spelled Hobbert, Hobart, Hubert, Hubard, Hobard, Hobbard, Hubbord, Hubberte, Hubart, Hobbart, Ouabert [French Canadian], Hubba, Hubb, Ubba, Ubbart, Ubbo, Hoberd, Huberd, Hobert, Hubbar, Hubber, Hubbud, Hubburd, Hubud, Horberd, Horburd, Horbert, Hobbud, Hebbard, Hoebard, Hubbed, Hobbed, Hubbed, Hobbar, Herbut, Herbeord, Hobood, Haburd, Hubird, Hobat, Hubbirt, Hubirt, Hobbet, Harburd, Hebberd, Hebberd, Habberd, Hoppert, Harbard, Hapberd, Herbert and Happert.

There are many descendants in this country who use the common form of Hubbart, Hubert, Hubbert, Hobert, Hobard and Hubard. The writer holds to the theory that HUBBA is the root of these multiform corruptions, though some other descendants incline to the contrary opinion. There was dense confusion in spelling names in the fifteenth century, the orthography being then very loose. Surnames only began to be adopted after the Norman Conquest (1066), and then only gradually and by families of rank. Almost all parish and legal records were written in Latin from the eleventh to the sixteenth century, which created great difficulty in furnishing the correct translation of proper names. Early town scribes in this country wrote the name as fancy guided them, totally indifferent to the perplexity they were surely entailing upon an enquiring posterity. The writer saw in an old town record the name HUBBARD (referring to one individual only), spelled in four different ways. With such indubitable proofs of this system of variform orthography in the early days it is taking an indefensible position to insist upon the unimpeachibility of any of these names regarding their purity of origin.

Angles, who was defeated and slain by the Danes, is commemorated by a church dedicated to him, which was celebrated for possessing a fragment of the martyr's underlinen that wrought miracles till such ecclesiastical properties were committed to the flames at the Reformation. 'Norwieh' is Norse, say philologists; and the physical characteristics and names of many of its inhabitants prove the former predominance of the Scandinavian element. Under Ethelstan and his immediate successors Norwich flourished and grew wealthy, only to be destroyed and plundered by the Danes, in the days of Æthelred the Unready.' Norwich stands at the head of a fine natural harbor in Norfolk that was used in early days by the Angles, Danes and Normans. Wymondham Parish, but a short distance from Norwich, contains in its various church registers many Hubbard genealogical records.

Granted by KINGHENRY VII to THOMAS HUBBARD OF CALAIS."

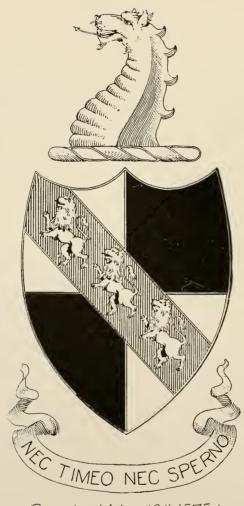

It is far from my design to intimate that Heraldry can have any tendency unfriendly to the purest spirit of Republicanism—George Washington.

A MONG Hubbard descendants the compiler has found considerable confusion and a misty knowledge generally about the HUBBARD COATS OF ARMS, especially as to which was the correct coat. To dispel this fog and settle beyond peradventure some conflicting opinions, the writer obtained from the Herald's College, London, its registered data covering this much misunderstood matter, which he presents herewith under the seal of universally acknowledged authority.

To start with, it is well to say that in early periods in England various grants of arms have been awarded to "Hubbards," "Hubbarts," "Hubbarts," "Hubbarts," and "Hubberds," and all are correct, being grants made at different times to collateral branches of the HUBBARD tree trunk. The four leading coats only, as furnished by the Herald's College, are herein illustrated, though others mentioned in Burke's "Encyclopedia of Heraldry" are herewith described.

There being founded in law or sentiment no college of arms in this country, or in existence any statutes recognizing such an institution of symbolism as "Heraldry," any Hubbard descendant is privileged to appropriate any Hubbard heraldic device to his own use—or any other armorial design for that matter—should the fancy so seize him, though a consideration for the ethics of propriety would doubtless forbid choosing the latter course. Such liberties could not under any circumstances be taken in foreign countries, where these rights are proprietary and inviolate. Persons unable to prove descent from the original grantee are punished there for assuming armorial bearings illegally. In the United States "Heraldry" has no legal status.

The graceful art of heraldry began to show distinctive signs of existence a little later than the beginning of the eleventh century. Its parentage comes from out of a cloud of fantastical romance interwoven with various superstitious skeins of allegorical entity.

One account of its origin says that in 1098 the Christians being near Antioch, and the night waxing dark, to give them safety there appeared a white star, or "mulette," of five points, which "to every man's sighte did lighte and arreste upon the standard of De Vere, there shyning excessively." Hence the De Veres adopted upon their "escutcheon" (from "scutum"—a leather covering) five stars.

In Sir John Froissart's Chronicles is given another version of its inception. It declares that the "Kynge of France" had a bright "visyon on a night as he lay in his bedde asleepe of a flyeing Hart," which "pleased hym so moche that when he went into Flanders to fight with the Flemynges he took to his devyse the flyeing Harte."

Another writer says that it originated in Germany about 1010, and cites the reclining figure of a certain Varmond, Count of Vasserburg, on a monument in the church of St. Emmeran, at Ratisbon, Anno Domini MX., as the oldest symbolic evidence in existence of architectural heraldry. It may have originated there, but it certainly developed in France, and at once engrafted itself upon the body-politic of Great Britain. It rose in importance and assumed great proportions during the Crusades. Every soldier's commander was distinguishable by the devices worn upon his "banneret" and shield. In tournaments a knight's identity was thus discovered, and when he championed the cause of one or more ladies, their insignia was also borne upon his shield in half or quartered sections, which were called "fields." In medieval times the armorial designs represented valorous achievements, the descent of hereditary honors, or distinctions appertaining to · nobility, and counterfeiting these designs brought severe penalties. In later periods the dignity of these devices became somewhat debased by appearing upon windows, tombstones, carriages, rings, tilings, family plate, and other household decorations. It is claimed with some force of plausibility that the heat of the sun was the direct cause of the "cote armure" (coat over armor). The heat and glare was often intolerable to the soldier or knight, and a "coat" or "habit" became a necessity and the devices or "charges" were then transferred to the "coat."

The grant of the coat of arms shown in one of the illustrations was made in the time of King Henry VII, who reigned from 1485 to 1509. This coat was granted to "THOMAS HUBBARD, of Calais," which garrisoned and fortified city was then under English domination and so remained until 1558, and which James Anthony Froude, the English historian, called a "rendezvous for malcontents."

Arms used by the late → SIR J9/1N GELLIBRAND ITUBBARD, ← BAREN, M.P., AND DIRECTER-GENERAL EF THE BANK EF ENGLAND.

The honor was conferred upon THOMAS HUBBARD by Sir Christopher Barker, the Garter King of Arms at that time of the Herald's College, who was also the official confidential agent of royalty and invested with power to go abroad and confer titles and ofttimes adjust royal marriage preliminaries and negotiations. The officials of the College of Arms are the Earl Marshal (hereditary through line of Duke of Norfolk), the Clarencieux King, Norroy King, Garter King, six Heralds, and four Royal Pursuivants. THOMAS HUBBARD was said to have been one of King Henry's soldiers.

The Herald's College thus describes this Coat:

The Arms granted are: Azure-a chevron between three swans' heads erased (argent); each gorged with a crown (or and gates). * No crest is recorded, and neither No. I nor No. il have any

The Herald's College describes still another Coat in the accompanying illustrations, in the following language:

This Coat was granted by Sir Gilbert Defnick [who succeeded Sir Christopher Barker to that title April 20, 1550, upon the death of Sir Christopher] May 19, 1575, in the 17th year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, to EDWARD HUBBARD, of Burchauger, Essex County, Gentleman, one of the six Clerks of the High Court of Chancery, son and heir of Richard Hubbard, son and heir of John Hubbard, clitzen and mercer of London.

The Arms granted are: Quarterly—argent and sable; on a bend (gules) three lions (or) passant.

* No crest is recorded.

^{*}Though the College has no record of the crests and mottoes adorning the accompanying illustrations, that does not signify that they have been unlawfully acquired. These appendages are of subordinate importance anyway, and in some manner unknown have escaped registration; yet it has seemed proper to display them in the illustrations, because (1) the escutcheons would look barren and incomplete without them, and (2) because the titled Hubbards of Europe are now using them, and have been, for over 200 years at the least.

His eyen twinkeled in his hed aright, as don the sterres in a frosty night this worthy limitour was cleped Huberd—"The Friar," in Canterbury Tales.

The ensuing narrations have been chiefly furnished to the compiler by a "professional searcher," who was highly recommended to him by the British Museum, and should be fairly accurate in details so far as the transcription of records goes.

After the death of King HUBBA by Odun in 878 HUBBA'S descendants populated Eastern and Southeastern England from the river Humber down to the English Channel, comprising mainly Lin colnshire, Rutland, Cambridge, Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex. and Kent. They engaged principally in agriculture, horticulture and floriculture, and their doings to the historical ferret remain hidden up to about the thirteenth century.

JOHN HUBBARD was born about 1235, and lived in Tye, Norfolk. (The name is also spelled Hoberd, Huberd, and Hobart). No record of his death.

THOMAS HUBBARD (name also spelled Hoberd and Hobart), a descendant and heir of John, was born between 1400 and 1425, and lived at Leyham, Norfolk. No record of his death. He left sons

IAMES and WILLIAM.

Sir JAMES HUBBARD (name also spelled Hoberd and Hobart), was the youngest son of Thomas Hubbard (Hoberd or Hobart) of Leyham, Norfolk, and was born about 1425. He represented in Parliament in 1467 and 1478 Ipswich, Norfolk, after having become a member of the bar at Lincoln's Inn during the time of King Henry VII. He was one of the Governors of this famed law school from 1479 to 1503. November 1, 1486, he was created Attorney-General of England by King Henry VII, and soon thereafter sworn of the privy council. He rendered good service to his sovereign during the coast fisheries difficulty in November of 1487, and was knighted February 18, 1502–3. His first wife was a sister of John Lyhert, and he was the first Hubbard to settle in Norfolk. His third wife was Margeret, daughter of Peter Naunton, Letheringham, Suffolk. Sir JAMES died according to some authorities in 1507 and was buried in Norwich Cathedral. Other authorities claim he was alive in 1511, and upon death was buried at Loddon, Norfolk, where his wife Margaret was buried in 1484 and where he founded a church. Sir JAMES bought and resided at Hales Hall, and by his wife Margaret had a son, Sir Walter, and perhaps other children.

WILLIAM HUBBARD, son of Thomas of Leyham and brother to Sir James, was born about 1420. He left a son MILES and probably other children. No record of his death.

MILES * HOBART, a descendant of William, was born about 1550, and resided at Plumstead, Norfolk, and also in London. He married Eleanor Blaverhasset, daughter of John, and left sons Sir Miles, John and Thomas.

Sir WALTER HOBART, eldest son of Sir James, was born about 1480 at Hales Hall, Norfolk, and married Anne Haydon, daughter of Henry Haydon. At her death he married Ann Ratcliffe, daughter of John Ratcliffe, Lord Fitz Walter, of Morley, Norfolk. Sir WALTER was high Sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk in 1535-36.

THOMAS HOBART, son of Sir Miles, married Audrey Hare, daughter of William Hare, of Beeston, Norfolk, and left a son Henry.

JOHN HOBART, son of Sir Miles, married Anne Tilney, daughter of Philip, of Wayte, Norfolk.

Sir MILES HOBART, son of Sir Miles and Elizabeth, his third wife, was born April 14, 1595, at Plumstead, Norfolk, and was knighted at Salisbury, August 8, 1623, and elected Member of Parliament in 1627 from Great Marlow, Buckinghamshire. He became a famous politician, and March 2, 1628-9, during an exciting and memorable debate in Parliament he locked the door to prevent some timid members from leaving and forcibly held the Speaker in his chair until a favorite measure of his could be passed. For this with Sirs Peter Heymen, Selden, Coriton, Long and Strode he was imprisoned in the "Kings Bench" and from there taken to the Tower and kept until 1631. He married Susan Peyton, daughter of John, Baronet, of Isleham, Cambridge, and had children Sir John and Alice. June 29, 1632, he was killed by the overturning of his coach, and was buried at Great Marlow, July 4, 1634. January 18, 1646-7, Parliament voted £5,000 to erect a monument to his memory as a testimonial to his virtues in opposing illegal and harmful measures while a member of Parliament.

Sir HENRY HOBART, son of Thomas of Plumstead, was born probably before 1550. He became a member of Lincoln's Inn August 10,

^{*}The name now is chronicled "Hobart," and will be so treated. The parish registers, however, of Norwich, continued to carry many of these branches as "Hubbards," as does the register at Wymoudham, Norfolk, which has recorded there "Thomas Hubbard" and "Caleb Hubbard," the son and grandson respectively, of Edmund Hobart, of Hingham, the American emigrant.

1575, called to the bar June 24, 1584, Governor of the Inn in 1591, Member of Parliament for St. Ives, Cornwall, in 1588-9, and for Yarmouth, Suffolk, in 1597-1601, and Norwich, Suffolk, from 1604 to 1610. July 4, 1606, he became his Majesty's Attorney-General, barring Lord Bacon's way to promotion for seven years, much to Bacon's great annoyance. He was Chancellor to Henry, Prince of Wales, and created a Baronet in May, 1611. November 26, 1613, he was constituted Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and known as a most learned, prudent, grave, and religious Judge. In 1617 he was Chancellor and Keeper of the Great Seal of Charles, Prince of Wales. He married April 22, 1590, Dorothy Bell, daughter of Robert, of Beaupré Hall, Norfolk, Lord Chief Baron of the exchequer under Queen Elizabeth. By her he had twelve sons and four daughters, of which nine of the sons died young, leaving Sir John, Baronet (who succeeded his father), and Henry, the daughters being Dorothy, Mary, Elizabeth, and Francis. He died December 26, 1625, and was buried in Christ Church, Norwich. Norfolk. He was "a great loss to the public weal."

Sir JOHN HOBART, eldest son of Sir Henry and Dorothy (Bell) Hobart, was born April 19, 1593, at Norwich: knighted at ten years of age, and made a Baronet at 32. He lived at Blickling, Norfolk, and also acquired Plumstead from his cousin Sir Thomas. He represented Corf-Castle, Dorsetshire, in 1603: also Lestwithiel, Cornwall, and Thetford in 1625: also the county of Norfolk in 1641. He married Lady Philippa Sidney, fourth daughter of Sir Robert, Earl of Leicester. She was born in 1504, and was reputed to have been a Maid of Honor to Anne of Denmark, Queen to James I. She died in September, 1620, leaving a daughter, Dorothy. After her death, Sir John married Lady Francis Edgerton, eldest of the eight daughters of the Earl of Bridgewater, Sir John Edgerton. She was born in 1603, and died in 1664, leaving one daughter. Lady Francis was a noble and pious woman of beautiful character, one whom her chaplain, Dr. Collinges, loved to describe as possessing nearly every virtue "and of such a prayerful disposition as to not consider that kneeling spoiled silk stockings." Sir IOHN died in 1647, and his title and estate descended to his nephew, Sir John.

HENRY HOBART, youngest son of Sir Henry and Dorothy (Bell) Hobart was born November 17, 1619. Nothing further of him known. EDMOND HUBBARD (or Hobart) was born in 1614 (parents not ascertained) and lived at Holt, Norfolk. He was an eminent rovalist, and Cromwell's soldiers drove him from his paternal estate. A courrier named Ant. N. Richards kept him concealed in an outhouse for three days, and then he escaped to London and found employment in a shoemaker's shop in Turnstile, Holborn, the shoemaker being apprised of his unfortunate condition and his identity. Once he was nearly detected by the wife of one of Cromwell's soldiers, to whom he had been sent to fit with a pair of shoes. She noticed his very white hands, and archly asked him if he were not some cavalier rogue in disguise, saying such hands had never handled shoemaker's wax. He confessed to being an idle lazy fellow and unable to learn the trade, so his master kept him only to deliver orders and fit shoes; thus her suspicions were allayed. After his peril had passed he returned to Holt, taking his master with him and maintaining him while he lived. Edmond died in 1666 aged 52.

WILLIAM HUBBARD (or Hobart), the younger brother of Edmond, and supposed to be a descendent of Sir Henry, was born about 1620, and was also an extreme royalist. He was a leader in an insurrectionary plot to restore Charles I., the wandering exile, to the throne again. He was apprehended in the midst of these designs and beheaded at the market cross, Norwich, Norfolk.

EDWARD HUBBARD, of Canterbury, Kent, (ancestral line undiscovered) was born in 1694, and became Prebend of Canterbury. He died there in 1741.

Sir JOHN HOBART, who succeeded his uncle Sir John, was Knight of the Shire for the County of Norfolk in the last three Parliaments called by Charles II. He married Mary Hampden, daughter of John Hampden, the Patriot, of Hampden, Bucks County, who was the widow of a Colonel Hammond, of the British Army. They left three sons, Henry, John and Thomas, and two daughters, Henrietta and another.

THOMAS HOBART, son of Sir John and Mary (Hampden) Hobart, studied law at Lincoln's Inn; called to the Bar there, and died unmarried.

JOHN HOBART, second son of Sir John and Mary (Hampden) Hobart, became a Captain and Governor of Pendennis Castle, and a Brigadier in the British Army. He died in 1734 and was buried at Blickling.

Sir HENRY HOBART, eldest son of Sir John and Mary (Hampden) Hobart, was a Member of Parliament from Norfolk, also a soldier. He was one of the Burgesses for Lynn-Regis in the Parliament that met at Oxford, and in that Parliament showed himself for revolution and declared the throne vacant. He was Equerry, or Gentleman of the Horse, to King William, and attended him at the battle of the Boyne in Ireland, July 1, 1690, when William fought his father-in-law, James I. In 1698 he was put up again for re-election from Norfolk, but was defeated. In the excitement of the campaign he resented some words spoken to him by Oliver LeNeve, Esq., and a challenge and duel was the result, in which Sir HENRY passed his sword through LeNeve's arm, and he in turn ran his sword into Sir HENRY'S stomach, of which mortal wound he died August 21, 1608, and was buried at Thetford, Norfolk, while LeNeve was tried at Norwich March 16, 1600, and found guilty of manslaughter. Sir HENRY married the daughter of Joseph Maynard, Esq. She died August 22, 1701, leaving an only son, Sir John, and three daughters, one of whom married the Earl of Suffolk and another one Major-General Churchill.

Sir JOHN HOBART, only son of Sir Henry and Lady (Maynard) Hobart, was born in 1692, and educated at Clare Hall, Cambridge. He represented St. Ives, Cornwall, in Parliament, in 1715, 1722 to 1727, and also Beer Alston in Devonshire in 1722 and Norfolk County in 1728. June 17, 1725, he was created Knight of the Bath, and May 2, 1728, he was made Baron Hobart, of Blickling, by George II., and sworn of the Privy Council January 3, 1744-5. September 5, 1746, he was created the first Earl of Buckinghamshire. Henrietta, his sister, who married a Howard, was after Countess of Suffolk, and in great favor with George II., and assisted very materially in her brother's advancement. Sir JOHN married Judith Brittiffe, daughter of Robert Brittiffe, of Baconsthorpe, Norfolk, and by her had three sons and five daughters, all dying voung except John and Dorothy. His wife Judith died February 7, 1727, and then Sir JOHN married, February 10, 1728, Elizabeth Bristow, daughter of Robert. By her he had two sons, George and Henry. She died March 10, 1799, and the Earl died in London September 22, 1756.

JOHN HOBART, second Earl of Buckinghamshire, was born August 17, 1723, of Sir John and Judith (Brittiffe) Hobart, educated at Westminster School, and matriculated at Christ's College, Cambridge. He was Member Parliament for Norwich, also St. Ives about 1747: made Comptroller of the Household of the King, January 15, 1756, and Privy Councillor January 27, 1756. He took his seat in the House of Lords December 14, 1756, as the second Earl of Buckinghamshire. He was made Ambassador and Minister Plenipotentiary to Russia, July 17, 1762, and there obtained a great insight into the political and social intrigues of the Court of Catherine II. He became Viceroy of Ireland December 18, 1776. The Earl married July 14, 1761, Mary Anne Drury, daughter of Sir Thomas, Baronet, of Overstone, Northamptonshire, and by her had three daughters: Harriet (born April 7, 1762), Caroline (born February 24, 1767), and Sophia (born in 1768). She died September 30, 1769, and September 24, 1770, he married Caroline Connolly, daughter of William Connolly, Esq., of Stratton Hall, Staffordshire. By her he had three sons who died in infancy and one daughter, EMILY ANNE, (born February 20, 1772, and who married June 9, 1794, Hon. Robert Stewart, Marquis of Londonderry, and died February 12, 1829). The Earl's wife, Caroline, died January 26, 1817, and he died September 3, 1793, aged 70, and was succeeded by his half brother George.

HENRY HOBART, second son of Sir John and Elizabeth (Bristow) Hobart, was born about 1733, and married July 22, 1761, Anna Margaret Bristow, daughter of John Bristow, Esq., of Quiddenham, Norfolk. He had by her two daughters: Anna Catherine (born in 1762), and Maria Anne (born in 1763).

GEORGE HOBART, eldest son of Sir John and Elizabeth (Bristow) Hobart, third Earl of Buckinghamshire, was born about 1732, and represented St. Ives, Cornwall, in 1761 and in 1768, and also Beer Alston, Devonshire, in 1774, in Parliament. He went to St. Petersburg with his half brother, Sir John, in 1762, as Secretary of the Embassy. He became the third Earl of Buckinghamshire August 3, 1793. In 1797 he was Colonel of the Lincolnshire Militia, and in 1799 was a Colonel in the Regular Army. He married May 22, 1757, Albinia, daughter of Lord Vere Bertie, granddaughter of Robert Vere Bertie, the first Duke of Lancaster. She died March 11, 1816, and he died November 14, 1804, at Nocton, in Lincolnshire, where he was buried, leaving sons Robert, George Vere, Charles and Henry Lewis, and four daughters.

ROBERT HOBART, eldest son of George and Albinia (Bertie) Hobart, was born May 6, 1760, educated at Westminster School, entered the English Army and served in the American Revolution. He was Member Parliament for Ireland and England. In the English House of Commons he spoke for the abolition of slavery, and was an anti-Catholic. though popular with his political opponents. He was sworn of the Privy Council May 1, 1793, and in October 1793, he became Governor of Madras, India. In 1798 he returned to England after a successful administration and was pensioned annually at £1,500. He succeeded his father to the peerage in November, 1804, and married January 4, 1792, Magaretta, daughter of Edmund Bourke, Esq., of Urrey, Ireland, and widow of Thomas Adderly, Esq., of Innishannon, County Cork, Ireland. She bore him one daughter (SARAH ALBINIA LOUISA) and died in 1796. He then married June 1, 1799, Eleanor Agnes, daughter of William Eden, the first Lord Auckland. They left no issue. The Earl died February 4, 1816, being thrown from his horse in St. James' Park. London, and was succeeded by his nephew, George Robert, the fifth Earl of Buckinghamshire.

GEORGE VERE HOBART, second son of George and Albinia (Vere) Hobart, was born in 1761, and became Governor of Grenada. He married Jane, daughter of Horace Cateneo, and had by her George Robert, Charles (died in 1813), Augustus Edward, Albinia Jane and HARRIET. After his first wife's death he married Janet, daughter of Colonel Alexander McLean, and had by her Catherine Louisa, who married July 31, 1832, Donald Cameron, of Lochiel, Inverness, Scotland. GEORGE VERE HOBART died in 1802.

CHARLES HOBART, the third son of George, the third Earl, and Albinia (Bertie) Hobart, was born in February, 1766, and entered the Royal Navy, where he was killed while in action with the Comte de Grasse, in 1782.

HENRY LEWIS HOBART, youngest son of George and Albinia (Bertie) Hobart, was born about 1768, and studied theology. He took holy orders and became Dean of Windsor in 1816, and also Registrar of the Order of the Garter. He married October 5, 1824, Charlotte Selina Moore, daughter of Robert Moore, Esq., of Hampton Court Palace. The Dean died May 8, 1846, leaving eight children, viz.: ROBERT HENRY, GEORGE BERTIE, BENJAMIN, LOUISA CHARLOTTE, MARIA ADE-LAIDE, ALBINIA MARY, SOPHIA ANN and ELEANÓR.

GEORGE ROBERT HOBART, the fifth Earl of Buckinghamshire, and son of George Vere and Jane (Cateneo) Hobart, was born May 1, 1789. He married, May 3, 1819, Anna Glover, daughter of Sir Arthur Pigot. He died in February, 1849, leaving no issue.

AUGUSTUS EDWARD HOBART, the third son of George Vere and Jane (Cateneo) Hobart, was born about 1793, and succeeded his brother, George Robert, becoming the sixth Earl of Buckinghamshire. He married September 12, 1816, Mary, daughter of John Williams, Serjeant-at-Law. His wife died in 1825, leaving Vere Henry (born December 8, 1818, at Welbourn, Lincolnshire; married August 4, 1853, Mary Catharine, daughter of Right Rev. Thomas Carr, Bishop of Bombay. VERE HENRY was Director of the Ottoman Bank, India, and Governor of Madras in 1872. He died there of typhoid fever April 27, 1875), FREDERICK JOHN (born March 6, 1821, married Catherine Annesley, youngest daughter of Bishop Thomas Carr), Augustus Charles (born April 1, 1822, married in 1848, Mary Anne, daughter of Colquohoun Grant), Charles Edward (born January 26, 1825, married December, 1853, Catharine, daughter of Dr. A. Cooke; she died in 1859), Albinia Francis (born 1825 (?); married May 28, 1854, Henry Arlington Pye), GEORGIANA MARY (born in 182(?). After the death of his first wife, Earl AUGUSTUS then married August 15, 1826, Maria Isabella, eldest daughter of Rev. Godfrey Egremont, and by her had George Augustus (born in 1827; married June 9, 1857, Jane, daughter of Sir John W. Audry, of Natton House, Wilts County), WILLIAM ARTHUR (born in 1828, married June 1, 1857, Marian, daughter of Richard K. Dawson, of Frickley Hall, Yorkshire), Horace Miles (born in 1829), Maria Catharine, Charlotte Augusta, Louisa Selina, and Eleanor Agnes. His Lordship was Prebendary of Wolverhampton.

AUGUSTUS CHARLES HOBART, son of Augustus Edward and Mary (Williams) Hobart, was born April 1, 1822, at Walton-on-the-Wolds, Leicestershire, Eng., and was known as Hobart-Hampden and also as Hobart Pasha. He was in the English Navy and also in the employ of the Turkish Sultan in the Cretan Rebellion. He later became an English Vice-Admiral. He married Mary Anne Grant, daughter of Dr. Colquohoun Grant. She died May 13 (April 6 (?), 1877, and he married Edith Kathleen Hore (formerly a nun), daughter of Herbert Francis Hore, of Pole Hore, Wexford. He published a sensational volume called "Sketches," which included some naval experience while he was in the employ of the Confederate Service, C. S. A., as a blockade runner. He died in 1886.

Right Hon, JOHN GELLIBRAND HUBBARD,* eldest son of John of Stratford Grove, Essex (who died in 1847) and Marianna (Morgan) Hubbard (who died in 1851), the daughter of John Morgan, of Bramfield Place, Hertfordshire, was born Mch 21, 1805, and died at Addington Manor, Aug 28, 1889, and was there buried in the parish churchvard. He was educated at Bordeaux, France; was a well-known Russia merchant, as was his father, and represented the shire of Buckingham from 1859 to 1868 in the House of Commons, where he was recognized as a rare authority upon finance, and for many years was one of the Directors of the Bank of England, of which he afterward became Governor-General. From 1874 to 1887 he represented the City of London in Parliament. He was also Chairman of the Public Works Loan Commission and Deputy Lieutenant for Bucks and London. He built and endowed St. Albans Church, Holborn, which was consecrated Feb 26, 1863. July 22, 1887, he was raised to the Peerage and made Lord Addington, of Addington Manor, Surrey. The Baron married May 19, 1837, the Honorable Maria Margaret Napier (b Mch 18, 1817) now Dowager Lady Addington, eldest daughter of William John, the eighth Lord Napier, and Eliza Cochrane-Johnstone. ^{*} The compiler has enjoyed the privilege of reading many of his letters that have been written to Hubbards in this country. Touching quite fully, as they generally did, upon the old country history of Hubbards, their origin, inherited traits, occupations, etc., they made pleasant and profitable reading, and induced frequent perusals. The Baron was always glad to respond promptly and fully to all enquiries upon subjects concerning the Hubbard race. He was an Honorary Member of the New England Society, instituted in New York City in 1805. His European business plants were numerous and of immense proportions, embracing in part print works at St. Petersburg, a bank at Moscow, and lumber interests in Finland. THE SUFFOLK ENGRAVING CO

FAIRBANKS HOUSE, DEDHAM, MASE

OLDEST HOMESTEAD IN NEW ENGLAND

Gonathan and Gruce Fairbanks came from Sowerby, Yorkshire, Eng., and built this homestead in 1636, at Dedham, Mass. Their daughter Susan married Oct. 12, 1647, Ensign Rabh Day. Anthony and Ann Lubbard settled in Dedham before 1638.)

Wherever virtue resists temptation, wherever men meet death for religion's sake, wherever the gilded baseness of the world stands abashed before conscientious principle, there will be the spirit of the Puritans—Edwin Percy Whipple.

ROBERT HUBBARD was "marryed" to Margaret Allen the second day of June, 1654, by William Hibbins according to the early records of Boston. Children—Daniel (b May 9, 1655), and John (b May 18, 1656). No further traces of this ROBERT HUBBARD or his children have yet come to light. [Douglas Hubbard records report that "he went to Dover, N. H., and his descendants settled in Maine."]

HUGH HUBBARD was born in Derbyshire, England, about 1640, and came over and settled in New London, Ct., in 1670. March 18, 1673, he married Jane, daughter of Cary and Elizabeth (Masters) Latham (widow of Edmund Lockwood) of (1) Cambridge, Mass., (2) New London, Ct. In 1685 he died and his widow married John Williams. She died May 3, 1739, aged 91. Children (born in New London)—Mary (b Nov 17, 1674), Lydia (b Feb 7, 1676), Margaret, Jane, Ann, and a son (who died in infancy, leaving none to progenerate the male line) were born later at unknown dates.

ANTHONY HUBBARD was born in England (probably after 1620), and with his sister Ann came over and settled in Dedham, Mass., prior to 1638. April 14, 1648, he married Sarah, daughter of Michael Bacon, (reputed to have come from Ireland) one of Dedham's original founders, which began its official existence September 10, 1636. His wife died in 1652, and January 5, 1652–3, he married Jane Ely, possibly a relative of Nathaniel and Martha Ely of (1) Cambridge, Mass., (2) Hartford, Ct. He acquired no prominence and but little property. His estate amounted February 20, 1656–7 to but £9 and 10s. Children, born in Dedham, (by Sarah)—John (b Apl 14, 1649), and Abraham (b Mch 11, 1650, d Mch 18, 1650).

ANN HUBBARD was born in England (probably before 1620), and came over with her brother Anthony and settled in Dedham, Mass. July 8, 1638, she married William Barstow (son of John of Cambridge) who, with his brother George, came to New England in 1636 on the ship Truelove from London and were of the original founders of the "Plantacion of Dedham." This marriage was the third one celebrated after the founding of the town. She joined the church in June, 1639. The "Barstows" reached some prominence during the early colonial period. This family afterward removed to Scituate, R. I., where William Barstow died January 1, 1669. ANN (HUBBARD) BARSTOW then married John Prince, of Hull. Children (born in Dedham)—Joseph (b June 6, 1639), Mary (b Dec 28, 1641), Patience (b Dec 3, 1643): (born in Scituate)—Sarah, Daughter, Deborah (b Aug, 1650), William (b Sep, 1652), and Martha (b 1655).

WILLIAM HUBBARD was an inhabitant of Saugus (Lynn), Mass., Mch 28, 1637. Thomas Hubbard was also an inhabitant there between 1637 and 1640; (also James Hubbard, who went to Long Island. See Gravesend, Long Island, Hubbards). WILLIAM and Thomas stopped awhile in Wethersfield, Ct., and then Thomas probably went to Hartford (see elsewhere under Early Settlers), while of WILLIAM but little has been learned. The Connecticut colonial records show, however, that he was plaintiff in a suit against Thomas Marshfield June 15, 1643; damages £12. In Hartford is a church record showing that a daughter, Sarah, was born to him July 10, 1647. Oct 11, 1659, it is recorded that he testified regarding "a colt." This lawsuit, in which he was concerned, took place within the jurisdiction of New Haven, so he had in all probability removed from Hartford before this date. These meager facts are all that have yet been discovered of him.

THOMAS HUBBARD was born in England in (?) 1625, and (?) sailed with William Hubbard for New England April 13, 1635, in the ship Elizabeth and Ann, Roger Cooper, master. In 1647 * he appears to have been in Hartford, according to the following extract from the Colonial Records: "September 2, 1547—† Tho: Hubbert for refusing to †Royal K. Hinman, historian, says (erroneously) that "THOMAS HUBBARD was licensed to trade for beaver in 1633" in Weathersfield. George Hubbard of Middletown was probably meant.

^{*}It is quite probable that he was related to the Hubbards who settled in Cambridge, Mass. James Hubbard, of Watertown, had a son Thomas, as also had James of Cambridge. Yet he could hardly have been the son of either of these James', for they were apparently too young to be settling away from home. Milton, in his Church Records of Cambridge, mentions as having left there "THOMAS HUBBARD—Joined to the church at Weathersfield." [No date]. So whether he was related to those Hubbards there or not, there is but little doubt that he lived awhile in Cambridge before arriving in Connecticut. [Douglas Hubbard records state that this Thomas was born in 1620 and that he was the son of James and Sarah (Ives) Hubbard of Watertown. The scanty and fragmentary records about him prevent conviction.]

watch is fyned Xs." From Hartford he went to Middletown, and was made a freeman there May 21, 1657. Lands were conveyed to him January 16, 1666, and March 22, 1670, his estate was valued at £61 in the inventory made of the property of all householders and proprietors. He married Mary Curtis, of Middletown, died in 1671, and was buried in the Riverside Cemetery. His widow afterward in Oct, 1674, married Deacon John Hall, Jr., an early settler of Middletown, recorder, b 1619 in England, d Jan 22, 1694, in Middletown, son of John and Anna (Wilcox) Hall who both came to New England in 1633. His epitaph shines in rhyme with his various virtues, viz.:

"Here lyes our Deacon Hall, who studied peace with all,
Was upright in his life, void of malignant strife, gone to his Rest, left us in sorrow, doubtless, his good works will him follow."

Children (born in Middletown)—Mary (b Jan 3, 1656), Thomas (b Aug 6, 1661), Ebenezer (b Aug 2, 1664, d Apl 29, 1743, in Middletown; constable 1699–1700, in May 5, 1690, Mary Warner, b 1665, d in Aug, 1739, no children; his will dated Jan 23, 1742, leaves property to Ebenezer Gage and wife, "loving cousin Daniel Stow, and Azuba, his wife, also 40 shillings to the Church of Christ, Rev. William Russell, pastor," both tombstones standing—1894), John (b Jan 1, 1666, d in Middletown Apl 23, 1676), and George (b Apl 2, 1669–70, d in Middletown Feb 19, 1688–9, probably unm).

ELIZABETH HUBBARD (supposed to have been the consort of a son of James and Naomi (Cocke) Hubbard, of Mendlesham, Suffolk, England) came over with her brother-in-law Samuel, and his (?) brother Benjamin, and wife Alice (Ward), in October, 1633, and settled upon Charlestown Neck. She probably at that time was a widow, and died in January, 1643-4, at Boston, Mass., leaving an estate worth £239 and 18s. Her will, probated June 7, 1644, is, substantially, as follows:

"The said Elisabeth Hobert being not well, & yet being in perfect sence and vnderstanding, do make this as my last will & testament: that my daughter Hannah Hobert & my sonne Benjamin Hobert, I do make them my whole executors joyntly, together of all those goods weh are mine, with this provisor: my executors to pay three score & ten pounds & ten shillings to Hannah Carrington as soone as the goods can be sould. also to pay to the said Stocdell Carrington foure pounds & some odde money: also to my sonne Richard Hobert twelve pence. Also to dau Hanner Hobert & to sonne Benjamin Hobert & to daughter Sarah Hobert & to daughter Rachell Hobert equal portions of what is left when all cost of chardges is paid. Youngest daughter Rachell to have three pounds more than the rest of my three children—that is to say, Hannah, Benjamin & Sarah. The executors to have a tender care of their youngest sister Rachell. Robert Hull & Thomas Clarke desired to be overseers of will, to see it fulfilled as neere as they can.

"ELISABETH HOBBERT."

"Witnes: Robert Hull, Thomas Clarke. Proved 4° 7° M° 1644, before me, Samuell Symonds, & me, Increase Nowell."

Children (born in England presumably)—Hannah, Benjamin, Sarah, Richard, Rachell.

BENJAMIN HUBBARD, son of (?) James and Naomi (Cocke) Hubbard of Mendlesham, Suffolk, England, was born in 1608, and with his wife Alice (Ward) Hubbard came to Boston in October, 1633, and settled upon Charlestown Neck. There is reason to believe that he was also accompanied by his brother Samuel and sister-in-law Elizabeth and her children, and that they all sailed from Gravesend, Eng., in August, 1633, on the ship James, Grant, master. He was admitted to the church November 9, 1633, with his wife Alice, and made freeman September 3, 1634. Of a dozen householders in Charlestown at that time he was one of them, and dignified with the title of respect of "Mr.," then only given to important personages in the colony, the less distinguished form of address being "goodman," or "yeoman." He was a conservative friend of the celebrated John Wheelwright, the religious agitator, who was afterward banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony (with the equally celebrated Ann Hutchinson) and located in Wells, Me. It is on record that he was clerk of the writs of Charlestown in 1641 and was considerable of a scholar and navigator. He owned land in Charlestown in 1637, viz: 10 acres on the Mystic side, a house and two lots southwest of Mill Hill, 51 acres at Waterfield, 1 acre at Eastfield, and land at Seekonk.

December 22, 1644, he sailed for England, and landed at Deal, in Kent, where he met his elder brother Thomas. He afterward went to see his cousin, Joseph Hubbard, who lived in Ipswich, Suffolk. From London he wrote to New England to Governor Winthrop in 1645 about his "invention concerning longitude." In 1652 he was a minister in Cobdock, Suffolk. March 8, 1654, he was living in Ardleigh, between Dedham and Colchester, Essex. During 1645, after his wife Alice had sold their house and one acre at Eastfield to John Green, she and their five children rejoined him in England.

English records state that he died Oct 28, 1660, leaving widow Alice and five children. Before July, 1663, these five children (?) had returned to New England. Children (born in Charlestown, Mass)—Benjamin (b Mch 24, 1634, may have gone to Jamaica, L. J., in 1659), Ichabod (b Oct 3, 1635, d in July, 1636), Elizabeth (b June 2, 1636, and as late as July 6, 1668, was unm), Thomas (b May 31, 1639), Hannah (b Dec 16, 1641, JAMES HUBBARD, (?) son of James and Naomi (Cocke) Hubbard,* was born in 1609 in Suffolk County (probably Mendlesham), England. He may have been the James who sailed from London May 21, 1635, on the barque Mathew, Richard Goodladd, master, with his wife Sarah (Ives) Hubbard, nephew (?) Richard, children Sarah, James, and perhaps others. He settled in Watertown, Mass., and died there in January, 1639. (His widow married William Hamlet afterward.) Children—James, Sarah, Thomas, and others, names unknown (see following).

IAMES, the eldest (supposed) son, was born in England in 1631, and died in Cambridge, Mass., August 28, 1693. After his father's death het removed to Cambridge, Mass., and Sep 29, 1659, married Sarah Winship. June 17, 1662, she bore him a daughter, SARAH (m Nicholas Bowes of Cambridge, Mass., June 26, 1684, and d Jan 26, 1688. Bowes was b in 1656 and d in Boston in 1721, after being m to (1) Sarah Hubbard (2), Dorcas Champney, and (3) Martha Remington). She then bore him Oct 20, 1665, Mary (m Jason Russel May 27, 1684, and had Hubbard Russel, b 1685, d June 4, 1726, who m and had children), and died in childbed Oct 22, 1665. JAMES was made freeman May 23, 1666, and was one of Cambridge's tythingmen in 1679; he also served in the King Philip Indian War in Capt. Nathaniel Davenport's Company; and Jan 8, 1688, he married Hannah, daughter of Miles Ives, of Watertown, Mass., who after his death became his executor and residuary legatee. She died childless, but was a faithful mother to his stepchildren. The inscription upon her monument in the parish church yard at Cambridge adjoining Harvard University grounds reads:

Here lyes buried Hannah Hubert, the loving wife of James Hubert, a tender and loving mother to his children;
eareful of their souls and bodies,
loving and faithful, diligent and prudent, who departed this life in sweet peace the 24th day of November, 1690.

† His own and wife's monument are yet standing in the old Cambridge parish churchyard. This church was established in 1636. The monuments are of thick state and have withstood time's elements remarkably well, the inscriptions being quite legible.

^{*}James and Naomi (Cocke) Hubbard, of Mendelsham, Suffolk, England, were the parents of ten children. Benjamin, James, Rachel, and Samuel came to America, but probably none of the others. Thomas, the eldest son, was born in 1604, and with his wife Esther lived in Freeman Lane, near Horsley, down in Southwark, London. Sarah, the eldest daughter, married John Jackson, and lived in Yarmouth, Norfolk. She was born in 1593, and had a son Robert, who served four years under Oliver Cromwell. Rachel married John Brandish, of Ipswich, Suffolk, England, and came to New England in 1633. They lived in Salem, Mass., Wethersfield, and Fairfield, Ct., and had children Mary (b in Ipswich, Eng., in 1628, and m Francis Purdy, of Fairfield, Ct.), John (b in Salem, Mass., in 1633, and lived awhile in Fairfield and then removed to Flushing, New Netherlands), Bethia (b in Wethersfield, Ct., in 1637, m Timothy Knapp, of Greenwich, near Stamford, Ct.), and a posthumous son (b in 1639 in Wethersfield). Rachel (Hubbard) Brandish, after the death of her husband, married Anthony Wilson, of Fairfield, Ct. The names of the other four children of James are unknown.

SARAH was born in England, and married at Billerica, Oct 13, 1657, Samuel Champney, of Cambridge, Mass. He was a representative from there in 1686, 1689 and 1692. Children—Samuel, Sarah, Mary, Esther,

SAMUEL, JOSEPH, RICHARD and DANIEL.

THOMAS was born in Watertown, Mass., August 10, 1638. Nothing positively known of him. According to Milton (Church Records of Cambridge, Mass.) he went to Wethersfield, Ct. Milton says: "James Hubbard, Sarah Hubbard, now Champney, admitted into fellowship of the church; THOMAS HUBBARD now joined to the Church of Wethersfield."

SAMUEL HUBBARD, youngest son of James and Naomi (Cocke) Hubbard, was born in Mendlesham (a market town about eighty miles northeast of London), Suffolk County, in 1610. He arrived in Salem, Mass., in October, 1633, and probably came in the ship James, Grant, master, which left Gravesend, England, late in August, 1633, and arrived in Massachusetts Bay October 10, 1633. He says in his Diary,* "I was born of good parents. My Mother brought me up in the fear of the Lord, in Mendlesham, in catechiseing me and hearing choice ministers," &c. March 4, 1634-5, he was admitted a freeman, and shortly moved to Watertown, Mass., where he joined the church "by giving account of my faith." This same year he went to Dorchester (Windsor), Ct., with the overland migrators. He was married there by Mr. [Roger?] Ludlow to Tacy Cooper, who was born in England in 1608 and came to Dorchester, Mass., June 9, 1634, and to Dorchester (Windsor), Ct., in 1635. She had brothers Robert, of Yarmouth, Norfolk, and John of London, Eng. Robert returned to England from America in 1644. SAMUEL HUBBARD went to Wethersfield, Ct., in 1637, and May 10, 1639, removed to Springfield, Mass., which he left for Fairfield, Ct., in 1647, though staying there but a short time on account of church disagreements. SAMUEL was now with his wife imbibing freely and preaching ardently the doctrines of Anabaptism. He says in his diary: "God having enlightened both (but mostly my wife) into his holy ordinance of baptising only of visible believers, and being very zealous for it, she was mostly struck at, and answered two terms publicly, where I was said to be as bad as she, and sore threatened with imprisonment to Hartford jail, if not to renounce it or to remove: that scripture came into our minds: "If they persecute you in one place flee to another;" and so we did 2 day of October, 1648. We went for Rhode Island and ^{*}Copious notes were made from this diary by Dr. Isaac Backus, a Baptist historian of about 1777. These notes are now possessed by Ray Greene Huling, of New Bedford, Mass., though the original diary and other valuable manuscripts of Samuel Hubbard disappeared about 1852. There are living descendants of this Samuel Hubbard through Bethiah Hubbard and Joseph Clarke of various names, but rome of the name of Hubbard.

arrived there the 12 day. I and my wife upon our manifestation of our faith were baptised by brother Joseph Clarke, 3 day of November, 1618."

SAMUEL HUBBARD spent the remainder of his life in and about Newport, or "Mayford," as he termed it. He was a zealous Baptist and public religous disputant. For twenty-three years he belonged to the First Baptist Church of Newport, which sent him August 7, 1651, to Boston "to visit the bretherin who was imprisoned in Boston jayl for witnessing the truth of baptising believers only, viz: Brothers John Clarke, Obadiah Holmes, and John Crandall." In 1657 he went with Holmes on a preaching tour on Long Island. In 1664 he was appointed General Solicitor of the Colony. April 7, 1668, he went to Boston with Joseph Torrey and William Hiscox "to publicly dispute with those baptised there." December 23, 1671, with his wife, one daughter, and four other persons he formed the first Seventh Day Baptist Church in America. In July, 1668, he wrote a letter to his cousin John Smith, of London, detailing his worldly possessions "through God's great mercy." In 1675 in his diary he refers to a "testament of my grandfather Cocke's, printed in 1540, which he [Cocke] hid in his bed straw lest it should be found and burned in Queen Mary's days." In 1676 he corresponded with Dr. Edward Stennett, Pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist Church in Bell Lane, London. John Thornton and Roger Williams of Rhode Island, and Governor Leete of Connecticut were his friends. He died between 1688 and 1692, and his wife after 1697, but no traces of their burial places have been found. Children-Naomi (b Nov 18, 1637, at Wethersfield, Ct, d Nov 28, 1637), NAOMI (b Oct 19, 1638, at Wethersfield, Ct, d in Springfield, Mass, May 5, 1643), Ruth (b Jan 11, 1640, in Springfield, Mass, d in Westerly, R. I., in 1691, m Robert Burdick of "Musquamicot," or Westerly, R. I., who was made freeman May 22, 1655, d in 1692, and had Robert, Son, Hubbard, Thomas, Naomi, Ruth, Benjamin, Samuel, Tacy and Deborah), RACHEL (b Mch 10, 1642, in Springfield, Mass, m Nov 3, 1658, Andrew Langworthy, who came to Newport, R. I., in 1656, and had Samuel and Fames), Samuel (b in Springfield, Mass., Mch 25, 1644, dy), Bethiah (b in Springfield Dec 19, 1646, d at Westerly, R. I., Apl 17, 1707, m Joseph Clarke Jr, formerly of Westhorpe, Suffolk, Eng., b there Apl 2, 1643, d Jan 11, 1727, and had Judith, Joseph, Samuel, John, Bethiah, Mary, Susanah, Thomas and William), and Samuel (b in Newport Nov 30, 1649, d there unm Jan 20, 1670-1).

THOMAS HUBBARD was born in 1653, but whether in England or America is unknown, but more probably in England. He settled in Boston and was there a merchant or trader, according to the records, which recite that in June, 1701, THOMAS HUBBARD, with others,

"merchants and traders," petitioned the deputy governor for a bankrupt law, "as in England." The signs indicate that he was wealthy and prominent, of good family, and had the right to bear arms. He married Mary Tuthill, daughter of John and Mary (Holyoke) Tuthill, and sister to Lieut Zechariah Tuthill of Boston (b. 1669, d. Jan 7, 1721), founder of Brattle Street Church and who was in charge of Castle William, Boston Harbor. Her sister Sarah m Nov 12, 1702, James Gooch. Her sister Susannah m May 8, 1707, Abraham Blish. Her grandfather was Richard Tuthill, who sailed from London in Apl, 1635, in the ship Planter, owned land at Romney Marsh (Chelsea) and d May 8, 1640, leaving John (b 1625) who m Feb 10, 1647, Mary Holyoke. THOMAS HUBBARD (deacon) died in Boston Nov 7, 1717, and his widow Mary (Tuthill) Hubbard Aug 20, 1720. Both were buried in the Old Granary Burying Ground on Tremont Street in Lot 158. The immense brownstone slab covering their tomb has on it a coat-of-arms said to be a Tuthill coat. Of the inscription but little is now legible, though the greater part of the epitaph has been preserved in Thomas Bridgman's book of epitaphs. Her mother, brother Zechariah, and two children are also buried in this tomb. Of what church THOMAS HUBBARD was deacon could not be ascertained. In York County (Me) Book of Deeds there is mention made May 15, 1713, of John Marion, Josiah Tay, and Thomas Hubbard, "Deacons of ye sd first Church in Boston" buying property there in trust for the church, of Ephraim Savage, administrator of the estate of Richard Wharton, late of Boston. This would appear to be this same Deacon THOMAS HUBBARD, and the "first Church" the one organized by Gov. John Winthrop, Thomas Dudley, John Wilson, and Isaac Johnson in 1632, corner State and Devonshire Streets, Boston. The fifth building succeeding from the original church now stands at the corner of Berkeley and Marlborough Streets and the denomination has become Unitarian. A search of these records, also of Old South Church and Old Christ Church (of Paul Revere fame) failed to show any data about this THOMAS HUBBARD. Much was discovered in the city records of his wife's ancestry, but none of his. From this we judge that his ancestors remained in England. Children-Zechariah (became a hatter in Boston, m (1) May 15, 1722, Mary Hobby, d 1730, and buried by Rev. William Cooper, and had Mary, b Mch 5, 1722-3, Elizabeth, b Sep 26, 1725, Zechariah, b June 24, 1728, and Charles Hobby, b Oct 16, 1730, killed in the Revolutionary War at Montressor's Island, N. John Franklin was Boston's deputy postmaster in 1754. He was a tallow-chandler and lived at the Hubbard Mansion No. 45 Cornhill Street, which went to her son James. John and Elizabeth (Gooch) Hubbard had children (b in Boston)—James (b Aug 14, 1715, m Nov 18, 1736, Anna Downe and had James b Oct 18, 1738), Thomas (b July 1, 1717, d 1796, called "innholder;" possibly he afterward rem to Weston and was executor, Feb 14, 1786, of the estate of James Gooch; he m Judith Ray, second dau Simon and Deborah (Greene) Ray of Block Island, and had, born in Boston, Elizabeth, b Feb 29, 1747-8, d v; Simon Ray, b Sep 19, 1749; Deborah and Joseph Lorens, twins, b Dec 13, 1750 [Joseph Lorens m Sarah Low of Gloucester, Mass., and had Judith Ray, who m George Parsons Sawyer and had Judith Ray Sawyer, b 1812, d Aug 1, 1871, m George Howe of Boston, b 1809, died also Aug 1, 1871, and had Caroline, Annie and Florence], Gideon Ray, b Sep 1, 1752; Judith, b May 28, 1754; Catherine, b May 22, 1756; Thomas, b June 10, 1758; John, b Apl 22, 1759; Susannah, b Jan 31, 1761; William, b Aug 12, 1762; Samuel, b June 9, 1766; and Elizabeth, b May 24, 1770), Sarah (b Feb 3, 1718, unm Jan 23, 1770; called "gentlewoman"), Tuttle (b July 23, 1720, became a prominent merchant, and was postmaster of Boston in 1770-1, and as an item of news it is related that he charged John Hancock for postage from July 5, 1770, to Jan 1, 1771, £,3. 15s. 11d. He probably never married. James went to England and returned from there in 1717 with a printing press and an outfit of letters. Dr. Increase Mather and the clergy drove him out of Massachusetts. He settled in Newport, R. I., and issued the first Almanac there in 1727, also the Rhode Island Gazette in 1732.

Some descendants of John and Elizabeth (Gooch) Hubbard are now living in Brookline, Mass., so the compiler has been informed, and spell their name "Hubbart."

WILMOTT HUBBARD [Marblchcad Town Records—Feb 26, 1667, a site for the town was made and among the charges for the same year is the following: "Mor for Mester Horberd or, 10, 00." This is not conclusive, however, that Mester Horberd lived in Marblehead. In a list of householders taken Oct 7, 1674, there appears no name of Hubbard. Hobart, or Horberd, etc.] appears on the Marblehead First Church records for the first time Oct 8, 1699, when he had a child baptized. There are no real estate transactions of record in his name in the county which might disclose his identity. He may have been of the Philip Hubbard (Kittery, Me.) branch, or the Richard Hubbard (Salisbury, Mass.) branch. The names Philip and Richard both appear in his family. Still, he may have been of neither line. He was probably a fisherman and not a prominent person. Children (bap in Marblehead First Church)—Prudence (bap Oct 8, 1699, adm to church Jan 13, 1716-17, m Nov 5, 1717, Thomas Furniss of Marblehead, who d prior to Aug 5, 1731; wife Prudence administratrix, inventory £,268. 8; they had children whose names are unknown), Philip (bap Aug 18, 1700 (probably an adult), mariner and fisherman. that was built in 1735 and remained standing until 1885. When her stepfather, John Franklin, died in 1756, his brother Benjamin, then in Philadelphia, forwarded to her the following letter of condolence:

"Philadelphia, Feb. 23, 1756.

"To Miss Elizabeth Hubbard, Boston: I condole with you. We have lost a most dear and valued relative. But it is the will of God and Nature that these mortal bodies be laid aside when the soul is to enter into real life. This is rather an embryo state—preparation for living. A man is not completely born until he is dead. Why, then, should we grieve that a new child is born among the immortals—a new member added to their happy society.

"We are spirits. That bodies should be lent us while they can afford us pleasure, assist us in acquiring knowledge, or in doing good to our fellow creatures, is a kind and benevolent act of God. When they become unfit for their purposes, and afford us pain instead of pleasure, instead of an aid, become an encumbrance, and answer none of the intentions for which they were given, it is equally kind and benevolent that a way is provided by which we may get rid of them. Death is that way. We ourselves, in some cases, prudently choose a partial death. A mangled, painful limb, which can not be restored, we willingly cut off. He who plucks out a tooth parts with it freely, since the pain goes with it, and he who quits the whole body parts at once with all pains and diseases which it is jiable to or capable of making him suffer. Our friend and we were invited abroad on a party of pleasure which is to last forever. His chaise is ready first, and he has gone before us. We could not all conveniently start together, and why should you and I be grieved at this, since we are soon to follow, and know where to find him? Adieu,

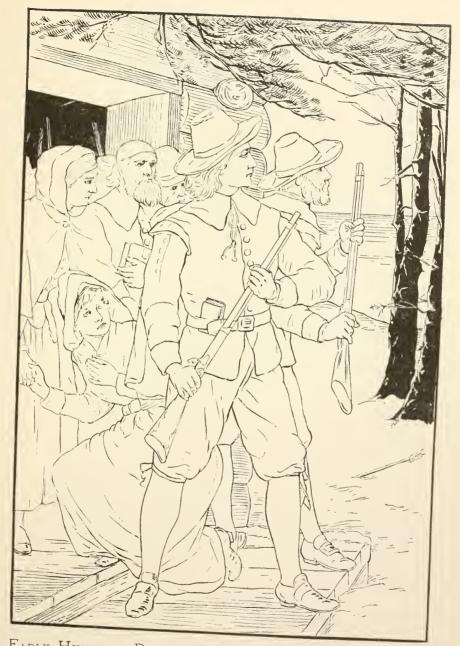

B. Franklin."

It would appear from the following Essex County Probate Records that he might have been this "John," and have removed from Marblehead: "John Hubbard, of New Haven, & Mary his W. Rachel assigns her power of atty. to Nathan Bowen, or Marblehead, 20 July, 1767." The stronger probability is, though, that he is the John mentioned in a quitclaim deed acknowledged May 20, 1732, "from Thomas Swerett, of Marblehead, fisherman, to my daughter Deliverance Hubbard, wife of John Hubbard, of Marblehead, fisherman, land in Marblehead & house," in consideration of his "love and affection." etc.). Amos m June 17, 1733, Sarah Russell, of Marblehead, and was admitted to church Jan 20, 1733-4. Oct 4, 1735, he bought for £69 a dwelling-house and lot in Marblehead near Windmill Hill from Thomas and Hannah Cruff; he was a mariner and a fisherman and died before Jan 14, 1744 (widow Sarah administratrix, inventory £,72. 2), leaving Sarah, bap Jan 27, 1733-4, m Mch 11, 1766, Daniel Kimball, of Marblehead; Philip, bap Sep 4, 1737, m June 24, 1756, Sarah Brown, of Marblehead, d before Oct 29, 1765, widow Sarah administratrix; inventory £,12. 2. 1., probably had children; Wilmott, bap Dec 3, 1738; no further traces).

The compiler is unable to connect further the members of this branch, owing to the incompleteness of the Marblehead records, but gives the balance in disconnected form: First Church Records—baptized: William Herbert, of Elizabeth, 25 Aug, 1706. TONG STAND FUBBARDS Descendants of JAMES of GRAVESEND.

Pride of ancestry is a natural and ennobling sentiment; and the man who does not feel it will contribute nothing of which posterity will be able to boast—Thomas Kinsella.

AMES HUBBARD, youngest of eleven children (four of whom were named William—born 1592; John—born 1598; Henry—born 1605, and Margaret), was born in 1613, and was the son of Henry Hubbard (b 1570, yeoman, of Langham, Rutland County, England) and Margaret Hubbard. He arrived in America about 1637 and settled at Charlestown, Mass., where he owned "a house and lott." He soon, however, removed to Lynn, Mass. The colonial records, dated December 1, 1640, show that he was once tried for "assault," viz., "JAMES HUBBARD is discharged, the hurt being little and done unwiting, the other presseing upon him." In the Salem Court, 1640-41, he was a juryman, being sued also in that court in 1642-43. In 1643 his property in Charlestown was deeded to R. Lowden and Thomas Wilder through his attorney, Edward Tomlyns. About this period he removed to Long Island with many other families holding anabaptist and other religious doctrines odious to the rulers of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. Among these migrators was a famous and beautiful lady of high rank, remarkable virtues and noble Christian character, Lady Deborah Moody,* accompanied by her son, Sir Henry Moody. She, her son, Ensign George Baxter, and Sergeant JAMES HUBBARD were granted land December 19, 1645, where is now the town of Gravesend. This town was laid out by JAMES HUBBARD, "a surveyor by trade," who in January, 1648, was elected "scout," a position at that beliigerent period of considerable importance. This action was because he was "a man as had been seen of great respectability and influence." He owned a "plantation lot" in Gravesend, but how much other land is unknown, though it is known that he had "176 acres at the head of Fresh Kil, on Staten Island." His Long Island land was obtained from the Indian Chief "Pamamora," and the confirmation* of this patent by Governor Richard Nicholls of New York was made out to "JEAMES HUBBARD, John Brown, Job Tilton, Jr., Richard Stout and William Goulding," and recorded at Albany, N. Y., Feb. 25, 1664–5. An additional confirmation* was given by Governor Francis Lovelace July 1, 1670, who appointed as commissioners to report title "Mathias Nicholls, JEAMES HUBBARD, Jacques Cortelyou, Elbert Elbertson and Elias Doughty."

JAMES HUBBARD was termed "Sergeant," and Apl 12, 1646, John Underhill sued him for "hireing his servant man;" in 1650-1-3 he was a magistrate for Gravesend, Kings Co., L. I. February 20, 1653, he sold by his agent and assignee, Daniel King, of Lynn, merchant, for £8, eleven acres of land to Allen Bread, of Lynn, Mass., husbandman. November 26, 1653, he represented Gravesend at New Amsterdam "to devise and recommend measures for the public security, and to put a stop to the piracies and robberies of one Thomas Baxter." History says also that "he rebelled with a George Baxter and Grover, July 27, 1655, against the Dutch authorities and was imprisoned." Apl 18, 1663. proceedings were begun by the "Town of Utrecht against James Hubbard for trespass." December 10, 1663, he was a delegate to a meeting "to represent the state of the country to the authorities in Holland, Europe," also held at New Amsterdam. He frequently clashed with the Dutch Governor, and it was generally the personal influence of Lady Deborah Moody that permitted him to retain public office. He endeavored at one time to enlist the protection of Connecticut as an Englishman, to guard his rights, was thus recognized and made "Commissioner" from that Colony May 12, 1664, together with Mr. William Wilkins, both of "Graves-inn." In 1654 he was the town assessor. "In 1655 he had a wife Martha." No record of any issue. December 31, 1664, he married Elizabeth Bailes (or Bayles), who died in Gravesend in 1693. JAMES is supposed to have died before that time. Children— James (see following), Rebecca (b Apl 28, 1667), Elizabeth (b June 3, 1669), JOHN (b Mch 20, 1670, was living in Gravesend in 1695), ELIAS (b Apl 11, 1673, farmer in Gravesend, m Dec 15, 1699, Jannetje b May 3, 1676, widow of Jan Barentze Van Driest), Samuel, supposed son (b May 3, 1676), and Hannah, supposed dan (m Myndert Johnson).

JAMES, eldest son of James and Elizabeth (Bayles) Hubbard, was born Dec 10, 1665, in Gravesend. He married Rachel Bergen, and after 1698 left

Mrs. Judge Charles H. Conover, of Freehold, N. J., has proven the historian and genealogist, Teunis G. Bergen (deceased), to have been in error in chronicling JAMES, son of James and Rachel (Bergen) Hubbard and grandson of James and Elizabeth (Bayles) Hubbard, as the progenitor of this branch of the Long Island Hubbards. She possesses the will of James Hubbard who married Rachel Bergen. It is dated Jan 30, 1718, and was probated in 1723. It leaves one-half to his wife Rachel and the other half in trust to his son James. His brothers Elias and Samuel are named the executors, After the death of his son JAMES this half is to revert to his (son JAMES) sister Mary, wife of John Wall, if living; if dead, to her daughters, Williampe, Rachel and Mary Wall. There is no mention whatever in the will of any other children or grandchildren. From the fact that the son's share was left in trust with no provision for possible issue by him, it is conjectured that he was an imbecile. If that deduction is correct, this branch then expired in the male line, and the present generations of Long Island Hubbards descended through one of the brothers of James Hubbard who married Rachel Bergen. These brothers were named John, Elias and Samuel, and Elias was in all probability the one.

THEODORE SEDGWICK HUBBARD of Geneva, N. Y.

(Descended from William Hulbard of Dorchester and Northampton, Mass)

There is a moral and philosophical respect for our ancestors which elevates the character and improves the heart—Daniel Webster.

WILLIAM HULBERD (Hulbard Hulbert, Hulburt, Hulburd, etc.), came from England (Northumberland County?) to Dorchester, Mass., and applied for freemanship Oct. 19, 1630—made freeman Apl 3, 1632. (The compiler of the Thomas Hurlbut—Saybrooke, Ct., 1635—Genealogy discovered no relationship between this Thomas and William.) He lived in Dorchester until 1635-6, when he sold out and removed to Windsor, Ct. He there lived on "Backer Row" until the Pequot War of 1637, when he, for consideration of safety, moved into the "public palisado." Land was apportioned to him in 1640. By his first wife (no record) he had John (see following), William (m (1) Ruth Salmon (2) Mary Howard), Hannah (lived in Northampton, New Haven, and died in Enfield, Ct.), Abigail (no record), Sara (b July 10, 1647), and Anna (bap Mch 17, 1648-9). In April, 1648, Samuel Allen died and WILLIAM HULBERD married his widow, who had Samuel, Nehemiah, John, Rebecca, Mary (d y), and Obadiah Allen. In 1657 he removed to Northampton, Mass., and there died in 1694. His eldest (9) som—

JOHN HULBERD married in 1671 Mary Baker (d 1707), and died in 1713. Children—John (see following), James (d y), Samuel (d unm in 1748), Mary (m 1711 Thomas Ponder of Westfield, Mass.), and James (m 1732 Mary Ganston, d 1767 in Northampton, and had Mary b 1733, James b 1735, John b 1737, m Susannah ———, and Hepzibah b 1740). His eldest son—

JOHN HULBERD was born in 1676 and died in 1737. He married Ruth ——, who died March 27, 1720. Children—Daniel (supposed son—see following).

DANIEL HULBERD, the supposed son of John and Ruth Hulberd, was adopted by Thomas Ponder and Mary (Hulberd) Ponder of Westfield, Mass., and was born in 1714 in Westfield, where in 1736 he married Naomi Root. In 1759 he removed to Pittsfield, Mass., where he was generally known as Captain DANIEL HUBBARD. The change in the spelling from Hulberd or Hulburd to HUBBARD now takes place, and for what reason can not at this late period be determined. Correct spelling was not then deemed of much importance. His children bore the name "Hubbard" thereafter. He was a surveyor, Revolutionary War soldier, one of the orignal eight members of the Pittsfield Church (organized in 1763), and died of "camp fever and hard labor." It is claimed that all his four sons and five sons-in-law were Revolutionary soldiers. Two of his sons, Capt. Daniel, Jr., and Lieut. James Hubbard, with their wives, are buried in Pittsfield Cemetery. There also is buried DANIEL and his wife. A handsome marble shaft in "Saints Rest" is thus inscribed: "This monument is erected in memory of Capt DANIEL HUBBARD, who died December 19, 1777, in the 64th year of his age; also Mrs. Naomy, his relict, who died January 29, 1800, aged 82. They were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they are not divided."

Happy and innocent were the ages of our forefathers, who ate herbs and parched corn, drank the pure stream, and broke their fast with nuts and roots—Jeremy Taylor, D. D.

OHN HUBBARD* first appears as an inhabitant of Boston, Mass. about 1670. The records read: "John Hubert of Boston removed to Roxbury." Military records show that a "John Hubbard of Roxbury was in Capt. Isaac Johnson's Company in the King Philip Indian War," period of 1675-76. He had a wife Rebecca (Wells?) who, Feb 17, 1683. "confessed her sin and repentance and faith in Christ: was recd to full comunion and baptized." They were both members of Rev. John Eliot's (the Indian apostle's) church of Roxbury, Mass. April 13, 1684 (after their removal to Roxbury), their daughters REBECCA and RACHEL were baptized. They were then, probably, good-sized children. September 21, 1684, a daughter, Sarah, was baptized. April 11, 1686, Mary and five children of other families were baptized. July 21, 1686, about forty of Roxbury's citizens left that place and founded New Roxbury. afterward called Pomfret, then Woodstock, or "Mashamequet." This town remained under Massachusetts jurisdiction until 1794. Here, May 3, 1689, a son, John Hubbard, Jr, was born. In 1707 JOHN HUB-BARD, Sr. and family removed to the northern half of Woodstock, and further traces of him and his wife Rebecca are lost. He was one of the original proprietors of Pomfret-none of whom could be under 19 years of age by covenant entered into-and was assigned "lot 21." Children-RACHEL (bap Apl 13, 1684, m Apl 9, 1690, John Holmes of Woodstock, this being the first marriage in the town), Rebecca (bap Apl 13, 1684, m Feb 4, 1701-2, David Bishop of Woodstock), SARAH (bap Sep 21, 1684, "of Mashamequet," m Dec 26, 1707, Josiah Bugbee of Woodstock), Mary (bap Apl 11, 1686, "of Mashamequet," d in Pomfret May 14,

WILLARD, eldest son of Benjamin and Susannah (Cady) Hubbard, was born in Brooklyn, Ct, Nov 10, 1737, and died in 1813 of pneumonia. He married July 20, 1767, Lucy Starr (b 1727, d 1815), youngest daughter of Samuel Starr of Norwich, Ct, and Annie (Bushnell) Starr. Philanthropic people in England became interested in and attempted the evangelization of the Mohican Indians, and WILLARD HUBBARD was chosen their missionary and teacher, with headquarters at Montville, Ct, where, about 1667, a church and school-house were erected. Sampson Occum, a Mohican, was educated and ordained in England and preached a sermon before the Queen of George III. He then returned to America and assisted Mr. HUBBARD in his labors. Good results were becoming visible when the Revolutionary War interrupted and ended their efforts, and Mr. HUBBARD and his accomplished wife returned to Brooklyn and re-commenced teaching school, which he continued until 1798. He and his wife were well endowed with intellectual gifts, of spiritual temperaments, quite orthodox, and well fitted for their vocation. MISCELLANEOUS.

The subjoined data, taken from the town records of Brooklyn, Ct—Brooklyn was set off from Pomfret and Canterbury—cannot be connectedly attached to this line of Hubbards by the compiler at the place where it belongs, but is considered worth printing, nevertheless: "Calvin Hubbard married Sarah Derby November 10, 1778 [d? 1781]. Children—Filena,* born January 6, 1780; Calvin,* born December 24, 1781. Children of Ebenezer and Molly Hubbard—Reuben, born Dec 10, 1781; Lydia, born June 26, 1786, Ebenezer, born July 5, 1789; William, born June 4, 1791; Polly, born Aug 30, 1793."

The following data has been copied from a "tree" prepared by Douglas Hubbard. The compiler cannot determine where it should be attached to this line, if of this line: "Children of John and Sarah (Barker) Hubbard of Newport, R. L.—Henry (b 1768, m Mary Tanner, Kingstown, R. L.), John (b 1773, m Virtue Clark, Newport, and had Sarah, b 1808, m Nathan Gladden; John, b 1810, m Carman de la Milla of California; Virtue, b 1812, m Charles Crosby; Benjamin, b 1814; Amelia, b 1816, m Stephen Sherman; William, b 1818, m Eliza Swann of Providence), William (b 1778, m Hannah Brayton, Warren, R. L., and had Eunice, b 1813, m Alfred Seymour; William, b 1815, in Maria Rice; Harriet, b 1817, m Hale Bowen; Benjamin, b 1819; Sarah, b 1821, m George Martin; John, b 1823, m Mary Peck), Amelia (b 1789, m Samuel Townsend), and Sarah (b 1789, m David Grant)."

^{*} Philena married Ebenezer Day and had Hubbard Day and Henry Day of Providence and Mary Day of Fall River, who married (1) Mr. Gladdin, (2) Dr. Durfee. Calvin was a captain in the 21st Connecticut Militia, War 1812, and married Olive Hill and had nine children-Jereman (m Abbie Young, lived in Killingly, Ct., and had Abbie, Rhahamah, and Abria), William Augustus (m Ann Eliza Wood, lived in Centreville, R. I., and had Carrie Maria who in Whipple Andrews and settled in Minneapolis, Minn; Hene Ann Eliza who m Edward II. Steele and settled in Minneapolis; and William Harrison who settled in Minneapolis, m Marietta Arnold, and had Grace Lillian who in E. Kirby Millspaugh of Minneapolis), MARIA OLIVE (in Schuyler Young, lived in Killingly, and had William), George (m Mary Young, lived in Killingly, and had Hester who m Leonard Kiet of Killingly; and Maria who m William Hiscock of Killingly and had William, George, Emma, Eugene and Mary), EDWARD HILL (m Mary Browne of Danielsonville, Ct.), DANIEL SPRAGUE (m Lydia Ann Hale of Killingly, and had Henry Calvin and Ida Olive), HENRY (m Anna Rosseau, rem to Auburn, Cal., and had Henry Calvin who m Mary Noble of San Francisco and had Henry Noble and another child, name unknown), and Philena Louisa (m Theodore Hammett of Danielsonville, Ct., and had Katie Helen Olive Priscilla, Nellie Lawton, Theodore Erastus, Carrie, Abbie Melissa, Maria Emeline who m Charles D. Jenner, and Edward Hubbard who m Ida May Wood). The compiler is of opinion that these descendants are of another Hubbard line than that of "John Hubbard's of Pomfret, Ct.," but cannot prove it.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said—
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned,
From wandering on a foreign strand—Sir Walter Scott.

There is but little that can be given of this Hubbard Branch that is of a satisfactory nature. The compiler upon visiting Virginia found genealogical records illy kept. None of the descendants possessed any preserved lines of their own descent, and knowledge of their forefathers was hazy indeed. But few church parishes ever pretended to keep records of births, deaths, or marriages: and town records, which possibly might have shed genealogical light the compiler found had been carried off or destroyed by the ravages of war.

The present generation of Hubbards in Virginia use but one "b" in their name, some pronouncing it Hn-bard and others Hub-ard. An inspection of the early land grants disclosed several forms of spelling. James Hub-ard, of Nelson County, had a book-plate copy of a coat of arms with the wife's shield impaled with the husband's upon the wrong dexter) side of the escutcheon, which bore the motto, "Fortis et Fidelis," and which was surmounted with the crest Sagittarius. This was not duly authenticated, though showing some points of similarity to the "Hobart" Coat of Buckinghamshire Eng., notably in its shield (sable) and charge "estoile," between two flanches (ermine). Savoring some of spuriousness, it is, consequently, not illustrated in this volume with the other coats. Receiving no substantial encouragement in his work, the compiler felt unwilling to engage in a laborious research attended with vexatious difficulties and a considerable expenditure of time and money. He unearthed in Richmond, however, in the land office, the following information regarding some early land grants, which is herewith given to enable any future Hubbard students in genealogy to start off with acturate clues. The spelling of the names is given as found in the records

Many of these Virginia Hubbards migrated into the adjacent Southern States; a number settled in Alabama, a few of whom eventually reached

^{*}This date (1760) ends the land grants made to Hubbards. It will be noticed that the later grantees' names were spelled "Hubbard," though the former ones were distorted into almost unrecognizable forms. Still there is no question that in all cases "Hubbards" were meant. It is barely possible that owing to the close connection the following name had with "Hubbard" records, this person may have been also a "Hubbard." "April 25, 1702, Edwd Hobday was gr. 263 acres in King and Queen Co." There were various other names mentioned in many of these grants which were not copied.

Mississippi; many more located in the region of Stokes and Gilmore counties, N. C., a few being Quakers and intermarrying freely with this sturdy sect. Many of them were opposed to slavery and even suffered persecution in preaching its unholiness.

There is a record or tradition of a JOSEPH HUBBARD, Quaker, who came to America with William Penn and settled with him at Philadelphia in 1681, but afterward removed into Virginia and North Carolina. Among other children, he had a son Jeremiah, who preached the Quaker or doctrine of the "Friends" to the inhabitants of North Carolina. The data of the descent from JOSEPH and Jeremiah of families now living bearing the Hubbard name is quite imperfect and can not here be given with regard for accuracy. It is quite possible the following genealogical scraps spring from these ancestors: Rev. Jeremiah Hubbard, descended from this Joseph Hubbard; and a missionary among the Indians at Afton, Indian Territory, and publisher of The Indian Moccasin, writes that JOSEPH HUBBARD married Ann Crews, a half-breed Cherokee, and by her had Hardy, Jeremiah, Jacob, Woodson, Joseph, Rhoda, Susannah and Anna. Hardy had Joseph and Caleb.

Another account relates that about the middle of the eighteenth century there existed one GEORGE HUBBARD, who lived at White Oak Swamp Monthly Meeting, Va., and who died after 1789. He had a wife, Judith, who died before this date. They had a son JOHN (b July 30. 1752, d Mch 27, 1834, in Deep River, N. C.), who removed to Deep River, N. C., in 1789. About 1778 he married Martha Sanders (supposed), daughter of Hezekiah Sanders, of Stokes Co., N. C. She, it is supposed, according to tradition, was thought to have had Cherokee Indian blood in her veins. At any rate his father opposed this marriage and disinherited him, which caused his removal to North Carolina, where he became an influential and upright citizen and a leading member of the Friend's Church at Deep River. By her he had eight children, two of the daughters being married to Elias Henley, of N.C. Children—Susannah (b Apl 24, 1780), Elizabeth (b Sep 12, 1781), Ann (b Mch 29, 1784, d July 19, 1807, in Deep River), George (see following), Jane (b July 24, 1788, d Mch 7, 1825, in Deep River), Martha (b July 6, 1791, d Mch 10, 1851, in Deep River), Judith (b Mch 24, 1794, d abt 1860 in Ind), John (b Sept 12, 1796, d in 1856 near Wabash, Ind, kicked by a horse, m Abigail Coffin (d 1855), fifth in descent from Tristram Coffin, of Nantucket, Mass., and had Susannah, Martha, and other daughters, and sons, Thomas D., of Lawrence, Kas., and William G., of Columbus, Ohio, lecturer, and publisher of temperance literature. John was a strong abolitionist, and in the Spring of 1844 he was compelled to leave Deep River for the Northwest by the slaveholders, which he did upon horseback, his family following him in the ensuing Fall), and Sarah (b Dec 26, 1798, d Sep 11, 1825, in Deep River). John then married a niece of his first wife in 1804, one Sarah Patterson, of Muddy Creek Meeting, Stokes County, N. C., and had Jemima (b in Deep River Feb 25, 1805, d 1880 in Kansas, m Eli Vestal and lived awhile in Plainfield, Ind.)

GEORGE—b Apl 14, 1786, in Virginia, d in Monrovia, Ind., in 1870. He was a man of firm and upright character, of amiable disposition, and enjoyed the eventful experiences of pioneer life. He first settled in Wayne County but removed afterward to Morgan County, and was also a member of the Friends Church. About 1806 he married Nancy Shields, of N. C. Children-Martha (b in Guilford 1808, d in Monrovia 1885, m Phillip Johnson and had Emeline, Mahlon, George, Louisa, and Ashley), WILLIAM B. (see following), JOHN S. (b in Guilford 1812, successful farmer and lawyer in Monrovia, m Abigail Henshaw and had Iesse, William, Tilghman, and George, all participators in late war; m (2) Catharine Day and had Mary), ELIAS (b in Guilford in 1814, d 1892 in Morgan Co., Ind., m Margaret Gray and had Mary J., Malinda, Nancy, Mavilda, Margaret, David, Mahala, Abigail, and Anna), THOMAS CHALKLEY (b in Guilford County, N. C., 1816, d in Morgan County in 1872, but lived near Coatsville, Hendricks Co., m Pauline Hudson and had Laura, Lemuel, Jane Abner, Charles, etc.), George Hixon (b in Guilford 1818, d 1872 at Monrovia; jolly blacksmith, though devout Methodist. m Bathsheba Sanders and had Martha J.), Louisa J. (b 1821, m (1) Abner Blair and had Lucinda, m (2) Nathaniel Carter, of Mooresville, who d 1801). Mary B. and Anna (b later, died at about 21 years).

WILLIAM B—b 1810 in Guilford County, N. C., d in Sep., 1863, in Monrovia, Ind. He was a pioneer of Morgan County, N. C., and out of the green woods developed a fertile farm. His word was received as his bond, and he belonged to the Friends Church. In, or about 1832, he married Ludah Vestal (d 1863-4), dau of Dr. Benjamin and ——(Newlin) Vestal, of Rocky River, Chatham County, N. C., also Quakers. Children—Sallie (m Abner Hadley, of Mooresville). Martha (m T. C. Sumner, of Mooresville, and had Anna and Sallie), Edith (m Henry Copeland, now of Chattanooga, Tenn.), Nathan E. (m Eliza A. Another branch of the Virginia Hubbard vine of which we possess but meager information regarding its American beginning starts with DANIEL CAMPBELL HUBBARD, who was born in Maryland (?) Dec 23, 1746, and died after 1776 in Pittsylvania County, Va. He married in Maryland Sarah Filpot (b Jan 5, 1756), and had a daughter and a son Moses (see following).

MOSES—b Aug 17, 1776, removed with his parents to Pittsylvania County, Va., near head of Banister Creek, and married Elizabeth Hodges (b Aug 17, 1777). They had five daughters and sons Daniel Perkins (see following), John Nicholas (who removed to Warren Co., Mo, with his family), Barton (who settled in Lincoln Co., Mo, with his brother Harrison), Harrison and Josiah (who migrated to St. Charles Co., Mo), and Moses Allen.

DANIEL PERKINS HUBBARD—b in Pittsylvania Co., Va., Oct 16, 1799, m Apl 28, 1825, Joanna Lawson Carter (b Jan 2, 1802), dau Jesse Carter (b Nov 30, 1770) and gr dau Thomas Carter (b near Richmond, Va, Nov 29, 1734). They first settled upon or near the head of Tomahawk Creek, about six miles from his birthplace, and then in 1836, with his family and also his brother's (John Nicholas), he rem to Warren Co., Mo, and settled as a farmer near Hickory Grove, where he died Oct 12, 1843. Children—Moses (see following), Jesse Carter (b Mch 31, 1833, m 1873 Ellen Newman, of Farmersville, Collier Co., Tex, and had Clande Newman, Foanna L., Mary, Willic, and Alla), Elizabeth C., Susan W., Martha Ann, Winifred B., Judith B., Joanna L., and Rebecca D. P.

MOSES—b in Hickory Grove, Va, July 31, 1827, removed with his parents, brother and five sisters (who were born there also) to Warren Co., Mo, where he managed the farm for his mother for several years after his father's death, and then studied medicine, graduating in 1856 from St. Louis Medical College. He first practiced in Henry Co., Mo, where he m June 26, 1859, Mary Jane Sutton. Losing his property by the war he returned to Warren Co., and in 1866, with his brother Jesse Carter, removed to Texas, and settled at Roseland, Collier Co. Children—Alla (b July 3, 1860, gr 1880 from Pritchett School Inst., Glasgow, Mo., standing high in scholarship, m Dr. B. F. Spenser, of Weston, Collier Co., Tex., and d childless Dec. 1, 1889).

There was also a WILLIAM HUBBARD, b abt 1730, who had a son HARRISON, b abt 1755, of Patrick County, Va., who had sons William, b abt 1776; Asa, b abt 1778; Moses, b abt 1780; and Daniel, b abt 1782, who rem to Madison County, Ky., and had John, of Clay County, Mo., who had Moses of Liberty, Mo., and Col. Walter, of Springfield, Mo.

There is said to have been a Col. BENJAMIN HUBBARD who came direct from England, settled in King William County and married Mary Todd (b 1747). Among other children he had Ann, who married Col. James Taylor, of the War of the Revolution, and a member of the Virginia House of Burgess. [This tradition, as sent in by a descendant, seems not to be reliable.]

of Texas.

(Descended from George Hubbard of Virginia.)

God sifted a whole nation that He might send choice grain into the wilderness-William Stoughton.

Eaton's History of Candia, N. H. (published at Manchester, N. H., in 1852), gives an account, among those of other early settlers, of the $entr\epsilon e$ into America of the progenitor of this branch of New England Hubbards. It reads as follows: "In the good old days of yore, says tradition, there was born in England one RICHARD HUBBARD, probably of a family in easy circumstances, if not wealthy. An uncle, living in France, offered to make RICHARD his heir. Accordingly, his passage was paid across the channel by his father. But fortune had determined otherwise than that he should become a citizen of France, where his descendants might have lost their heads in the chances of revolution. The captain of the vessel proving to be a rogue, our young voyager was carried to the West Indies and sold for his passage money. There he was bound an apprentice to a blacksmith. After serving his time, the New World—then the El Dorado of all adventurous spirits—attracted his attention, and he came to Boston. He was there married and had two sons, one of whom moved to Salisbury, Mass. * * * "

HOW much of the foregoing version is true and how much mythical it would be hard at this late date to determine in the absence of well-authenticated records. From what source Mr. F. B. Eaton derived this account is not known. He says "tradition". If it were a family tradition it is entitled to a little weight, but if simply a promiscuous tradition of the town, but little reliance ought to be placed upon it. The account is probably in error in stating that two sons were born in Boston. The Salisbury records show that they were all born in Salisbury.*

^{}There is some room for belief, however, that this RICHARD HUBBARD of Salisbury was born about 1645 and was the son of an earlier Richard who came into New England and may have been the Richard mentioned in a work edited by John Camden Hotten and published in London in 1874. It was compiled from records in London, and is entitled "The Original Lists of Persons of Quality," who left that port between 1600 and 1700. The extract relating to Richard Hubbard thus reads: "May 21—don, Richard Goodladd, Mr, per warrant from ye Earl of Carlisle: James Hubbard, age 27; Richard Hubbard, age 18 [and others]." The "James Hubbard" mentioned may have been "James of Watertown, Mass.," who died there in 1639 (see Early Hubbard settlers). [Since the foregoing was prepared, the compiler finds data in some Douglas Hubbard manuscripts which may be in the main correct, 10 means remaining now for discovering the source from which the late Douglas Hubbard secured his information. He records that "RICHARD HUBBARD, b about 1620, from Surrey County, Before going to Salisbury it appears that he lived awhile in Dover, N. H. Dover records show that "Dec. 11, 1658, RICHARD HUBBARD was not taxed." He may have had a brother; there was a "Mr. Hubard" mentioned in Exeter, N. H., town records May 4, 1636; also in 1667 "Captain Hubbard and Josiar Hubbard." July 26, 1669, Jeremiah Hubbard of Portsmouth, N. H., was witness to a deed from "ffrancis Champnowne to Abraham Corbett, both of Kittery, Me." He married Martha Allen (b in Salisbury in 1646, d there Oct. 4, 1718), day of William and Ann (Goodale) Allen, and is spoken of as a man of influence and property, being styled "Mr." then a title of some importance and only worn by authority. In 1690 he was made freeman, and in 1694-5 he represented Salisbury in the General Court. For some years he lived in Boston on Fort Hill, removing there in 1697. This residence he gave to his son Joseph March 24, 1706, or rather at that time what he termed in the deed as the "Easternmost part or End of our now Dwelling hous." To all of his sons and daughters during the latter years of his life he gave away much of his landed property, some of it being located in Amesbury, Mass. He died in Salisbury—"Mr. RICH-ARD HUBBARD departed this life June ye 26th, 1719." Children (all born in Salisbury-Mary (b Jan 19, 1667, m Nov 17, 1686, Tobias Lang-

The compiler found nothing in his investigations showing the existence of this earliest Richard, his son Jeremiah and his descendants, yet it could all be easily missed by him, and no time now remains for him to verify its accuracy. The late Douglas Hubbard must have certainly found something as a basis for these statements.

* Ann Goodale was daughter of Dorothy and Richard Goodale of Yarmouth, Norfolk, Eng., who came to Newberry, Mass., in 1638, and to Salisbury about 1639 or 1640. Ann had a brother Richard in Boston who possibly was the Richard Goodale who went to Middleton, Ct. Her grandfather died in 1666.

SON OF JOSEPH AND THANKFUL (BROWN) HUBBARD.

R² THOMAS—b in Boston, Mass, Aug 4, 1702, d there July 14, 1773. THOMAS, like his father, Joseph Hubbard, "blacksmith," was taught a trade, that of "brazier." He owned a brazier's establishment at the head of the "Towne Dock", Boston, as late as June 30, 1749. He graduated from Harvard College in 1721, and from 1750 to 1773 was its Treasurer.* April 9, 1739, he was elected deacon of the famous Old South Church, Boston, and held that position until he resigned Jan 23, 1764. He held also many other positions of trust, being Indian Commissioner to treat with the Indians at Fort St. George (now Warren, Me.), a member of the Boston Council, Speakert of the Legislature, and also a large landholder or "proprietor" of many surrounding towns, notably Sheepscott (York Co. Me.), Damariscotta, Princetown, Hubbardstown (named after him), and Royalston, being Treasurer of the latter town. Dec 8, 1737, he bought of the executors for £600 the Leonard Vassall mansion (afterward appraised at £1,000) on Summer Street, formerly owned by Simeon Stoddard, where he resided until his death. An early map of Boston shows the location of this mansion. A long obituary of him appears in the Massachusetts Gazette, dated Boston July 26, 1773. The following is an extract from it: "But if ^{*} His portrait hangs in Memorial Hall, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass. It was executed by John Singleton Copley, a very famous gentleman of the brush in those days, and shows him as a pleasant, smooth-faced gentleman, largely bald, dressed in gown and university habit, with the Treasurer's keys lying upon a table beside him. His headgear resembles a Turkish turban, and is not of college distinction. Many of Copley's portraits have this odd-looking covering on the heads of his subjects. It seemed to be a ''fad'' of his. Thomas Hubbard's successor was John Hancock, who made a poor college treasurer, though a distinguished patriot and gifted statesman.

^{*} In 1756 and thereafter he is mentioned in legal instruments as an "esquire." There then existing a certain punctiliousness in the bestowal of titles it argues that he was either knighted between 1749 (when he was called "brazier," and later on "merchant") and 1756, or else he possessed a hereditary right to the honor as eldest son of Joseph Hubbard, which honor the colonists sometimes allowed to languish. Probably the latter construction is the best one, as the "cont" on his tomb resembles the one granted May 19, 1575, to Edward Hubbard of Burchanger, Eng., in so far as coats sculptured in stone can be made to resemble printed drawings, the architectural coat being of course minus many of the finer details. The writer does not assert positively that Hon. THOMAS was here buried. Harvard College records were searched, but no traces of his burial place could be found. There was another and earlier Deacon Thomas Hubbard (b 1653, d 1717), and some of his descendants who were buried also in this cemetery in Lot 158 (see Early Settlers). This Deacon Thomas Hubbard also has a coat-of-arms on his tomb; and had a wife Mary, daughter Mary, and son Thomas, and yet they both appear to be of entirely different family lines, notwithstanding these coincident features.

It further states that he was a member of the guard escorting British prisoners to Boston after the Battle of Bennington, and, succumbing to the inner voice of an importunate palate long nourished on corumeal and salt pork, became the hero of a successful foraging party that supped that night on fresh vegetables at the expense of an ungenerous but fat Dutchman.

LIEUT. ELMER WILCOX HUBBARD, U S. A.

Third Artillery, now at Fortress Monroe, Va.

(Descended from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.)

Our liberty, safety, life, estate, parents, country, and children are by valor preserved and defended—Marcus Accius Plautus.

THE United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., has had but one Hubbard graduate. Lieut. ELMER WILCOX HUBBARD, U. S. A., of Connecticut, enjoys this solitary distinction. He was born in Cromwell, Ct., Sept. 27, 1861; entered West Point July 1, 1881; graduated thirteenth from the top in a class of thirty-nine June 13, 1885; commissioned 2d Lieut. June 14, 1885, and assigned to the 1st Artillery; promoted 1st Lieut. June 13, 1892, and transferred to the 3d Artillery. He is the only son of Daniel Roberts and Lucetta Mildrum (Wilcox) Hubbard, and comes of "fighting blood," his ancestors having participated in the Revolutionary War and his father in the late civil war (see Abridged Descent Line).

Lieut. HUBBARD has seen frontier service, having been stationed at Fort Canby, Wash., and at the Presidio, San Francisco, Cal., since receiving his commission. August 28, 1889, he was detailed for duty at West Point as Instructor Professor of Chemistry, Mineralogy, and Geology. August 17, 1893, he rejoined his regiment at Fort McPherson, Ga. April 2, 1892, he married Adèle Louise Constans, of Alsace, and has one child, Ruth, b May 15, 1893.

Two hundred years! Two hundred years! What changes have they seen, Since the red hunter chased the deer o'er copse and village green. $-Lydia\ Hunt\ Sigourney$, PHILIP HUBBARD came from the Parish of St. Saviour in the Isle of Jersey, one of the Channel Islands situate in a very deep indentation at the mouth of the English Channel and close to the French coast. The language spoken there is Norman-French, though it has been an English possession since William* the Conqueror, Duke of Normandy, defeated Harold the Saxon at Hastings and ascended the English throne in 1066. St. Saviour is one of the twelve parishes of Jersey, its western boundary line running close to the Capital of the Island, St. Helier, an ancient town whose foundations were laid in the dusky ages of Gallic barbarism during the sixth century.

PHILIP HUBBARD probably sailed from the bay of St. Aubin with his brother Joseph, who died in Maine April 1, 1701. Joseph's will is as follows:

In the name of God, Amen! I, JOSEPH HUBART, of the Parish of St. Sover, on the Island of Jearsey, but now in New England, * * * will and bequeath to my Loving Brother Phillip Hubart of Kittery, in the county of Yorke in New England, with whom I have lived, and by whom I have bin Provided for and Maintained ever since my Coming to New England; All my Estate, Real and Personal, That doth belong to me, even my whole Title & Interest to any Estate or part of an Estate in any wise pertaining to me in any part of the World, and Particularly a Tract of Land or a Field Scitnate in the Parish of St. Sover in Jearsey, lately in the Possession of my Brother John Hubart of Sd Parish, to him, his Heirs, or assigns forever. * * I set my hand and Seal Mch 24, 1701. JOSEPH HUBART. [seal] Witnesses: Daniel Stone, Jonathan Stone, John Wade. Recorded Apl 21, 1701. Inventory returned June 16, 1701, at £3, 00, 10.

The time of arrival of these two brothers in New England is unknown, though in a written instrument it is stated that PHILIP was "sometime of ye Island of Jersey." Probably they were unmarried upon their arrival, as no mention is made by Joseph of wife or children. The records of Kittery and Berwick furnish the following scraps of miscellaneous information about PHILIP HUBBARD:

^{*} William (b 1024 in Falaise, Normandy, France) had Danish blood in his veins, being sixth in descent from Rollo the Dane, who conquered and settled Normandy with his followers about 885. He was named after Rollo's son, William Longsword. His mother was Harlette, or Harléve, dau of Fubert, a tanner of Falaise, and his father was Robert, Duke of Normandy, who barefooted and bareheaded made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem to explate his sins.

July 5, 1698, PHILIP HUBBARD was fined 20 shillings (afterwards remitted) by the court of Sessions of the County of York for delinquency in not appearing as a grand juryman. March 30, 1702, he was chosen constable. Feb. 2, 1702-3, he is mentioned as selectman of the Parish of Berwick, and presented a bill at the next meeting of 15 shillings "for work upon the meeting-house." Berwick was set off from Kittery and incorporated as a parish in 1701 or 1702, and as a town in 1713. At a meeting of selectmen Jan. 5, 1707, at Berwick, it was ordered that £,145 and 15 shillings be paid towards the building of the meeting-house to "Philip Hobood," treasurer of the parish—"Daniel Emery, clerk." At a legal town meeting held at Berwick, Aug. 5, 1713, he was again elected selectman and town treasurer for the year ensuing, also surveyor of highways. Shortly after this he died, as the town meeting of March 15, 1713-14, elected John Hooper his successor. "Voted—the present treasurer, John Hooper, is empowered to account with the administrators of Mr. Philip Hubbard, the late treasurer, deceased," etc. He was, judging from the offices he held, one of the foremost citizens of Kittery and Berwick. Dec. 22, 1692, he married Mrs. Elizabeth (Goodwin) Emery,* daughter of Daniel and Margaret (Spencer) Goodwin (innkeeper at Berwick), and widow of Zecheriah Emery who died prior to Dec. 22, 1692, and who m her Dec. 9, 1686, and by whom she had Elizabeth (b Nov. 24, 1687) and Zechariah Emery (b Oct. 5, 1690). In 1716 his widow Elizabeth (Goodwin-Emery) Hubbard and his son Philip of York, "mariner," unite in the sale of his property as administrators. He had seven children, all born in Kittery.

The first land or "homestead lot" PHILIP HUBBARD bought was from James Emery, Sr., of "Barwick, Mass," to whom it was "laid out" Nov 1, 1654, by the "lot layers of Kittery." He and his wife Elizabeth for a consideration of £120 quitclaimed it to PHILIP HUBBARD Jan 27, 1696-7. It comprised—

"All that my Land and building Scituate, lying and being in Barwick aforesd, Containing forty Acres, be it more or less, butted and bounded as followeth, vidzt: beginning at a Red oak tree Standing in the fence between my sd Land and Mr. John Playsteds, or birchen point, Lot Soe

^{*} Daniel Stone married Patience Goodwin (Elizabeth's sister) and had seven children. Their grandfather was Thomas Spencer who settled early in the Indian village of Newickawannock, near Newickawannock Falls, where in 1623 or 1624 the first sawmill in New England was erected. Thomas Spencer had a wife Patience, called, and Soe to the Main River Side, and up the sd River Northward to a small brook and valley, which is a parting bounds between sd Land and Daniel Stone's Land; and from thence, running as the fence now Stands, to a tall white oak stump Standing within Daniel Stone's garrison; and from sd Stump upon a Streight Course to ye first mentioned red oak tree, where it began, together with all my Right, title and interest of and to the Marsh, Comonly Called the fowling Marsh Joyning to sd Land."

April 25, 1703, he bought for £70 an additional forty acres from Benoni Hodgson of Kittery; May 17, 1706, a 50-acre tract for £30 from William Goodwin of Kittery, formerly granted to James Barry by the town of Kittery June 24, 1673; Jan 2, 1706, 50 acres for £36 from Daniel Mackentire, granted Feb 9, 1663, by the town to Micham Mackentire; Dec 19, 1709, 40 acres for £8. 10s. from Ephraim Joy, housewright, and wife Sarah Joy; and Jan 11, 1709–10, 50 acres that was laid out May 10, 1703, to Alexander Grant and James Grant.

The inventory of his estate, sworn to Feb 22, 1713-14, amounted to £1223.01. Some of the items mentioned are: 4 oxen, with hay to winter them, £26; 9 cows at £4 p, with hay to winter them; 3-yr old hefer £3; 5 2-yr old cattle £10; 2 3-yr old steeres, with hay to winter them £7; a bull £3; 6 yearlings £7. 10s; a calfe 6s; a negro woman £35; 2 mares & a horse £6 p; 29 sheep at 7s. £10. 3s; 2 sowes and 8 piggs 50s; 2 shoats 10s; carpenters and joyners tools, lathe, etc. £3. 2s; 1 eyder mill & press £4, and many other items of personal property. His widow died before Dec 16, 1736, when her thirds were divided and Philip the eldest son received £80 and the rest of the children £40 apiece, being John, Moses, Aaron, Elizabeth Redington, Patience Farnam, and Mary Bean. The inventory of his real estate at this date was as follows: "The Homestead with ve Buildings thereon £1000; The 8 acres yt was Moses Hubbard's £120; The 2 acres to Aaron £30; To 60 acres at Salmon falls £360; The 40 acres at Lovey Brook £60; The 100 acres at nine notches £125." Nº PHILIP—b in Kittery, Nov 9, 1693, d between Mch 18, 1722-3, and Nov 21, 1723, m about 1717 Elizabeth Roberts (b Mch 13, 1697), dau Joseph and Elizabeth Roberts, of Dover, N. H., who was received into First Cong. Church at Berwick Apl 2, 1727. Widow Elizabeth (Roberts) Hubbard afterward rem to Dover, N. H., where she is mentioned July 14, 1727, as a "shopkeeper." She m there abt 1727 or 1728 Capt John Gage, who d there in 1783, and who had by her, sons William, John, Moses and Jonathan Gage. The history of Wells and Kennebunk states that Sep 16, 1712, Elisha Plaisted and Hannah Wheelwright, dau of Rev. John Wheelwright, were married at Wells, numerous guests from adjacent towns being present. After the nuptials were concluded the garrison was attacked by Indians, and among the brave defenders were "Captains Robinson and John Heard,* PHILIP HUBBARD, and others." Captain Robinson was killed, and the bridegroom captured, though afterward redeemed by ransom. At a town meeting held Mch 14, 1717-18, PHILIP HUBBARD was elected "field driver for the year ensuing," and May 7, 1718, "grand juryman for court of assize and general goal delivery" and Mch 9, 1718-9, "surveyor of highways," and Oct 17, 1721, "trustee for letting out upon interest £240.15s.", and Sep 20, 1722, "moderator." He was occasionally mentioned as a "mariner" in legal documents, but having inherited by allotment the larger part of his father's homestead and added to it several new land purchases, upon which he kept considerable live stock, it is quite likely that farming was his chief occupation. He owned, though, one-half of a small fishing boat with his brother John, "valued at £9." At that period the Newichawannock and Piscataqua Rivers were famous salmon stations, and doubtless their fishing boat was employed principally in catching salmon. There are pretty good grounds for believing that PHILIP was killed suddenly by Indians in May of 1723. Children-№ Philip (see elsewhere), № Joseph (see elsewhere), and Elizabeth (b posthumous, bap Nov 21, 1723," in Timothy Weymouth, of Kittery).

E¹ MOSES—b in Kittery July 8, 1700, d in Kittery 1757 or 1784, m Dec 26, 1723, Abigail Heard (b Apl 15, 1702, d about 1768), youngest dau of Capt. John * and Jane (Cole-Littlefield) Heard. Dec 10, 1716, ^{*} Capt. John Heard lived on Sturgeon Creek. He taught awhile the school at "Alewive," Mc, and was known locally as a lusty Indian fighter, his first wife Phebe (by whom he had Dorcas, Phebe, Shuah and James) having been killed by Indians July 4, 1991. He then married in July, 1698, widow Jane (Cole) Littlefield, dau of Nicholas Cole and relict of Joseph Littlefield, and had Jane, Mary and Abigail. His will was probated Jan 6, 1752, the inventory amounting to £674. 11s.

his brother Philip was appointed his guardian, and John Heard and Nathan Bartlett sureties to the bond of £,200, MOSES being in his "noonage, and disenabled to act on his part and proportion of his father's estate." MOSES HUBBARD later became a "joyner," and was elected July 2, 1724, "juryman for ye next Inferior Court to be held at York," and Feb 20, 1724-5, "constable for the year ensuing and refuses to serve," and Mch 12, 1732-3, "grand juryman," also Mch 18, 1733-4, "grand juryman for trials for next Superior Court, to be holden at York." June 2, 1728, he "and Abigail, his wife, owned the covenant, and their children, John Heard and Jane [were] baptized." Aug 8, 1736, "Abigail, wife of MOSES HUBBARD, received into the Chh." He resided in South Berwick until 1737, and then removed to Kittery, now Eliot, and settled upon "Heard's Tract," of five or six hundred acres. His estate was insolvent. ^{† &}quot;Berwick originally formed a part of the patent to Capt. John Mason and Sir Fernando Gorges. It was called by the Indians 'Newichawannock.' Settlements were supposed to have been made there as early as 1624, as mention is made of the settlement of Newichawannock being seven years old in 1631. Ambrose Gibbons and Humphrey Chadbourne lived at Newichawannock in 1631. In 1634 Mason and Gorges divided their possessions and the territory east of the Piscataqua was assigned to Gorges, while Mason took New Hampshire. Another name for the place was 'Piscataqua,' so selling any. He gave to his sons Aaron, Richard and Jonathan some 300 acres in Shapleigh, where they settled in the westerly part of the town, and to his daughters Elizabeth Neal, Hannah Hodgdon, Abigail Goodwin, and Sarah Goodwin he left "each a feather-bed." To John and Ichabod he bequeathed the homestead and buildings, and to sons Moses and Stephen "if the said Moses and Stephen are now living and return home to Berwick all my interest in the 3d Division in Shapleigh, and if they do not return, then to go to John and Ichabod." His estate at death was valued at £1,031. 18. 8. From Mch 17, 1766, he was called "Captain," and led a company in Rev. War in Col. James Scammon's regiment. F2 JOHN HEARD-b in Wells Aug 23, 1735, d between Aug 23, 1790, and July 4, 1791, m pub Dec 3, 1748, to Hannah Neal of Kittery, dau Andrew and Dorcas Neal, both adm to church Jan 25, 1756, when Hannah was also baptized. He was a "tanner", and a prominent, enterprising citizen of Wells; elected Mch 5, 1759, and Mch 10, 1760, surveyor of highways, and was the first inhabitant of Wells to adopt a middle name, which he always signed in full. A senseless custom prevailed in that period of rating men in the church, there being three ranks. JOHN HEARD HUBBARD was declared to be of the first rank, and his brother Warwick of the second rank. He was called "captain," was a Rev. soldier, and was particularly prominent as a successful Indian fighter. His will, probated Mch 25, 1791, bequeaths "to my son Heard Hubbard £, 10, to my son Asa Hubbard £, 3. 2s., to my daughters Abigail Emmons, Hannah Hussey, Eunice Chaney, Jane Neal, and the heirs of my daughters Dorcas Buffum and Mary Gillpatrick, deceased, each a new testament, they having received their portion, and to my son Noah Hubbard [named executor of the will] all my lands and all my estate not already disposed of." The inventory amounted to £,104. 18., and the liabilities to £136. 2. 6.; so the estate was insolvent. Children-Abigail (bap Jan 25, 1756, m June 26, 1770, Obadiah Emmons), Dorcas

He was firm and resolute in his devotion to principle, and was elected Mch 22, 1775, member of committee on correspondence dealing with war matters. Afterward he enlisted a company for eight months and marched to Cambridge, Mass., where he was killed. "Joseph Storer, John Littlefield, Noah M. Littlefield, and JAMES HUBBARD were active officers in the great struggle and sealed their devotion to their country with their blood," reads the history of Wells and Kennebunk. Old warriors! whose adored remains, in weeping vaults her hallowed earth contains—Alexander Pope.

The original records of the War of the Revolution are scattered over the world-some in England (captured by the enemy), some in the hands of private individuals, and the balance (not burned or destroyed in various conflicts) are in the custody of libraries and State governments; also in the State, War, Navy, Pension, Treasury and Interior Departments at Washington, D. C. These valuable documents are practically inaccessible, particularly in the State Department, where the most important ones are, they being not yet indexed or open to public scrutiny; hence the difficulty of furnishing a complete roster of all "Hubbard" combatants (probably, though, nine-tenths of the whole number are contained herein) or full data about those hereinafter mentioned. The compiler embraced some unusual opportunities, however, for examination of a part of the records in government custody, and has copied from them the information substantially as found, which, though incomplete and disjointed, is sufficient to show actual participation in the great conflict. In many cases the length of service is greater than the subjoined data would indicate. Where the faintest uncertainty existed whether those of the same name were identical or not, the name will be found repeated. When known, the names of commanders of organizations are given. The designations "company," "regiment," or "battalion," are usually omitted to save space. Occasionally will be found conflicting dates, not explainable. No "Hubbards" were discovered among Maryland, Delaware, Georgia, North Carolina, or South Carolina troops. Not conclusive proof, however, that there were none. Some soldiers went from their own into other States and enlisted.

Again the compiler calls attention to the grotesque spelling of this and earlier periods. There is probably no surname in its transmission from the ancient to the present epoch that has not suffered radical changes. So readers in tracing ancestry from old documents must continually remember that sounds to the ear and not forms to the eye governed "ye olden scribe," and be not, consequently, diverted from the trail. For instance, in the Massachusetts Revolutionary archives on file in the State House at Boston the name "Hawkes Hubbard" gives the same war service under the names Hobart, Hobard, Hubbard, and Hubbard, thus proving them to be identical. Being of Hingham, where "Hobarts" were numerous, he doubtless descended from Edmund Hobart, whose posterity have nearly all retained the "Hobart" form of spelling their name.

Under Miscellaneous is given a list of some of the patriotic societies of the United States.

And ever since historian writ, and ever since a bard could sing,
Doth each exalt, with all his wit, the noble art of murdering.
And while in fashion picturesque, the poet rhymes of blood and blows,
The grave historian, at his desk, describes the same in classic prose.

— William Makepeace Thackeray.

In the Spring of 1774 two families left Connecticut and settled on a very arable and high rolling table-land in Rutland County on a spur of the Green Mountains, called, locally, Pittsford Mountains. This territory was then in New York State. In 1775 they were followed by seven other Connecticut families, some of which were named Hickock, Hubbard, Keeler, Kellogg and Selleck. Hubbardton is accessible by roads running from Port Orwell on Lake Champlain, Ticonderoga, Crown Point and Skenesborough.

July 7, 1777, a hot battle was fought here, the principal fighting being done on the slope between the meeting-house and the big tree seen in the foreground. The British were victorious in this contest, and were commanded by General Fraser, who was reinforced late in the contest by General Reidisel with his German regiment. Colonels Warner and Francis commanded the American troops, the latter meeting here a brave death. The defection of Colonel Hale with 700 men was the principal cause of the American defeat. He claimed that his men were too sick and worn out to fight and retreated with them toward Castleton, about six miles southwest, to join General St. Clair, who was then stationed there. The day before this battle a band of Indians and Tories under Captain Sherwood captured the male inhabitants of Hubbardton and confined them at Ticonderoga. Two afterward escaped. The rest were rescued upon the surrender of Burgoyne. The females and children of the deserted families then retraced their steps over the rocky hills to their old Connecticut homes. From the prominent boulder in the foreground a British soldier was shot dead by an American sentry, as he leaped upon it to reconnoiter the American encampment.

The compiler spells this name "Hobart" because his descendants generally prefer such form of orthography and scout at the idea of any other being correct. The writer thinks he was a "Hubbard" scion, and so gives him and his descendants space in this volume, but quarrels not with those who think differently. Many of the early Colonial writers wrote the name "Hubbard," and Adolphus Skinner Hubbard, San Francisco, Cal., one of EDMUND'S descendants, now uses this form of spelling the name. A large portion of the following genealogical records has been taken from town histories, which somewhat impair their accuracy and throw a little shadow of doubt upon the number and correct names of his children. In the shire of Norfolk, England, are various parishes giving in full the antecedents and data of the family of this EDMUND HOBART, including his first wife's name, his children's names, etc., which the compiler was precluded from obtaining on account of exorbitant fees demanded.

Eng., and died in Hingham, Mass., Mch 8, 1648. He arrived with his wife, son Joshua, daughters Rebekah and Sarah, and servant, Henry Gibbs, in May, 1633, and settled in Charlestown, Mass. (The mother of these children, whom he married in England in 1597, died in 1641.) He was made a freeman March 4, 1633–4 and admitted to full communion in the First Church of Christ* in Boston August 19, 1633-4, and stood No. "15" on the "freeman's list," and was one of ten citizens October 13, 1634, who, with Increase Nowell, agreed that only certain desirable persons should be allowed to "sit downe and dwell in the towne." In 1635 he was the constable of Charlestown. This same year he removed to Bear Cove (Hingham) and assisted in organizing the first church there, of which his son Peter was the first minister, and was made a commissioner Sep 6, 1638, the functions being similar to those of a Justice of the Peace nowadays, permitting him to officiate at marriage ceremonies, a privilege then denied to many ministers. He was Deputy

MEMORIAL TABLET IN THE OLD HINGHAM CHURCH.

PETER, second son of Edmund Hobart, Sr., was born in 1604 in Hingham, Norfolk, England, and died in Hingham, Mass., Jan. 20, 1679. He graduated at Magdalene College, Cambridge University, in 1625, as Master of Arts, and taught there for a short period, and was ordained by the Bishop of Norwich in 1627. He preached in England for 10 years and left Haverhill, Eng., in April, 1635, arriving at Charlestown, Mass., June 8, 1635, with his wife (d about 1636) and four children in one of a fleet of seven vessels. He joined the Charlestown church June 30, 1635. The first entry made in his Journal reads as follows: "1635—June 8, I, with my wife and four children, came safely to New England June 8, 1635. Forever praised be the God of Heaven, my God and my King!" His father, Edmund, and brothers Joshua, Edmund, Jr. and Thomas, had arrived a year or two earlier. September 2, 1635, he was made a freeman, and September 18, 1635, he, with 29 others, founded Hingham (name changed from Bear Cove), Mass., formally drawing their houselots upon that day. From 1635 to 1679 he preached in Hingham, according to the memorial tablet now in the church, which was open for public worship January 8, 1682, the land being donated by Capt. Joshua Hobart, * PETER'S youngest brother. The new church cost "£430 and the old house." PETER was then dead. Rev. Robert Peck was his colleague, or "teacher," the functions of which office were "doctrinal and scriptural explanation," the minister's being "private and public exhortation." PETER was an independent and spirited clergyman and espoused somewhat too warmly his late sovereign's cause and English customs generally, which occasionally brought him up before the General Court to answer for his outspoken opinions. In 1646 he was fined £,20 for "seditious practices and derogation of and contempt for authority," and was "bound to his good behavior." He defended his brothers Joshua, Edmund and Thomas against charges of insubordination preferred by Lieut. Anthony Eames, commanding officer of the "train band," and a member of his own church. This was a bitter and disagreeable quarrel and agitated Hingham for many years. The various active participants were fined a sum total of £155, 10s., to which Joshua contributed £,20, Edmund Jr. £,5, and Thomas and PETER £,2 each.

Governor Winthrop referred to him in the following language: "There was a great marriage to be solemnized at Boston. The bridegroom being of Hingham (Mr. Hubbard's church), he was procured to preach, ^{*} Capt. Joshua Hobart gave the deed for the site of this meeting-house July 8, 1681. But little is known about the first meeting-house except that it was enclosed by a palisade and had a belfry and bell, which were used principally for defensive purposes against the hostile attacks of the unconverted aborigines. The present meeting-house (see illustration) stands on Main Street, near the railway station, and is the oldest church in New England that has been used continuously as a house of worship. The principal timbers in it were taken from the first house. There were no stoves in it until 1822, when two of the front pews were removed to make room for them. The deacons occupied seats directly under the pulpit. Most of the seats were simple oak benches arranged in rows. One pew was reserved for the widow of Rev. Peter Hobart, which was occupied upon her death by the wife of the second minister, Rev., John Norton. A warm division of opinion, lasting over a year, existed among the congregation regarding its site. This was only terminated by the mandate of the Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and his Magistrates, who ordered the building erected where it now stands. The Tablet gives the list of divines from the beginning to the present, together with their terms of service.

and came to Boston to that end. But the magistrate hearing of it sent to him to forbear. The reasons were, (1) For that his spirit had been discovered to be averse to our ecclesiastical and civil government, and he was a bold man and would speak his mind; (2) We were not willing to bring in the English custom of ministers performing the solemnity of marriage, which sermons at such times might induce; but if any minister were present, and would bestow a word of exhortation, &c., it was permitted."

He signed his name "Hubberd," though it was more commonly spelled "Hobart." By his parishioners he was greatly admired, respected, and loved. He had a second wife; the names of both have never yet been ascertained. Children (first four born in England)— Joshua, Jeremiah, Josiah, Elizabeth, Ichabod, Hannah, Hannah, Bathsheba, Israel, Jael, Gershom, Japhet, Nehemiah, David, Rebecca, Abigail and Lydia.

JOSHUA, youngest son of Edmund Hobart, Sr., was born in England (probably Hingham) in 1614, and died July 28, 1682. He came with his father to Charlestown, Mass., in 1633, and was admitted to the church December 27, 1633; made freeman September 3, 1634. He was No. 53 on the Freeman's List of 1635-6, and then owned "2 acres of planting ground." In 1637 he sold his 10-acre lot on the Mystic side of the river to T. Squire and T. Ewer; removed to Hingham in 1635; married at Cambridge March 14, 1638, Ellen Ibrook. He was deputy magistrate in the General Court from 1643 to 1668. June 28, 1645, he prominently figured in the revolt against the authority of Lieut Anthony Eames, commanding officer of Hingham's "train band," a famous militia organization in those days. Bozoun Allen, whose cause JOSHUA espoused, was elected captain in opposition to Eames, and so fierce was the factional feeling resulting from it that the grave magistrates at Boston were kept busy many months in their efforts to quell the agitation this disturbance had brought into the community. The "Hingham Mutiny," as it was called, occupied a prominent place in colonial matters in those days and made the warmest friends bitter foes, threatening alike at one period to disrupt that prosperous colony. Afterward JOSHUA was made captain of this Artillery Company. For his activity and "sedition," displayed in this insurrection, he paid into the General Court's exchequer June 28, 1645, the sum of £,20. May 8, 1656, he was the attorney that settled the estate of William Vassall (deceased), a prominent English immigrant. Afterward this estate was sold for £120. JOSHUA, John Cushen and Mathyas Briggs signed the deed of conveyance. "SAAC HUBBARD settled at New Brunswick, and at his decease was the senior magistrate of the county of Sunbury. He died at Burton, in 1834, aged 86"—From American Loyalists, published at Boston in 1847.

"DANIEL HUBBARD, of Boston—An Addresser of Hutchinson in 1774, and a Protestor against the Whigs the same year. In 1775

he was an addresser of Gage"—Ibid.

"NATHANIEL HUBBARD went to St. John, New Brunswick, in 1783, and was a grantee of that city. He removed to the Parish of Burton, County of Sunbury, where he was a magistrate and where he died in 1824, aged 78"—Ibid.

"WILLIAM HUBBARD—At the Peace he went to St. John, New Brunswick, and was a grantee of that city. He settled in Sunbury County, and was a register of deeds and wills, deputy surrogate, member of the house of assembly, and chief justice of the court of common pleas. He died in that country in 1813"—Ibid.

REV. BELA HUBBARD, of New Haven, Ct, was a mild royalist, the nature of his ordination vows, taken in England, vowing allegiance to his sovereign, was sufficient to keep him neutral. He saved much of the valuable personal effects of his parishioners from British capture by hiding such in his church in New Haven, and often used his official influence to prevent overt acts against their persons and property (see Prominent American Hubbards).

JOSEPH HUBBARD, son of Elizabeth and John Hubbard, one of the early settlers of Pomfret, Ct, had tory proclivities, according to a family tradition, and fled to Nova Scotia—then a rendezvous for royalists—to avoid participating in a conflict against his neighbors and near kinsmen. Another account by one of his descendants, of more value, probably, relates that he lived on a farm adjoining that of "Old Put." Both continued to be good friends despite their adverse views upon colonial government. "Old Put" advised him to sell out, which he did, disposing of his farm and farming utensils for £1,000 sterling. Taking what household goods he could load upon an ox wagon he removed to and settled upon "Tory Hill," in Salisbury, Ct., where he remained and brought up his family.

JAMES HUBARD, Jr. (son of "James of Gloster" [Gloucester], a large land and ship owner and vestryman of the Church of England), was born Feb 6, 1743, and known as "A United Empire Royalist" at the outbreak of the American Revolution. Partaking largely of commercial benefits by maritime trade with England fostered his allegiance to the crown, which prosperity he imagined would decay if the supremacy of American independence was established. His pronounced sympathies caused his departure to that country upon the British man-ofwar Fedowa in company with Lord Dunmore, Royal Governor of Virginia, where he remained until the war's close, when he returned, only to find his entire possessions confiscated. He then settled in New York City, where he eventually died and was buried in Christ Church Cemetery. His wife was Fanny Morton, daughter of Henry Morton. Of his four children, Mathew went to India with Lord Cornwallis and probably died there; Frances (who was once engaged to Lord Dunmore's brother and eventually discarded him), married a son of General St. Clair, Robert St. Clair, of Staunton, Va.; Charlotte married a Mr. Griggs, lawyer, of Jefferson County, Va.; and the remaining daughter married a Mr. Bowyer of Lexington, Va. JAMES HUBARD, Jr., had brothers Mathew, William and John, and sisters Anne, Elizabeth, Margaret and May, one of whom was the grandmother of President Zachary Taylor, who had a brother named Hubbard Taylor.

HON. CHESTER DORMAN HUBBARD, M. C., of Wheeling, West Virginia.

(Descended from William Hubbard of Ipswich, Mass.)

Civil and religious freedom go hand in hand, and in no country can much of the one exist without producing a corresponding portion of the other—Charles Caleb Colton.

WILLIAM HUBBARD of Ipswich, Suffolk, Eng., was born in 1594, and graduated at Cambridge University, Eng., in 1620. He sailed from London in the ship Defence in 1635, "Edmond Bostocke, master," and landed in Boston, Mass, Oct 6, 1635, accompanied by his wife (probably second wife) Judith (Knapp) Hubbard, daughter of John and Martha (Blosse) Knapp, of Ipswich, Eng., and six children. The shipping list of passengers of the Defence reports him "husbandman,* aged 40 years; Judith, 25; Martha, 22; Mary, 20; John, 15; William, 14; Nathaniel, 6; and Richard, 4 years."

He bought land of Thomas Dudley, Esq., to whom it had been granted in October this same year (1635). Mr. Dudley had erected a house upon it. This parcel consisted of nine acres "lyinge betweene Goodman Cross on the West and a lott intended to Mr. Bradstreet on the East." Another parcel he purchased consisted of "twentie five acres, late Goodman Mussey's, lyinge betweene John Shatswell and a lott late Goodman Cross's, now Mr. Saltonstall's;" also "a ten-acre lott in the Reedy Marsh:" also "100 acres of Meaddow and 100 acres of upland at the farr meaddow where he would choose it." He acquired considerable more land later. Some of it was on Plum Island, Hog Island, and Castle Neck. Among "Old Norfolk County Deeds" is the following instrument recorded: "May 22, 1657, William Hubbard, Senr, of Ipswich, New England, in ye County of Essex, gent., and ^{*}Chaucer defined "husbandman" as "the master of a family." Since his time it has lost that significance and now means a tiller of the ground. William Hubbard was undoubtedly a gentleman of easy circumstances and much landed estate in England, and left there because of a sense of irritation to his religious views caused by the unbearable interference and restrictions then placed upon freedom of worship in the old country.

Judith, his wife, to Captain Thomas Wiggin, of Quamscooke, in New England," for consideration of £60 quitclaim 1000 acres of land, more or less, consisting of "all yt their peell & peells of land granted them by a genl Court held at Boston on ye fourteenth day of October in ye yeare of our Lord 1656, containing of estimacon 1,000 acres of land, be the same more or less;" also 890 acres "situate, lying and being uppon the north side of Quocheche River, about eight or nine miles from the Mills, the nûber of eight hundred & ninety Acres in a pine swamp;" also 110 acres "on both sides of the same river, about three or four miles above the mills." (Signed:) "WILLIAM HUBBARD, Judith Hubbard." Acknowledged May 22, 1657. The 890 acres laid in Whitehall Swamp in what is now Rochester, N. H., and the 110 acres in Dover, N. H., which that town granted to him prior to this date.

He was the founder and principal benefactor of the Ipswich Grammar School in 1636, and gave one acre for its site (the Cogswell School House now stands upon that acre). He was made freeman May 2, 1638, and was Deputy to the General Court for six years, between 1638 and 1646, and commissioned in 1651 by the General Court to "marry people," not then a clergyman's prerogative; "Mr. Hubbert" was commissioner of Salem Court, 1654-56; Justice of the Quarterly Court in 1658; and "assistant" in 1659. In 1656 "for land granted him in 1652 and for £50 paid by him in England for the country, he has a grant of 1,000." In 1659 he was on a committee of complaints "that the ministers suffer for want of support." He removed to Boston in 1652, and was considered by [Captain Edward?] Johnson "a very learned man, being well read in state matters, of a very affable and humble behavior, who hath expended much of his estate to helpe on Although he be slow in speech, yet is he downright for the businesse." This laudation is supposed to refer to him when he was the principal of the Ipswich Grammar School. He died in Boston between June 8 and Aug 19, 1670. His will mentions sons William, Nathaniel, and Richard (but not John who must have died previously) and was probated Aug 19, 1670. It devised a considerable portion to his son, Rev. William, his then eldest son, according to the English law of primogeniture. It consisted of houses, buildings, and lands in Tendring Hundred, which is in Essex County on the south side of the River Stour, separating Essex from Suffolk County. The language of his will is: "My eldest son, William Hubbard, shall enjoy all my lands in Old England situated in tendring, both free and Coppyhold, with all other houses, buildings, and appurtenances thereunto belonging;" also house and land at Ipswich, "together with a parcel of meadow, six acres more or less, adjoining to ve land of Corporall Whipple, Cornett Whipple, and Serjeant Jecob, purchased of my cozen John Brown;" also another tract of 300 acres. Some of this land, in Essex County, England, may have included the "Maner of Bovills, Little Clacton (Devill or Dovell)," which was owned by a William Hubbard since 1552; then it was the property of "William Cardinall, gent." This William Hubbard may have been the ancestor of the William Hubbard of Ipswich who emigrated. Children—Martha, Mary, John, William, Nathaniel, and Richard.

MARTHA, eldest child of William, was born in England in 1613 in (probably) Essex County, and died July 13, 1689. She married John Whittingham of Sutterton (Southerton) near Boston, Lincolnshire, England, who came to Ipswich, Mass, in 1637-8, and died there in 1648. His wife MARTHA (to whom he bequeathed his realty in England jointly with his eldest son John), Rev. William Hubbard of Ipswich, his father-in-law, and his brother Samuel Hough were named as executors. He was reputed to have been the son of Daniel, born Nov 12, 1571, living at Kingsgate, Durham, Eng, in 1690, Daniel was the son (?) of William Whittingham, Dean of Durham. (Some authorities contend that John was the son of Baruch Whittingham.) He was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, a merchant and part owner of the ship Sarah. MARTHA (HUBBARD) WHITTINGHAM then married in 1651 widower Simon Eyre of Watertown and Boston, a surgeon who came from London in 1635 in the ship Increase and figures prominently in Watertown (Mass) annals. Children (by Whittingham)-John (dy), Martha, Richard, William,* ELIZABETH, JUDITH: (by Eyre)-Maria, and John (b Feb 19, 1653-4, mem Hon Arty Co in 1682, com safety 1689, representative 1693 and 1698; he had nine children.)

William Clarke, Boston, Mass, in Oct, 1731, wrote the following about her: "My grandmother by the mother's side was MARTHA HUBBARD, of the Ipswich Hubbards. The family was very considerable, she being in England brought up at a boarding school, and had always her attendants to wait upon her, and in those days wearing her gold watch, which was worn only by persons of distinction; * * * and I have often heard my grandmother speak of her living in England and the meanness of her living here, though at the very best rate, but would flatter herself that here she had pure worship which they were deprived of in the land of their nativity."

MARY, second child of William, was born in Ipswich, Eng, in 1615, and came with her parents to Ipswich, Mass. She married Thomas Scott, Ir., son of Thomas and Ann Scott, from Ipswich, Eng, who arrived on the Elizabeth in 1634 and removed to Hartford, Ct, about 1636, where he died Nov. 6, 1643, "by accident," and his widow, Ann Scott, married Nov 11, 1644, Thomas Ford and removed to Northampton, Mass, and died there May 5, 1675. Thomas Scott, Jr., died in 1657 at Stamford, Ct, and MARY (HUBBARD) SCOTT then became the second wife of Ezekiel Rogers, son of Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, whose first wife was said to have been a "Miss L. Paine" and second wife Margaret Crane. MARY (HUBBARD) SCOTT ROGERS died in 1675, leaving a son, Thomas, by her first husband, and Martha, Nathaniel, John, Ezekiel, Timothy, and Samuel by her second husband, whose death occurred July 5, 1674.

JOHN, third child and eldest son of William, Sr., was born in 1620 in England, probably in Essex County. Nothing has been learned of his career after arriving in Ipswich, Mass. He is supposed to have died within a short period after his arrival. He is not mentioned in his father's will, probated in 1670, nor does his name ever appear in any legal instruments wherein his brothers' and sisters' names are of frequent occurrence. It is a pretty safe conclusion that he died before 1665.

NATHANIEL, fifth child of William, Sr., was born in 1629 in England, probably in Essex County. He returned to England before 1672. This is proved by the will of his nephew, William Whittingham, whose father, John Whittingham, married NATHANIEL'S sister Martha. Mch 25, 1672, William Whittingham of Sutterton, Eng. late of Boston. Mass., merchant, made his will, which was probated in London, Eng., Apl 15, 1672, and a duplicate of it recorded July 23, 1672, in Liber 7, page 224, Probate Records Office, Boston, Mass. In this will among others, he mentions his mother Mrs. Martha Eire [Martha Hubbard, dau Rev. William, who m (1) John Whittingham and (2) Simon Eire], fatherin-law John Lawrence of New Yorke, in America, gentleman, brotherin-law John Clarke of Boston, uncle Nathaniel Hubbard, gentleman, London, Eng. [to whom he bequeathed £163], his "cozens Mary Hubbart & Anne Hubbert, daughters of my saide Uncle [Nathaniel] Hubbert, £,5. to each, to buy them Rings." He appointed as executors John Lawrence of New York, William Hubbard of Ipswich, Nathaniel Hubbard, and John Lewine of London. The inventory is a long one, of household effects and merchandise, including "one negro boy at £25," and amounts to £,666. 5s. 10d. NATHANIEL'S father's will, probated in Boston Aug 19, 1670, thus speaks of him: "To my son Nathaniel I have already given a sufficient portion of my land at Dover Court & otherwise." These various references to him seem to prove effectually that he returned to England and lived either at Dover Court or in some part of London.

RICHARD, sixth and youngest child of William, Sr., was born about 1631 in Essex County, England, and came over with his parents in the Defence in 1635. He attended Harvard University and became B. A. Aug 9, 1653, and M. A. in 1655. His college bills were paid (for his father, doubtless) by James Oliver, "mr will payne of Ipswich," and Joseph Jewett, according to Harvard College records. He married about 1658 Sarah Bradstreet, dau of Governor Simon and Anne (Dudley) Bradstreet (a brilliant poetess and the daughter of Gov. Thomas Dudlev). There is no record showing when he was made freeman, though he was a deputy to the General Court in 1660, feoffer of the grammar school in 1665, and a selectman Feb 20, 1665, and up to Nov 2, 1680, when he was made chairman; chosen "tithinman" Dec 20, 1677, and possessed of right of "comonage." In 1672 he is mentioned in the Journal of William Adams (H. U. 1671) as having given "several scriptures to consider of "to Thomas Whitteridge's wife, who was distressed at a fortune-teller's story, i. c., "vt she would meete with great trouble if she escaped with her life." This woman soon after drowned herself. "April 16, 1666, At a meeting of the selectman Mr. RICHARD HUB-BARD, Cornett Whipple, Ed: Coborne, and William Reiner [were] apoynted to run the line between Wennam and us," which shows that he possessed a knowledge of surveying. In 1679-80 he was on another committee appointed by the General Court to settle the boundary lines between Salem, Beyerly, and Wenham. His father left him a valuable farm of Soo acres at "the Hamlet" when he removed to Boston in 1662, which is now the town of Hamilton. He also owned ten "double shares" in Plum Island in 1664. He was one of the 27 richest men of the 230 freeholders of Ipswich in 1664. "Monday, May 2, 1681, Mr. Richard Hubbard of Ipswich Farms, dveth suddainly in the afternoon. Goeing to ly on's Bed after diner was there found dead by his daughter accidently goeing in thether." The inventory of his estate taken June 4, 1681, showed him worth £,1,457. 5s., which was settled by his administratrix, Sarah, his widow, who afterward and by Apl 12, 1683, had married Major Samuel Ward, widower, of Marblehead, who had a son, also named Major Samuel Ward. The court ordered Sep 27, 1681, in the distribution of his estate "that the eldest sonn shall for his portion have £260 and the rest of the children £130 p. peace," naming SARAH, RICH-ARD. NATHANIEL, JOHN, and SIMON, "and the rest be left to his widdow," etc. His assets consisted mostly of real estate, the land records in Ipswich showing a large number of transfers between him and others. Children-Sarah, Richard, Nathaniel, John, Simon, and William (see following).

What are monuments of bravery Where no public virtues bloom? What avail, in lands of slavery, Trophied temples, arch and tomb?—Thomas Campbell.

This Roster of Commissioned Officers in the Union Army during our late civil war was found among the manuscripts of the late Douglas Hubbard, and is printed in this volume that our posterity may pay homage to the memory of those who placed country above life. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of others, bearing the Hubbard name, who served in the ranks and yielded to the same spirit of devotion, have not yet been collated from war records for various reasons. It is to be hoped that this will be done at some future period.

A minister is like a Kahikatea tree—full of fruit, which causes a grove to grow up around it; so that it the parent tree be cut down, its place is more than supplied by those which proceed from it—William Tauri.

WILLIAM HUBBARD, fourth child and second son of William Hubbard, Sr., of Ipswich, Mass., was born in 1621 in Essex County, England. After his parents had settled in 1635 in Ipswich, he entered Harvard College and graduated, a Master of Arts, in a class of nine, the second Tuesday in August, 1642, in the first class ever graduated from an American college. He also studied medicine there, in conjunction with his other studies. May 18, 1653, he was made a freeman. About 1646 he married Mary Rogers* (b in Feb, 1628, alive as late as Mch 25, 1685), only dau of Rev. Nathaniel and Margaret (Crane) Rogers, formerly of Coggeshall, Essex Co, Eng. July 4, 1656, he began to preach in Ipswich as the colleague of Mr. Thomas Cobbett. Nov 17. 1658, he was ordained minister and began then to make himself felt in the colony as a scholar, historian, and divine. Until this period, since graduating, but little was heard of him. Many of his sermons have been printed. His last publication was entitled "Dying Testimony to the Order of the Churches," prepared jointly by himself and Mr. John Higginson of Salem. Mch 19, 1677, his "Indian Wars" received the approbation of the colonial censors and was soon published in Boston. Under the name of "Present State of New England" it was licensed + Accompanying this edition was the first map engraving produced in America. It was highly praised for accuracy. A fac-simile is on exhibition in the Old State House at Boston.

^{*} Many writers in referring to her call her "Margaret." In all legal instruments on record from Mch 20,7661, to 1685, she is called "Mary," and Apl 3, 1662, she signs herself "Mary Hubbard" to a quitclaim deed to John Appleton of Ipswich, of 12 acres of land, for consideration of £88, 108. It could be possible, though doubtful, that he had a still earlier wife named Margaret. Of his public affairs we know much, of his domestic ones but little, he avoiding reference to them in all of the numerous papers he bequeathed to posterity.

to appear in London. Mr. Hubbard went over early in 1678 to superintend its publication and returned in October, 1678. For his History of New England, brought up to 1650 and finished in 1680, he received, Oct 11, 1682, £50 as a "manifestation of thankfulness" from the General Court. £25 was to have been paid to him when "he procured a fayre coppie to be written, that it be fitted for the presse." The manuscript of this work, in several handwritings, is in the Library of the Massachusetts Historical Society, the corrections only being in his handwriting, This copy was rescued from the flames in August, 1775, by Rev. Dr. Andrew Eliot in an attack made by a mob upon the house of Gov. Thomas Hutchinson, who held royalistic ideas, and presented to the Society April 9, 1791, by his son, Rev. John Eliot, D. D. It is quite smoky looking, and also brown with age. The Preface, Chapter 1, and nearly all of Chapter 2 are missing, as well as the end of the book. As it now appears, the beginning is upon page 9, which abruptly reads-"famous Prince Charles of blessed memory," etc. Many of the events in this history were taken from Gov. Winthrop's Diary, for which the credit was doubtless given by him in the missing preface. Cotton Mather in his Magnalia gives him credit for assistance as follows: "Mr. J. Higginson and Mr. W. HUBBARD have assisted me, and much obliged me with information for many parts of our history." Rev. John Eliot considered Mr. HUBBARD the most eminent minister in the county of Essex, Mass, "equal to any in the province for learning and candour, and superior to all his contemporaries as a writer."

Herewith is a fac simile of his signature: Hullam Hullar

July 1, 1684, on account of the "sudden visitation by sickness" of John Rogers, his wife's grandfather, President of Harvard University, he was appointed to "manage" the commencement and confer the degrees. The day following "the Rev'd Mr. Rogers dyed, the sun beginning to emerge out of a Central Eclipps." President Rogers had changed the date of the commencement to one day earlier than the first date set, after learning of the expected eclipse. "Wee are not superstitious in it, but reckon it very inconvenient," he said. June 2, 1688, while President Increase Mather was in Europe, Rev. WILLIAM was appointed by Sir Edmund Andros, Royal Governor, to again officiate as President of the College at the commencement exercises. As no degrees were conferred that year he could not have presided this second time. In 1693 he certified to the good character of Sarah Buckley, wife of William Buckley, which saved her life, she being tried for "witchcraft," but cleared on account of her good character. June 26, 1696, he sent an important paper to Gov. John Archdale of South Carolina, treating upon the immigration of Ipswich residents to that State. "March 15, 1694, he contracted to marry his housekeeper, Mary, the widow of Samuel Pearce" (who had a daughter Abigail Pearce who m John Hodgkins of Ipswich), which was extremely distasteful to his parish, she being considered greatly below him in station, though they "would allow her to be a worthy woman." He officiated as pastor of the Ipswich Church until Aug 2, 1702, upon which day, according to the church records, "The Rev'd Mr. HUBBARD detained the Brethren of the Church and signified and declared his inability [through age] to carry on the work of the ministry any longer among them, and desired that they would take care and procure helpe to carry on sd work." May 6, 1703, he formally relinquished the pulpit and his people donated him £,60. He lived near the River at a place called "Turkey Shore." Sept 14, 1704, he died. "He goes to ye Lecture, after to Col. Apleton's, goes home, sups, and dyes that night." The town of Ipswich voted £ 32 to pay his funeral expenses, and Oct 17, 1704, the proceeds of the old meeting-house (£,20) were added to the original sum. His widow was left in indigent circumstances. At a town meeting held "March ye 14. 1709-10, voted: that £,20 money be added to the Town rates for supplying of Mrs. Hubbard, in her distressed condition." She died "Feb 28, 1710, [11] aged 53," according to the epitaph upon her tombstone in Ipswich. Students and scholars are much indebted to Mr. HUBBARD'S patient, painstaking historical researches for their knowledge of New England events between 1620 and 1630. He toiled ceaselessly for knowledge-human and divine, and possessed some property during his lifetime, but his liberality caused him to mortgage much of it. July 20, 1674, he mortgaged his Ipswich house and 30 acres, "part of Haffield's farm," and 12 acres of other land for £,324 sterling to John Richards of Boston. February 14, 1664, he owned 7 double shares in Plum Island, Hog Island, and Castle Neck. July 24, 1676, he had an interest in the land and dwelling-house of one Thomas Cowell, and Elizabeth his wife, living near Kittery, Me, on a neck of land between Spruce Creek and the Piscataqua River, together with "Granthum's Island," the consideration being £,80, "payable in merchantable fish within four years." This property afterward came into the possession of his eldest son John, which was conveyed by his son, "Nathaniel Hubbard of Dorchester, Mass, Esq, as administrator of his father's estate, June 26, 1719, to Elisha Gunnison of Kittery, shipwright, for £35." Children (by Mary Rogers), MARGARET, JOHN, and NATHANIEL (see following).

MARGARET, eldest child of Rev. William and Mary (Rogers) Hubbard, was born Oct 15, 1647, and died Nov 11, 1716. She married John Pyncheon, Jr.,* a distinguished scholar and soldier, who ranked as colonel in the King Philip Indian War and who commanded all the Connecticut Valley troops during this period. He was the son of John and Amy (Wyllys) Pyncheon, whose father, William Pyncheon,† was one of the original founders of Agawam (Springfield, Mass), where John, Jr., his grandson, was Clerk of the Courts and Register of Deeds, and who died there Apl 25, 1721, though he and his wife had lived previously in Boston and Ipswich. While living in Boston MARGARET joined the Ipswich Church by "taking the covenant" Jan 18, 1673. Children—John (d July 12, 1742), MARGARET (m Capt Nathaniel Downing), and William (b 1689, d Jan 1, 1741, m Catherine Brown, dau Rev. Daniel Brown of Ipswich).

NATHANIEL, youngest child of William and Mary (Rogers) Hubbard, was born in Ipswich in 1650 and is thought to have removed to Boston after 1680. He is supposed to have been in business with his brother John as a merchant. Further traces of him are lost. The Ipswich town records from 1634 to 1700 are missing; only a few scattering ones now appear. If Nathaniel died there at an early age, which might possibly be the case, there is now no record of it in the town books.

IOHN, second child of Rev. William and Mary (Rogers) Hubbard, was born in 1648 in Ipswich, Mass. He joined Ipswich Church Jan 25, 1673, and was made freeman Oct 11, 1676. His talents were of a commercial cast, and he soon became a leading merchant of Boston, where he and his family removed in 1680, and where for many years during the latter part of the seventeenth century he was Treasurer of Suffolk County, He married in 1671 Ann Leverett (b Nov 23, 1652, d Sep, 1717), second daughter of Gov. John Leverett and his second wife, Mrs. Sarah Sedgwick. Though wealthy at one time he died insolvent Jan 8, 1709-10, Children (born in Boston and baptized in Old South Church)—Mary (b Oct 25, 1673, m at Boston July 1, 1708, Rev. This call caused widespread discussion throughout the State, his views being in advance of his time. An active minority opposed his ordination, which finally took place June 22, 1769. At length his uniform courtesy to his opponents, amiable disposition, and pleasing manners healed the breach. His theological views accord with those of the Cong. Church of the present day. He was thrown from a sleigh during the winter of 1783, which caused his retirement from the ministry and led to his death about two years later. C., which are dated February 19, 1814, and November 10, 1814, Norwich, Ct. He also served fourteen days as private, doing guard duty under "Old Put" at Horseneck during the Revolution. Though professedly a farmer he owned and conducted a stone quarry, saw-mill, and brickkiln, and filled various civil offices, being Justice of the peace, tax collector of New Haven, a chorister and afterward deacon of the First Society (now Center Church) of New Haven. He lived in an old stone house that was supposed to have been built by his grandfather, Dr. John Hubbard. It stood about one mile east of historic Judge's Cave, near Springside Home. |2 DANIEL-born in New London, Ct., June 13, 1736, lived in Boston, London, Eng., also South America, and died in 1796 at St. Croix, West Indies, where he had vast mercantile interests. He graduated in 1775 at 39 years of age from Harvard College, and was a loyalist during the Revolutionary War. After the British evacuation of Boston in 1776 the Council authorized a committee to ascertain the names of those persons "that have since the 19th of April, 1775, endeavored to counteract the struggles of the State and United States for the preservation of their liberties and privileges." In the list of 29 persons submitted by the committee appears the name of "Daniel Hubbard." OUGLAS HUBBARD, second son of Henry and Sophia (Whitney) Hubbard, was born in Pittsfield, Mass., June 21, 1817, and died in New York City Sep 18, 1885. He married March 2, 1837, widow Loretta Watson of Washington, D. C. (d Sep 12, 1877) whose children changed their name from "Watson" to "Hubbard," DOUGLAS HUBBARD was a scholarly gentleman, and was the Consulate Clerk at Hobart* Town, and Melbourne, Australia, from 1850 to 1860, when he returned to the United States and was appointed by Secretary Chase to a $1,600 clerkship in the Second Comptroller's Office, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C. This position he filled from 1861 to 1878. when he removed to Saint Johnland, Long Island, where he gave his entire time to studying the science of genealogy and making numerous family "trees" for various Hubbard descendants. He was a rapid and tireless worker in the cause, the mainspring of his efforts being unbounded enthusiasm and a natural aptitude for statistics. His work was confined chiefly to the descendants of George Hubbard of Wethersfield, Milford, and Guilford, Ct., though he traced out some of the branches of the William Hubbard, Ipswich, Mass., branch, whom he regarded as a possible brother to this George Hubbard. Nothing has arisen since his time to prove or disprove this theory. In his genealogies he recorded George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct., as the son of George Hubbard of Wethersfield, Milford and Guilford, Ct. During his last years he lived in New York City and left a valuable collection of genealogical data, much of which, unfortunately, fell into unappreciative Hubbard hands. A part of this collection was a monster "Hubbard Tree" fully thirtytwo feet long, and about two feet wide. This is a marvellous specimen of patience and research. His daughter, Agnes, however, has nearly as large a "tree" or roll, which, though received very late, has been made some use of by the compiler. It is twenty-eight feet long by sixteen inches wide. Children—Marcellus (b 1862, d y), Sophia (b 1863), Agnes (b 1865), Isabel (b 1867), Elfreda (b 1868), and Manuel (b 1870, d y).

EDWIN HUBBARD, eldest child of Harvey and Jennie Doane (Galpin) Hubbard, was born in Berlin, Ct., July 29, 1811, and died in Bennington, Vt., April 13, 1891. He married in Berlin Oct 14, 1832, Hannah Root North (b Oct 14, 1816), dan of Lemuel and Rebecca (Goodrich) North, and had ten children, four of whom, surviving childhood only, died before he did. EDWIN HUBBARD was a born genealogist, and collected data from boyhood to old age about his own and numerous other families, comprising Bradford, Goodrich, Heald, Drury, Towne, Powers, and others. His inventions of Ancestral Registers or printed tabular forms were most excellent models for copying data into.

In early life he was in the carriage business, but abandoned that in 1838 to remove "away out west" to Millersport, Ohio, where in a log cabin he kept store for awhile. In 1843 he returned East to Meriden, Ct., and engaged in the insurance business. He started in 1854 a banking business at Cape May, N. J., but returned to Meriden and opened a news office, which he maintained until 1859, when he left for Chicago, and lived at Oak Park, a suburban villa, for many years, Here he did a great deal of genealogical labor, being remarkably conscientious and painstaking in preparing his data. The couple were now childless, and accepted the invitation of their grandson, Charles Hoadley, to pass their remaining days at his home in Bennington, Vt. His widow died May 4, 1894, at Clinton, Ct. Children-Walter Norris (b June 10, 1834, d Feb 19, 1879, m July 10, 1871, Jessie A. Fac Simile of One of Edwin Hubbard's "Ancestral Registers."

Children's children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children is their fathers.—

*Proverbs. 17: 6.

A not inconsiderable portion of the following data of GEORGE HUBBARD, his wife, and their descendants has been copied from a huge manuscript volume filed in the town clerk's office at Guiford. The original of this volume was compiled from town records by Dr. Alvan Talcott, A. M., during a residence of 50 years in Guilford, who bequeathed it to the New Haven Colony Historical Society. It embraces 178 family pedigrees of the early inhabitants of Guilford and is fairly correct. The compiler does not indorse all data found therein, however. In the list of GEORGE HUBBARD'S children is mentioned a son "George Hubbard, born 1633, removed to Greenwich." No son George is mentioned in his will. He must either have died before his father, or else the date of his birth is incorrect, also the statement that he removed to Greenwich, if we attempt to reconcile the identity of this George with the George Hubbard who settled in Middletown and died there March 18, 1634-5. The before-mentioned volume gives the birth of GEORGE HUBBARD of Guilford as 1594. If George Hubbard of Middletown was born in 1601, according to his will, it is hard to become reconciled to the theory that he was the son of GEORGE HUBBARD of Guilford, though he might have been a cousin. Old England records could alone unweave this tangle. The compiler does not believe American records can do it.

GEORGE HUBBARD was born in England, and probably somewhere in the southeastern section, that part being numerously populated by Hubbards. There remains nothing but conjecture to determine the exact locality, the towns enumerated by various chronologers being so plentiful as to shatter all faith. It has been written that he was born near Boston, Lincolnshire; in Ockley and Guildford, Surrey; Wethersfield, Essex; Wakefield, Yorkshire; in the shire of Devon and in the county of Kent. A slight preference perhaps might be given to Essex or Surrey.

Tradition says that he came first to Watertown,* Mass, about 1633. Traces there of him, however, are faint, which is not singular, as his stay there was short. His wife was Mary Bishop, who died in Guilford, Ct., September 14, 1675. She was the daughter of John and Anne Bishop, who first stopped in Wethersfield and then in 1639 removed to Guilford, Ct., where John Bishop was one of the seven pillars or proprietors of the town, and where he died in February, 1661, leaving John who married Susannah Goldham, Stephen who married Tabitha Wilkinson, Betsey who married James Steel, Esq., and Mary who married GEORGE HUBBARD.

May 6, 1635, permission from the General Court of Massachusetts Bay was granted "to the inhabitants of Watertown to remove themselves to any place they shall think meete to make choice of, provided they continue still under this government. * * * The occasion of their desire to remove was, for that all towns in the Bay began to be much straitened by their own nearness to one another, and their cattle being so much increased. * * * In the summer of 1635 a few explorers* from Watertown established themselves where Wethersfield at length grew up. * * * October 15, 1635, about sixty men, women and little children went by land towards Connecticut with their cows, horses and swine, and, after a tedious and difficult journey, arrived safe there." With these migrators went GEORGE HUBBARD, his family, his father-in-law, John Bishop, and his family; also another George Hubbard, a Thomas Hubbard, and a William Hubbard—relationships unknown, if any existed.

The winter of 1635-36 was a bitterly cold one. Snow and ice surrounded their poorly-constructed habitations, and their furniture and provisions, sent by ships, did not arrive, being frozen up in the Connecticut River; so that they had to subsist that winter upon "acorns, malt and grain."

In 1636 GEORGE HUBBARD and Samuel Wakeman were authorized by the General Court of Connecticut, assisted by "Ancient" (Thomas) Stoughton, "to consider the bounds and survey the breadth of Dorchester (Windsor) towards the Falls, and of Watertown (Wethersfield) towards the mouth of the River." The bands of migrators from the vicinity of Boston settled Springfield, Mass., Windsor, Wethersfield, and Hartford, Ct.

Though entirely outside the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, according to their English charter, Massachusetts still kept Wethersfield (called Watertown until February, 1637), under her protecting ægis and governed it by "commissioners" the first year. There was much friction in the Wethersfield Church. Governor John Winthrop wrote that "the rent at Connecticut grew greater, notwithstanding the great pains which has been taken for healing it; so the church of ^{*} William Barshum (Bassum or Barsham), John Clarke, Abraham Finch and three sons—Abraham, Daniel, John; (Sergt.) John Strickland, Robert Rose and three sons—Robert, John, Daniel; Andrew Ward, William Swayne, Leonard Chester, and probably Nathaniel Foote. It is claimed that prior to these explorers came about September, 1633, John Oldham and three others and established upon this site a trading-post to obtain beaver skins from the Indians.

Wethersfield itself was not only divided from the rest of the town, etc., but of those seven which were the church four fell off, so as it was conceived that thereby the church was dissolved, which occasioned the church of Watertown here (which had divers of their members there not yet dismissed) to send two of their church to look after their members, and to take order with them." GEORGE HUBBARD may have been a member of this Watertown, Mass., body, though no record exists of it. He represented Wethersfield at the first colonial General Court under the constitution of 1639, and, consequently, must have been made a freeman prior to 1639, freemen alone enjoying such important honors.

Wethersfield* originally comprised a parallelogram of land extending east and west nine miles and north and south six miles, and was divided north and south by the Connecticut River so as to leave three miles by six miles of territory upon its eastern bank. This strip of 54 square miles was bounded on the north by what was afterward the Hartford line, upon the south by what was afterward the Mattabesett or Middletown line, on the east by the wilderness, and on the west by Tunxis, or Farmington. This tract was purchased from Sowheag, sachem of the Mattabesetts, Wongunks, or Black Hill Indians. The original deed is not on file. GEORGE HUBBARD was acquainted with the particulars of the transaction, however, and to confirm and strengthen the title to this purchase the General Court placed upon file his deposition, which he forwarded from Guilford, at the Court's request. The following is a literal copy of the certificate:

Guilford, June 16, 1665.

This is to certify unto all whom it may concern:

That upon his certaine knowledge, by the advice of the Court, Wethersfield men gave so much unto Sowheag, as was to his satisfaction, for all their plantations lyeing on both sides the Great River, with the Islands, viz: six miles in bredth on both sides the River, &c., six miles deep from the River westward, and three miles deep from the River eastward. Thus testifyeth George Hubbard.

By me, Thours published

Taken upon oath before me, WILLM, LEETE.

This is a true copy of the original, being examined and compared therewith this 18 of May, 1667, pr. me: John Allyn, Secretry.

The eastern portion of this tract extended from (now) Hartford line to Roaring Brook or Sturgeon River, and was called Naubuc Farms. It was the first instance in Connecticut of a town being cut out from another town, for which permission was given in 1690, but which did not actually occur until October, 1693. About 1653 the eastern colony practically enjoyed independence however, being exempted from "training" with the western colony. This eastern portion of Wethersfield, or Naubuc Farms, was named Glastonbury, which subsequently became North and South Glastonbury, and in 1639 was surveyed by GEORGE HUBBARD, a "prominent surveyor," by order of the General Court, and apportioned to the original settlers. The apportionments or lots extended from the river east three miles, and were very narrow, that all might have water on the west, fertile meadows in the centre, and wood and pasture land on the east. They were called the "three-mile lots" and were numbered up to 44, GEORGE HUBBARD'S being No. 14, in North Glastonbury. It was 321 rods wide, contained 195 acres, and laid between Thomas Uffoot's [Ufford] on the north and George Wyllys' (Gov. Conn. 1642) on the South. Afterward George Wyllys' tract of 30 rods wide by 3 rods broad, containing 185 acres, was purchased by GEORGE HUBBARD'S descendants and some of the tract remained in the family until 1850 or later. In 1672 this eastern section of Wethersfield was enlarged by an addition of 30 square miles upon its eastern boundaries, called (some of it) Eastbury, and gave Glastonbury* considerable dimension.

The west side of the river, Wethersfield proper, has lost some of its territory, Stepney Parish or Rocky Hill being taken out, also Newington, and a part to form Berlin. The river also has encroached by a change of channel at the expense of Wethersfield and to the advantage of Glastonbury, which gained thereby Manhannock Island, comprising about 200 acres, and mentioned in GEORGE HUBBARD'S deposition. On this island lived Thomas Wright and his descendants. There being (apparently) no burials of Hubbards in the cemetery at Wethersfield proper, it is a fair inference that none occupied the western portion. In this cemetery is the oldest slab the writer has found in New England. It is quite well preserved, and at its head has a very crude coat-of-arms scratched unskilfully upon it, representing, perhaps, two winged horses (Pegasus), with ermine or squirrel-tail "charges" scattered about the escutcheon. It reads: "Here lyes the body of Leonard Chester, armiger, [armorer, or esquire] late of the towne of Blaby, and severall other Lordships in Leicestershire, Deceased in Wethersfield Anno Domini 1648. Etatis 39." Mount Lamentation was named thus because this man was once lost there in the dense woods and nearly perished before being found by the inhabitants who beat drums, fired guns, and made outeries and lamentations to attract his attention.

As a stimulus to punctuality and early rising the Connecticut Colonial records read: "1638-9, April 5 * * * Thurston Rayner, GEORGE HUB-BERTE (members of General Court from Wethersfield) are fined 1s a peece for failing att the hower appointed which [is] 7 of the Clocke."

GEORGE HUBBARD lived about three years in Wethersfield, and then with his neighbor Thomas Ufford, William Fowler, Rev. Peter Pruden and others went southward to the shore of Long Island Sound and settled in Milford, being assigned Milford Island as his grant. He was one of "those persons—whose names are hereunder written—who are allowed to be free planters, having for the present, liberty to act in the choyce of public officers for the carrying on of public affayres in this plantacion. * * * George Hubbard: came from Wethersfield." There are 44 names in the list of original Milford settlers, which appears on the first page of Book 1 of Milford Records and bears the date of entry of November 20, 1639. These 44 planters represented only heads of families. He was admitted to the church there January 15, 1644.

Before 1650 he sold Milford Island to Richard Bryan (this island contained 10 acres and was called Poquahaug by the Indians, and was their favorite summer resort) and removed with his son-in-law, John Fowler, to Guilford, where his wife's parents, John and Anne Bishop, had preceded him, and September 22, 1648, he bought there the property of Iacob Sheaffe ("one of the seven pillars of Guilford"), who with his family went to Boston, where he died in 1659 a prominent merchant, or leather dealer, a street in Boston being named after him. GEORGE HUBBARD was admitted to church membership in Guilford October 6, 1650. During years 1652-55-57-58-60-62-65-66 he was a Deputy Magistrate. In 1666-67 he was a member of the Assembly at the union of the Hartford and New Haven Colonies. In May, 1670, the Court invested him with authority to "joyne persons in marriage." "He was a man of high standing and prominent in the politics of his times," and died in Guilford in January, 1683. His will is on file in Vol 1, pages 96-97. (new numbers) Probate Records Office, New Haven, and is dated May 23, 1682, with a codicil dated Dec 30, 1682; inventory, taken May 30, 1683, is £,564. 08. 06. He was buried in the graveyard then located south of where now is the soldiers' monument in the centre of the village green (see picture), a rectangular square patterned after the original New Haven plat. This cemetery was used up to 1817, when two new ones, East and West, were begun. The pond holes were filled by leveling down the hillocks, the Episcopal and Congregational churches and the town hall removed, and the old headstones were scattered about the town. Some were taken to the new cemeteries and tumbled up against the fence, some were claimed by descendants, while others were flatly laid around the Congregational and Episcopal churches to eatch rain-water from the eaves and to make runways for small boys.

Children—Mary, John, (?George), Sarah, Hannah, Elizabeth, Abigail, William and Daniel.

MARY was born in England about (?) 1625 (Dr. Talcott gives 1634), and came with her parents to Watertown, Mass., Wethersfield, Milford, and Guilford, Ct. She married in 1647 John Fowler (son of William and Sarah Fowler of Milford and New Haven), who first appears on the Guilford records June 30, 1650. He was a marshal there from 1652 to 1661, and Deputy Magistrate from 1661 to 1664. From August 3, 1669, to 1673, he was "sole deacon of the church," and also Deputy to the Colonial Court until his death, which occurred Sep 14, 1676. He lived on the corner of what is now Broad and Fair Streets, diagonally opposite to his father-in-law's house, which faces the beginning of Fair street. His widow died April 13, 1713. Children—Abigail, Mary, Abraham, John, Mehetable and Elizabeth.

SARAH was born in 1635 in Wethersfield, Ct., and married Daniel Harrison, son of Richard, Jr., who came to New Haven in 1644. This family of Harrisons (Samuel, Benjamin, John, Joseph, George and Daniel) removed to Newark, N. J. There was a large exodus of Connecticut families into that locality about or prior to 1665, that settled Newark, Elizabethtown, and Bergen Point.

HANNAH was born in 1637 in Wethersfield, Ct., and baptized at Milford, Ct., May 26, 1644. She married Jacob Melyen (spelled in George Hubbard's will "Molynoe"), son of the Patroon, Cornelius Melyen, of New Haven, in 1662. He had a brother Isaac (possibly Samuel of Fairfield was his brother also). They came from Holland to New Amsterdam, thence to Connecticut before 1655, when Jacob and his father ("Mr.") took the freeman's oath. After 1663 Jacob and family removed to Boston, where he was a leather merchant and constable. His will, probated Dec 26, 1706, names widow, HANNAH, and children Samuel (H. U. 1696) and Abigail (who married William Tilley). HANNAH (HUBBARD) MELYEN died in 1717.

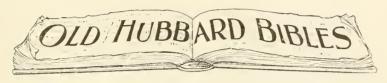

ELIZABETH was born in 1638 in Wethersfield, Ct. She married very late in life Deacon John Norton, a widower, son of Thomas and Grace Norton, of Guilford, formerly of Ockley, Surrey, Eng. He had first married Hannah Stone, dau William and Hannah Stone; he was made freeman in 1667, and died March 5, 1704. It is not known which wife was mother to his children—John (d y), John, Samuel, Thomas, Hannah, Mary—but probably his first wife.

ABIGAIL was born in 1640 in (probably) Wethersfield and baptized May 26, 1644, in Milford, Ct. She married, October 14, 1657, Humphrey Spinning (died Nov, 1689), of New Jersey, nephew and legatee of Humphrey Spinning (Spinage or Spenning), who came from the Delaware River country in 1639 to New Haven. He had cousins Mary and Edward, and was of German parentage. She is supposed to have died after 1662 and prior to 1682. Children—John (b Feb 11, 1659, d Feb 27, 1712, m Mch 16, 1687, (1) Deborah Bartlett, d Dec 14, 1692, and Aug 20, 1694, (2) Rachel Savage, b Apl 15, 1673, dau John and Elizabeth (D'Aubin) Savage of Middletown; she afterward m (2) Phineas Hall of Middletown), David (b Feb 5, 1661), and Abigail (b abt 1662).

THE OLD DUTCH HUBBARD BIBLE.

Antiquity! Thou wondrous charm, what art thou, that being nothing, art everything? Yet when thou wert, thou wert not antiquity! - Charles Lamb.

DR. CHARLES HUBBARD of Brooklyn, N. Y., is the owner of a rare old Dutch Bible that came from Holland in early colonial days. Upon its fly leaf is written the marriage of "Roelef Schenck to Geertie Hendricks May 29, 1714," with the names of their children, afterward born, indicating its early possession by either a Schenck or Hendricks family. It then passed into the possession of Dr. Jacobus Hubbard, senior, of Monmouth County, N. J., who transmitted it to his son Elias. From Elias it went to his son William Henry, who bequeathed it in turn to his only son, Dr. Charles Hubbard.

The act of authority to print this volume was granted Sep 6, 1698, by the "Bergermeesters and Regeerders of the Stadt of Dordrecht" to "Pieter Keur en Amsterdam, Dordrecht, and Pieter Rotterdam in compagnie," who issued it in 1716 from Amsterdam, the birthplace of the art preservative of all arts. It is printed in various sizes of old German type in sometimes one, two, or four columns, copiously annotated, upon durable hand-made paper, and bound in stout calf (embossed) with heavy brass clasps to preserve its shape. The illustrations are numerous, symbolical of the important sacred events, and beautifully printed from steel plates, included in which are maps of the world and the Holy Land. It includes the New Testament, Old Testament, and certain Apocryphal chapters, and is in a fine state of preservation, inscribed therein being the family records of several Hubbard generations upon blank leaves inserted for the purpose. It makes 709 good-sized pages.

Another old Bible in the possession of a Hubbard family is a very interesting one now owned by the Rev. George Henry Hubbard of Norton, Mass. It came to him through his father, Henry Hubbard of Sherbrooke, P. O., who in turn received it from his brother the late Rev. Austin Osgood Hubbard. It is a copy of Theodore Beza's New Testament and was printed in the year 1582. Theodore Beza, the great reformer of Geneva, Switzerland, published in 1556 in Latin a translation from the Greek; in 1565 he published his first Greek Testament with his Latin and an old Latin translation in parallel columns with copious foot notes. A copy of this edition is now on file in the Congregational Library in Boston. In 1582 a second edition was published, making three editions, including the Greek, to which the one now referred to belongs. We are happy to be able to give a reproduction of the title page which is in an excellent state of preservation. The title page when translated into English reads, "The New Testament or New Covenant of our Lord Jesus Christ, of which two translations are given to the text, the one old and the other the new one of Theodore Beza, carefully edited by him. THEODORE BEZA'S NOTES, in which he has also revised in this third edition his response to Sebastian Castellio in which many passages of the New Testament and in his own notes are thoroughly discussed, stands printed separately." The legend on the tree. "Do not taste the top," will undoubtedly bear investigation, and our readers are entitled to whatever conclusions they may draw from it.

This book is remarkably well preserved, considering its great age, and it is exceedingly to be regretted that there is now no one living who has any information as to how it came into the Hubbard family. The book was evidently rebound in the early part of the 19th century, and the edges of the leaves were trimmed at that time, so that several interesting memoranda which were written in the margin have been mutilated and their history or worth can not be exactly determined. The Testament was written in two volumes, and they are bound together in this book. On page 120, Vol. 1, appears a pen sketch of the head of the family bird, and on page 526 of the same volume a pen sketch of the same in full. On page 279 appear the names, "John," "Lock" and "Eliott," without definite connection. On page 338 are part of the names "Hubbard," "John," and on page 351 are parts of the words, "John," "Eliott," and the letters "Cam." This latter inscription may stand for Cambridge, and, if so, the question naturally occurs, "Was this book at one time in the possession of the famous Indian apostle?" A collection of names appears on page 369, of which we give a reproduction. In Vol 2, on page 327 appear the words "Eli, Ejus, A.D," and underneath, "John, 17-." Upon the title page when held to the light appear a number of names, some of which can not be distinguished. Among them is the name "John Brown," and on the opposite side of the tree on the outer edge, "John Eliott to Chester White" (or "Williams"). The surname cannot be accurately determined. There are two well drawn English letters a trifle below the middle which are intended, evidently, for initials, "J. L." On the fly leaf appears the inscription, "Austinius O. Hubbard, Colegii, Valensis, Novi Portus, A. D. 1823." From what has been said it will appear that the book has been in the family at least since some time in the 18th century. It is possible that the signatures on the margin are those of some former collegiate Hubbard. In itself, aside from family associations, the book is a valuable one, and it is especially so to the Hubbard family by reason of its long sojourn among them. The pages of the book bear marks of age, being yellow and much stained; but all the pages, except the title page, are intact, and like the members of the family in which its last years have been spent, age but gives a dignity and glory without disfigurement.

Still another old Bible, more ancient than either of the foregoing ones, is owned by a Hartford, Ct., family of Hubbards. Five editions of this volume (Protestant) were printed between 1568 and 1585, and this copy bears the date of 1570. It is usually called by scholars the "Bishops' Bible," because, under the supervision of Archbishop Mathew Parker,*

John Day was buried at Bradley-Parva, Suffolk County, England. Upon a curious mural entablature in the chancel are inlaid in brass, effigies of himself and first wife, kneeling beside a table, before which are two babes in swaddling clothes. Behind Day's figure are grouped six sons; behind his wife five daughters. The inscription is as follows, cut in Old English letter:

ription is as follows, cut in Old English letter:

"Here lyes the Daye that darkness could not blind,
When popish fogges had overcaste the sunne.
This Daye the cruell nighte did leave behind,
To view, and shew what blodi actes were donne.
He set a Fox to wright how martyrs runne.
By death to lyfe. Fox ventured paynes and health
To give them light; Daye spent in print his wealth.
But God with gayne returned his wealth agayne,
And gave to him as he gave to the poore.
Two wyves he had, pertakers of his payne.
Each wyfe twelve babies had, and each of them one more;
Als [Alice] was the last encreaser of his store,
Who, mourning long for being left alone,
Set up this tombe, herself turned to a stone."

^{*} The American Encyclopedia of Printing relates that he was the liberal patron of fine printing and employed an eminent English printer to publish his works, one John Day (Daye, Daie, or D'Aije), b 1522, d July 23, 1584. Day published the Tyndale Bible, Mathews Bible, and some 245 other works, many of them being handsomely illustrated. His device was a rising sun with a man awakening a slumbering figure in the foreground, and the motto: Arise, for it is Day. This was intended to convey his religious devotion to the cause of the Reformation as well as a pun upon his name. Being an enthusiastic adherent of John Rogers and John Fox he was imprisoned by Queen Mary. On the accession of Queen Elizabeth he was given the highest offices in the Stationers' Company and especially befriended by Bishop Parker. Under his patronage he cut the first Saxon letter, which was used by the Bishop in a homily published in 1567 and in the Saxon Gospels edited by Fox in 1571. John Day was twice married and had 26 children, 13 by each wife. One of them, Richard Day, succeeded him and printed exclusively religious publications. He afterward abandoned printing and succeeded Fox as minister at Reigate. Two other sons also became clergymen and authors. Another (supposed) son, Stephen Daye, b 1611, became the first printer in America, arriving in 1638, where he printed the Freeman's Oath, Almanac (by William Pierce, mariner), and Bay Psalm Book, translated from Hebrew by Rev. John Eliot and Rev. Mr. Weld. Stephen Daye died in Cambridge, Mass., in 1668.

seven bishops, besides the Archbishop, out of thirteen translators, translated it from the Latin. It is supposed to have been brought from England in 1633-5, or thereabouts, by George Hubbard, of Middletown, though this can not be proven.

When Oueen Elizabeth was in the twelfth year of her reign, and Shakspeare but twelve years of age, she sanctioned the printing of this Book to circumvent the adoption of the Geneva Bible. Her half sister. Oueen Mary I., who preceded her and reigned five years, had been very active in causing to be destroyed all the Protestant Latin editions. When Elizabeth succeeded her in 1558 she heartily encouraged the preparation of this Protestant version. In fact, her interest led her vanity into having the titlepage adorned with an illustration of herself being transported into heaven upon the shoulders of angels. This frontispiece has disappeared from the Book by time's ravages, but other illustrations abound therein. The coat-of-arms of different dignitaries appear at the beginnings of various chapters. Archbishop Parker, of Canterbury, placed his seal at the opening of Genesis with the inscription, Mundus Transit ct Concupiscentia Ejus, and his sovereign's initials underneath, "E. R.," meaning Elizabeth Regina. The next illustration is that of William Cecil, or Lord Burleigh, a layman translator, who caused his "coat" to be inserted at the beginning of the chapter of Isaiah. Around the "coat" is the buckled garter with the well-known inscription, Honi Soit qui mal y pense, showing him to have been a member of the most noble Order of the Garter, the highest honor ever conferred in knighthood, which was instituted by King Edward III. in 1350. Following his crest comes that of the Earl of Leicester, a great favorite of Elizabeth's, whose crest decorates the beginning of Joshua, and which also shows upon it the symbols of the Order of the Garter with the additional motto underneath of Droit et Loyal. Probably these nobles translated these various Books. The King James Bible was patterned after this largely, though the translations in the "Bishops' Bible" are far more unique and startling. As a substitute for the headline "Song of Songs," or Canticum Canticorum, over the Book of Solomon, there appears in astonishing and bold letters "The Ballet of Ballets." In Jeremiah, Chapter VIII, verse 20, is found the words: "Is there no triacle [treacle] at Gilead? Is there no phisition there? Why then is not the health of my people recovered?" In the Douay Bible, published shortly afterward, "rosin" is used instead of "triacle," which is now read as "balm." In Ecclesiastes the admonition to "Cast thy Bread upon the Waters" is rendered in this Book in the almost unintelligible language of "Lay thy bread upon wet faces, and so shalt thou find it after many days." It is replete with many other equally interesting phraseological expressions.

This old Book is now 325 years of age, and very much thumb-worn, indicating that our ancestors were in frequent moods of piety. Some of the leaves are missing, and it has lately been rebound. Upon one of the blank spaces in it is written in scrawling penmanship these words: "Georg Hubbard's Book, who lived about the year 1720: Left this Bibel to Caleb Hubbord & Died about A, 1785, and left it to Mary Hubbar, wife of Capt. Amos Tryon," etc.

This George was probably of the third generation. Though the lineal transmission of this ancient heirloom through the early families can not be exactly determined, tradition indicates that it descended from George Hubbard (who m Elizabeth Watts) to his eldest son, Joseph Hubbard (who m Mary Porter), thence to their third son, George Hubbard (who m Mehitable Miller), thence to Caleb Hubbard (who m Elizabeth Miller), and thence to their daughter Mary Hubbard (who m Capt. Amos Tryon); and from the Tryon family it came back into the possession of Hon. Charles C. Hubbard (ex-Comptroller of Conn.) of Hartford, Ct.

The compiler was unable to obtain the privilege of having this valuable heirloom photographed.

JOHN JURIN AND MONTH MONTH

Those who do not look upon themselves as a link connecting the past with the future do not perform their duty to the world—Daniel Webster.

JOHN HUBBARD,* eldest son of George and Mary (Bishop) Hubbard, was born in England about 1630 and came an infant with his parents to America about 1633. It is claimed by some of his descendants that he lived a few years in Concord, Mass., with the Merriams, relatives of his wife, Mary Merriam. If so, he removed afterward to Wethersfield, for his first four children were born there. The Connecticut colonial records show that "at a meeting at Goodman Ward's house April 18, 1659, the Company there met engaged themselves under their own hands to or by their deputies to move out of the colony into the jurisdiction of Massachusetts." Some thirty persons signed this agreement, but not all of them kept it. A settlement was accordingly begun at "Norwottuck" (Hadley) with Rev. John Russell, Jr.,† as the spiritual leader and governing power of the band. With them went JOHN HUBBARD and his family of four children and wife Mary‡

^{*} The compiler begins and continues this article to the end on the assumption that John Hubbard who married Mary Merriam of Concord, Mass., was the son of George Hubbard and Mary Bishop of Guilford, Ct., though he is not convinced of it. Undeniably George Hubbard had a son John, yet the writer can not prove that this one was his son. Genealogists (deceased) Edwin Hubbard, Douglas Hubbard, and Dr. Alvan Talcott of Guilford, Ct., so declared it (giving birth about 1630), as also did numerous family traditious, while Bond's Genealogies and History of Watertown, Mass., inferred it, viz: "supposed to be the eldest son of George and Mary."

[†] He came from Cambridge, Mass., to Wethersfield about 1650, succeeding there Rev. Henry Smith. The principal reasons appearing to actuate his removal were a censure received from the General Court for "carelessness" growing out of charges preferred against him by Lieut. John Hollster, whom he had "excommunicated" from his church—His dignity became offended, and, with his sympathizers, he went to Hadley. JOHN HUBBARD'S name is in the list of those who went with him, so he must have been a "sympathizer." A few persons from Hartford also joined them.

[‡] It is difficult to identify the parents of this "Mary," unless he married the sister of Robert Merriam, the universal belief. According to English parish records, however, Robert had no sister "Mary." William and Sara Meriam of Hadlowe, Kent, Eng., had children Joseph, George, and Robert who came to Concord, Mass.), Susan, Margaret, Joane and Sara. They may have had a daughter Mary whose record of birth his evaded investigators. Joseph (eldest) had wife Sarah (9 Stone, dau (Merriam) Hubbard, formerly of Concord, Mass., whom he must have married about 1648-9 at an early age. He was made freeman Mch 26, 1661, and had five children born in Hadley. After 1672 he went to Hatfield, and died there at the home of his son Isaac in 1702. His will, probated in August, 1702, showed seven children then living, Mary and Hannah having died. Children—Mary, J¹ John, Hannah, K¹ Jonathan, L¹ Daniel, Mercy, M¹ Isaac, Mary and Sarah.

MARY—b in Wethersfield, Ct, Jan 27, 1650, died young.

J1 JOHN-b in Wethersfield Apl 12, 1655, lived and died in Glastonbury, Ct, about 1748, m abt 1676 Mary Wright, dau Thomas Wright (and the widow of John Elson), who lived on "Wright's Island" in the Connecticut River. He owned the "Hubbard Lots," which his father left to him when he removed to Hadley and which were largely augmented by the purchase of the George Wyllis* tract of 185 acres. On this tract is located the old cemetery which adjoins the "meeting-house green," donated to the town by JOHN HUBBARD and Samuel Smith in 1692, each giving five acres. On it is now the one-story town-hall, the congregation having moved into more central quarters and constructed a finer edifice. He owned 365 acres in 1713, one tract of 205 acres being "on the Hebron line," and was rated worth £102. 10s. In 1707, when Glastonbury had acquired 6,000 acres by a second purchase, he was granted 60 acres more with others "in consideration of their extraordinary charges and good service." In 1704 he was called sergeant and was on the school committee, and was permitted to build a saw-mill on Roaring Brook. From 1700 to 1724 he served as representative to the legislature. Children—Jo John, Ja Isaac, Ja David, Ja Ephraim (see elsewhere), and SARAH (b 1683 in Glastonbury, m (?) Abraham Hollister-b May 5, 1705-son of John and Abiah Hollister of Wethersfield, and had nine children).

Robert (third) and Mary (Sheafe) Merriam had no children. (The latter couple are buried in the Old Hill Cemetery in Concord in the Hubbard burial plot. She d July 22, 1693, aged 72, and he Feb 15, 1681, aged 72—tombstone standing—1894). Bond's Genealogies and History of Watertown, Mass., says: "His wife's name does not appear in the records, but he was a brother-in-law of Deacon Robert Merriam of Concord." It would thus seem that she was the sister of Joseph, George, and Deacon Robert Merriam.

^{*} He came from Fenny Compton, Eng., and was Lieutenant-Governor of Connecticut in 1641 and its Governor the next year; he died in 1644, leaving his estate to his son Samuel who was a large landholder.

[†] Concord is old, famous, historic and beautiful, and was incorporated September 12, 1635. It has not yet been invaded by noisy manufactories, and its air of intellectual repose must have suited most agreeably such personages as Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Henry David Thoreau,

Around the church was the cemetery, laid out upon a hill, and hi it, close to the path leading to the apex, is the Hubbard and Merriam burial plat. John Hubbard married a Merriam, but the compiler is of opinion that there might have been another, a blood relationship, between these families in Old England.

^{*} There is a record, however, in Wethersfield showing that in 1684 the surveyors assigned a lot in Naubuc Farms to one Jonathan Hubert. He may have owned this lot, even though he had removed to Concord, and afterward sold it to his brother John, who it would appear owned it in 1690.

^{*} Tombstone in Glastonbury cemetery reads: "Elijah, son of Ephraim and Abigail, died in October, 1782, aged 26, at Jamaica." [Jamaica, West Indies.] Glastonbury Church Records read: "April 15, 1783, Elijah Hubbard, son of Eleazer Hubbard, died at Jamaica in captivity." The data about this period being imperfectly preserved, the compiler has not absolute confidence in much of this herein given.

[†] Intelligence of affairs at Concord and Lexington reached here [Glastonbury] by express on Sunday following, and was announced by the reverend and patriotic cousins from their respective pulpits. The rest of the day was spent by members of the militia in casting bullets, replenishing cartridge-boxes, and repairing firelocks. On Monday morning a large company assembled at the house of Captain Elizur Hubbard, in Eastbury, and under his command started for Boston.—Goslee's Hist. Glastonbury.

In 1805 PHINEAS HUB-BARD, hoping to improve his earthly fortunes, started for Canada in midwinter upon an ox-sled containing his household effects, wife and three small children. He followed the course of the Connecticut River nearly all the way, stopping occasionally at small settlements until he reached a small hamlet called Stanstead, in Canada, just over the Vermont State line. This place seemed to be the promised land of his search, and he therefore stopped, bought a farm and constructed a tannery upon it. He became soon a leading citizen, his educational acquirements investing him with power and the positions of magistrate and deacon of the church. His knowledge of letters and kindness of heart caused him to indite love letters for the illiterate of the vicinity and then he afterward married the happy couples. He left a largesized family who gave a good account of themselves. Children (three eldest b in Sunderland, balance in Stanstead)—Benjamin Franklin (b June 9, 1798, d Feb 6, 1877. Cling to thy home! If there the meanest shed yield thee a hearth and shelter for thy head;
And some poor plot with vegetables stored be all that Heaven allots thee for thy board;
Unsavory bread, and herbs that scattered grow wild on the river bank or mountain brow;
Yet e'en this cheerless mansion shall provide more heart's repose than all the world beside.—

Leonidas of Tarentum.

In the beginning of this volume is a view taken of an old Hubbard house that once belonged to the Swart family. It is located at Holmdel, near Red Bank, Monmouth County, N. J. When Rebecca Swart married Nov 7, 1785, Dr. Jacobus Hubbard, a surgeon in the Revolutionary War, they settled in this homestead, which for years prior had been occupied by various generations of the Swart family. Since the foregoing date this property has been possessed by descendants of the Long Island Hubbards, whose first ancestor was James Hubbard of Gravesend. Near the house is an old cemetery where Dr. Jacobus Hubbard was buried and also many others of the family. The house is picturesquely situated, and is surrounded by magnificent stately trees and makes an interesting landmark in that locality.

In 1733 John Kent purchased a house and some land upon what has now become South Main Street, Middletown, Ct. How long this house had been built prior to his purchase is unknown, but it is generally conceded to be, at least, the second oldest house in town, the Samuel Gaylord mansion on Washington Street, built in 1720, being, perhaps, older. John Kent died in February, 1775, and left the property to Hannah, his daughter, who soon became the first wife of Hon. Elijah Hubbard. The house is practically unchanged in its appearance to-day, at least exteriorly, and in front of it stands about the largest and most majestic elm in Middletown. When Elijah Hubbard died it was inherited by his daughter, Elizabeth Hubbard, who married Thomas Mather, an Albany merchant, and who left it to her son, Thomas G. Mather

In 1837 Hon. Samuel Dickinson Hubbard, the half brother of Elizabeth (Hubbard) Mather, bought it from Thomas G. Mather and occupied it for some years. While he lived here he was a member of Congress from Connecticut. He afterward moved into a fine mansion on High Street, and the property was sold about 1854 to Jonathan Kilbourne, whose daughter, Elizabeth Kilbourne, now owns it. It is to be regretted that it is now out of the possession of the Hubbard family.

When John Hubbard (who married Mary Merriam) went from Wethersfield, or Glastonbury, to Hadley in 1660-61 he had four children, Mary, John, Hannah and Jonathan. While living in Hadley five more were born, named Daniel, Mercy, Isaac, Mary and Sarah. After 1672 he removed to Hatfield and located upon the site where now is the residence of Roswell Hubbard, one of his descendants. Here John Hubbard died in 1702 and his son Isaac Hubbard inherited the homestead. Isaac subsequently removed to Sunderland and was well known there as a good citizen and church deacon. Some of his children remained in Hatfield upon the homestead. How long the first house stood is not known, but it came into the possession of Elisha Hubbard in 1760, and then became famous as "Hubbard's Inn." Elisha died Apl 11, 1768, leaving five daughters (Hannah, Lucy, Anna, Lucretia and Sarah), and two sons (Elisha and John). His widow and son Elisha continued to conduct the tavern, which became shortly afterward invested with historic interest, as Continental troops passed and repassed its doors. Here were quartered one entire winter the French staff officers under command of Count Rochambeau, who, when ennui was upon them, cut with diamonds* their names and epigrammatic sentences of hostile portent to their British adversaries. Here also one of General Washington's Quartermasters, General Epaphroditus Champion, loved to linger. He lingered so effectually that he eventually married Lucretia Hubbard, one of the widow's five daughters, thus proving himself to have been a "gallant Champion in peace as well as war."

The house, built upon the site of the old tavern, sits upon a graduated terrace running up from the road, or Hill Street, and is surrounded by the most beautiful of towering elms, the cool shade of which in summer is a paradise for dreamers and dusty wayfarers. It is to be hoped that it will always be inhabited by Hubbards.

The old Hubbard homestead at Guilford, Ct., is prolific of incident and attractive to the eye. September 22, 1648, George Hubbard came from Milford (where he had lived nine years after his removal from Wethersfield in 1639) and bought land in Guilford from Jacob Sheafe, who thereupon removed with his family to Boston. On this land George Hubbard domiciled himself, and at his death bequeathed the house and homelot to his youngest son Daniel (the only one of his sons who came to Guilford) and made him sole executor. In 1715 the old building was torn down by Daniel and a large and spacious house erected upon the old foundations, which was finished in 1717, and of which the engraving is a correct likeness. The roof, however, was raised by the fifth Daniel in descent from George some time about 1800, and since that period a wing and other additions have been made, so that there are now twenty-five rooms in the structure. There have been seven Daniels in direct line from George Hubbard of Guilford, five of these having been, it is claimed, inheritors of this house and homelot, which have never been out of the possession of the family, and never will be while there remains kin to leave it to. The house is a jutted one and stands on Broad at the head of Fair Street, and is replete with old fireplaces, bake ovens, spacious low-ceiling rooms and closets, small window-panes, sound oak timbers in the framework, and is in an excellent state of preservation. Here Rev. Bela Hubbard, D. D., was born in 1739. He owned a part of this house and homelot and sold his share to "Mrs. Deborah, Daniel and William Hubbard" May 8, 1790. In his deed he states that one-half of the house and homelot was "left me by my Honored Father Daniel containing by eftimation, four acres, be it more or less," etc. The place is now owned and occupied by John Bartlett Hubbard and his family and Miss Mary Linsley Hubbard, who possesses the old deed Bela Hubbard gave of it and also the old Linen Chest George Hubbard brought over in 1633, which also has always been in the family's possession. May this interesting old homestead be standing when the "last trump" blows is the fervent wish of all its many fervent admirers.

Where now stands the residence of Mr. Isaac Libby (built in 1826) in South Berwick, Me., there was erected early in the seventeenth century a stoutly built log structure about fifty feet long and perhaps twenty feet in width, which was known all over that section as the Philip Hubbard Garrison House. It is supposed that the first Philip Hubbard of Kittery, Me., built the structure and used it both for his family domicile and as a fortification for himself, family, and neighbors against savage Indian attacks. It fronted the south, and the highway ran close by the western end. It was one room deep, and, opening to the south, was a door at the corner that entered the bar-room; for in later days it was used as a tavern, before which stopped the hungry and thirsty passengers from the stage coach, together with driver and four horses, to investigate the quality of its refreshments for man and beast. This stage ran from Berwick to Portsmouth, N. H., and on to Boston, Mass. A large chimney arose from the western end, in which the traditional back-log crackled and flamed. Further along toward the eastern end was another large chimney, with bake ovens, which the family used for their private domestic comforts. The beams showed plainly overhead, and the walls, it is alleged, were boarded up and down. The family door was a huge double one, probably of oak, to resist unwelcome redhanded midnight marauders. The upper part of the garrison house jutted over the lower, and opening downward were holes made to fire upon the enemy when they approached too near. It was the safest retreat in the vicinity, and stood for over a century. In the rooms were the usual old-fashioned household appurtenances, consisting of solid chairs, desks, chests, and tables of the hardest wood. The spinningwheel and the loom were also there, as well as utensils for dressing leather. It is not known how many rooms were in it, but they were numerous and large. There is yet living a lady who lived in it when a girl, but her memory fails her as to the number of rooms. Back of the old house grew several scraggy-limbed pear trees, the trunks of which were nearly the circumference of a hogshead. The fruit of these trees was made into a liquor called "perry." Perhaps Philip Hubbard, Sr., planted them. Near by, on the edge of Birchen Point Brook, was an immense tan-vard, comprising two acres, where Philip Hubbard dressed into wearing apparel and shoes the skins of wild and domestic animals. The old pits are now beds of flag. The brook has its source at the foot of Rocky Hills, and winds its crooked way a distance of two miles or more and empties into a creek, up which the tide flows at the south end of Birchen Point. The Newichawannock River, about one-fourth of a mile wide, was 90 rods away at the western end. Nearly between the river and this house was the garrison house of Daniel Stone. There are along the route of Birchen Point Brook low places where nothing grows but water-grasses, flags, and cat-o'-nine tails-places where the water olides over a bed of shining sand; others, where it flows silently under the shadow of clumps of alders, where patience sometimes rewards the fisher with a few trout. Near the end of the water-way it foams and gurgles and sings over a bed of rocks, once the foundation of a saw-mill.

The estate extended down to the Fowling Marsh, which was alive with screaming, cackling water-fowl, the paradise for the neighboring Nimrod. Near the house was a cemetery "4 rods square, set off to be used as a Hubbard Burying Ground forever." Illustrations of these points of interest are given elsewhere. The old garrison house has now vanished, but it still savors the recollections lingering in the memory of old residents and descendants around Berwick, Me., who have had recounted to their eager ears its past historic career and pleasant associations.

The old Hubbard Homestead at Long Hill, Ct., is now standing upon the soil that in its virgin purity is supposed to have been originally assigned to the first George Hubbard, who helped found in 1650 the little settlement of Mattabesett, that afterward became Middletown. It finally came to be owned by one of the fourth generation, Nehemiah Hubbard, who was born in Middletown July 22, 1721, the son of Nathaniel and Sarah (Johnson) Hubbard. Nehemiah erected this house when he came to manhood, and it sheltered, beside himself, a loving wife and thirteen children. It was, and still is (being substantially unchanged), the typical New England homestead, with its adjacent stone walls, apple orchard, oak and elm trees casting delightful shade near by, and an old-fashioned well-sweep and bucket that will vet raise to your lips the clearest of pure water. There is also to be seen near by the long stone horseblock and the shallow concaved stone that served to catch and run off the lye in the bottom of the leach-tub. In the house is the long, narrow kitchen, guiltless of lath and plaster, with bedroom at one end, pantry at the other, and a huge fireplace between, and across which extends a beam, from which still hang the pot-hooks and trammels that supported the numerous kettles below, that were in "ye olden time" necessarily filled with beats, turnips, cabbages and potatoes, to quiet the clamour of thirteen young mouths. The chimney is an enormous structure of stone, with a few bricks at the top, and takes up nearly half the area of the house. The rooms are large, but have low ceilings, and in one of them could be heard (far into the night many times) the fascinating whirr of the spinning-wheel that spun the coarse but durable cloth that enveloped, besides the father's and mother's, the thirteen small bodies aforesaid. In this house were born, of the thirteen, five trusty and true Revolutionary War patriots, namely, Isaac (see elsewhere), Nehemiah Jr. (see Prominent American Hubbards), Elisha (hereinafter mentioned), David (who contracted a brain fever while returning from the army, ultimately making him helpless for life), and Jacob (who was a teamster and present at the battle of Saratoga). There were no more sons to volunteer, Mathew having died voung and Nathaniel also, the latter being swept, when a young man, off the yard-arm of his ship while furling sail for a less courageous shipmate in a terrific gale off the coast of Ireland while sailing homeward. As a fair sketch of the life of a Revolutionary soldier, the writer presents herewith a copy of a paper read by Mrs. Mary Hubbard Bunce before the Wadsworth Chapter of the Middletown (Ct.)

Daughters of the Revolution, herself the granddaughter of Elisha, one of these patriots, and the present owner of the old homestead:

"Into this house its owner brought his bride, Sarah Sill,* with whom he had fallen in love at first sight when she, a blue-eyed slip of a girl only twelve years old, was picking wild flowers by the wayside. Here was born one October morning a boy for whom stern work was waiting, little as he dreamed of it. The fourth child in a family of thirteen, all but two of whom lived to maturity, he seems to have brought into the world as his special endowment a vigorous constitution and cheerful temper, which would do him good service in the trying time to come. Small chance was there in that busy time of much petting. The music that lulled him to sleep was more likely to have been the whirr of his mother's wheel than any lullaby she found time to sing, and after a brief reign of eighteen months he abdicated the throne of babyhood in favor of a younger claimant.

"Indeed, they followed each other so rapidly that the poor father, hard pressed to find names, seems to have opened his Bible at Genesis and, beginning with Sarah, Isaac and Jacob, gone steadily on to the New Testament names of Matthew, Nathaniel, Mary and Phebe. Being by this time as far along as 2nd Kings, the little one was named Elisha, and henceforth, promoted from babyhood, his place was among the workers, though he could do no more than rock the little sister's cradle or bring kindlings for the fire. How the busy mother of this host kept them clothed or even fed is more than a modern woman can comprehend, for all this was in the day when every article of food or clothing must be evolved from the raw material. Given the land and the plow, the farmer himself must be the third factor in that problem of domestic comfort which his busy hands wrought out. Never in this old house could the music of wheel and loom cease if this troop of boys and girls were to be clothed, and where in the brief twenty-four hours of the day she found time for its necessary labors a wiser head than mine must tell. Verily the labors of the good wife in Proverbs sink into insignificance beside such toil as this. Yet it neither shortened nor saddened their lives, for this husband and wife kept step together for sixty-six years, and came down to the close of their pilgrimage a cheerful pair, whom even death could not separate but by a few months.

^{*}At the home of her father, Joseph Sill, of Lyme or Saybrook, Ct., was built in secret the first American torpedo boat, that was designed to blow up part of the British fleet, then anchored off shore from there. The project failed because "Long Lige," the navigator, who was to anchor it under Admiral Howe's ship, claimed that he became "narvous" at the critical juncture because, in feeling for his usual quid of tobacco, there was none to be found, and the "turtle-back" (as it was called) thus became unmanageable, and, drifting away from the ship, exploded harmlessly at the appointed time. Though doing no material damage, it frightened from their mooringe the whole British fleet.

"By the time the little Elisha was four years old he was among the scholars of the district school, where he learned (if he learned nothing else) that the chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy him forever. An active, hardy boy, he could compel the most prosaic employment to yield him some amusement, and having learned the trade of a cooper he used to divert himself by placing six of his finished hogsheads in a row (one head being out of each) and then jumping from the ground into the first, from this into the second and so on through the row without touching his hands to their sides.

"He came to manhood in those stirring times preceding the Revolution, when the air was full of the spirit of liberty and the new idea of the rights of the people was battling with the old idea of royalty to a king. It was inevitable that he should hear these great principles fully discussed, for if one may judge the fathers by the children, reading heredity backwards, as it were, I know that quiet household was stirred to its depths by the unusual excitement, and that the heroic words of Patrick Henry and John Adams thrilled those boys as a hundred years later their descendants were thrilled when the command rang out, 'If anybody attempts to tear down the Flag shoot him on the spot.'

"Middletown was fully in sympathy with the patriots of Boston and had sent substantial aid to that beleaguered town, while a few of her citizens had fought at Lexington and Concord. Fired by such examples it was only natural that at the age of twenty-three he should enlist in the Continental army. His youngest daughter has told me that this enlistment was for three years, but the Connecticut Official Records has it, 'For the war,' from which it appears that he meant to fight it out to the end. The exact date of enlistment is June 17th, 1776, just one year after the battle of Bunker Hill. His regiment was attached to Wadsworth's Brigade and was until October stationed at Bergen Heights, now Jersey City. In October it moved up the river near Fort Lee, then under General Greene's command. In November it was sent to assist in defending Fort Washington and on the fall of that stronghold was captured by the British.

"And now, if never before, our young volunteer learned to 'endure hardness as a good soldier.' In fact, endurance was about the only soldierly quality called out by the new circumstances in which he found himself. It would tax our credulity to believe all that is told of the treatment of these prisoners of war did we not remember Libby, Belle Isle and Andersonville. Thrust into the crowded hold of the old prison ship Jersey, where a thousand men suffered and died, robbed of the barest necessities of life they became so desperate that an armed guard was necessary to compel them to man the pumps and keep their horrible prison afloat. Transferred after a time to the old Sugar House in New York, they gained a little comfort perhaps by their larger quarters, though the cruelty of their treatment in no way diminished. Their food was scanty and unfit to eat, their clothing hung in rags, and weakened by cold and hunger it was not strange that disease found them an easy prey, or that despair—that sure precursor of death should settle like a pall over them. On one occasion a number of halters was offered them from which each man was bidden to choose one wherewith to be hanged. Under these circumstances the man who could raise a laugh was a public benefactor, and our soldier had his own way of doing it. Their prison was on the second floor, from which a broad staircase led down to the door below. Back and forth at the foot of this staircase paced the guard ready to shoot any desperate man who might be tempted to make a rush for the liberty beyond that door. Watching his opportunity when the sentry was at the further end of his beat this undaunted prisoner would rush half way down the stairs shouting at the top of his voice, 'Damn King George!' and then fly back again before the angry sentinel could fire. Often was the musket levelled at his head, but he always managed to mix with the crowd in time to save himself and enjoy the laugh his sally had raised. But he was capable of other moods than merriment, and on one occasion when a dying comrade was about to be dragged out by a heartless British officer he rushed to the rescue, stood between the dying man and his tormentor, vowing that he should be allowed to breathe his last among friends. For this he narrowly escaped the bayonet in the hands of the angry Englishman, who may well have smarted under the hot indignation of his prisoner's words. It is easy to understand how one who knew him well in after life should say, 'He never counted danger till it was past.'

"The weary captivity came to an end at last through an exchange of prisoners, and a day arrived when their last meal served by British hands was before them, i.c., hot bread fresh from the baker's oven—It was scarcely safer than poison for those starved men, and one soldier had enough self-control to refuse a morsel, though every fibre of his body cried out for food. He earnestly entreated his comrades to deny themselves the dangerous indulgence, but for many the temptation was too strong, and some of their number died in the very hour of release.

"His last act before leaving the prison was to kneel beside a dying comrade, receive his last message for home, and then close his eyes and wrap his emaciated body in his tattered blanket for burial. He lingered so long that the officer in charge came back and hurried him away to join his companions. One would think he had had enough of war by this time and might plead with a clear conscience that he had done his full duty to his country; but we find him the next year volunteering for the 'Continental Line,' which was recruited throughout Connecticut, and was ordered late in the Fall to join Washington's army in Pennsylvania. Following this was a winter at Valley Forge, where, to quote Mrs. Stowe, 'The American soldiers went on the snow with bleeding feet and had scarce anything for daily bread except a morning message of hope and patriotism from George Washington.' This second term of service lasted a year and a half, and still later he enlisted for a brief campaign in defense of the sea-coast towns of his native State against a threatened British invasion.

"The war over at last he came home to enjoy his well earned liberty. His four brothers had all served in the army in some capacity, one as State Commissary, two as teamsters and one, like himself, in the ranks. This last had given, not life, but liberty to his country's cause, for a severe cold contracted on his journey home had resulted in brain fever. and though he recovered and lived for forty years he was never thereafter a sane man. The three older brothers soon married, the elder receiving a portion of his father's farm and building thereon the house now occupied by A. M. Colgrove. A few years later he removed to the fertile lands of Central New York, from which came back in time a homesick wail to the effect that he never regretted leaving New England but once and that was-always. Another brother became a carpenter and built for himself the small house upon which the Old First Church meeting house was afterward grafted, and which has figured since as school house, boarding house and Home for Aged Women. Still another built and for many years occupied the house now owned by the heirs of the late S. L. Warner.

"So it was left to our hero to remain at home and care for father and mother and the poor demented brother for whom no friendly asylum could open its doors. Soon he took to wife the sister of a comrade in arms, giving one of his own in exchange, and settled down in the home of his childhood to repeat in his own family the homely hard working life of his ancestors.

"Nine children grew to maturity around his hearthstone, and again the old house hummed like a hive with its busy industry. The promise of good citizenship made by the early years of his life was not broken in manhood, and the same spirit of fidelity to duty which sent him into the army kept him true to his obligations at home. When a new meeting house was resolved upon his gift towards the enterprise (a large stick of timber) was the first upon the ground, and when the building was completed his own little daughter was the first child baptized in it. As his sons grew to manhood the same roving instinct that brought his ancestor from his English home sent two of them to the West and in the next generation sent 'Forty-niners' to California and Free State pioneers to Kansas. Five grandsons did valiant service in the Civil War to preserve the Union he helped to found, and two laid down their lives in its defense. But long before this one veteran well past his fourscore years had answered the last roll call and was at rest. No one of his descendants but is proud of the memory of this common soldier who did what he could to make this fair land free and independent."

OLD GEORGE HUBBARD HOMESTEAD

At Guilford, Ct. Built in 1715-17.

(Photographed by Phineas Hubbard of Cambridge, Mass.)

Our ancestry! A gallant, Christian race! Patterns of ev'ry virtue, ev'ry grace—William Cowper.

As the child is the father of the man so is the mother the parent of both. From her blood, bone and sinew, equally with the father, comes those complex strains in nature that in maturity blossom into qualities we all delight in paying homage to—courage, endurance, perseverance and integrity. New England mothers produced daughters from the same mold she yielded sons. It is not enough to know this in the abstract. We should be moved by a timely justice to prolong her memory also, alongside of man's, by the same medium of stone shaft or statue, the master's brush, or the enduring lines of the prose writer or poet. This we pretend to do, but are a little tardy about it, also infrequent in occasion.

It was a New England woman who fought two years in the Revolutionary War in a Massachusetts company with her musket in hand before her sex was suspected. It was a New England woman who carried her husband upon her back into the city of Quebec during Arnold's campaign after he had been left to die of exhaustion. It was a New England woman who, with her maid and a young boy, killed her ten Indian conquerors in an early Indian war in Maine, escaped, and lived many years afterward to relate the circumstance. This shows that occasion makes the woman as well as the man.

The picture of these old ladies is a good type of what was the composition of our pioneer woman, is most pleasant to look upon, and agreeable and instructive to know about; and, furthermore, let us hope, an inspiration in the fading twilight of our American history that will serve to lead us gently back into those old-fashioned channels through which flowed the streams of human benevolence, Christian charity and pure godliness. Not that these good and noble old ladies were heroines of

SIX HUBBARD SISTERS.

(Descended from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.)

Indian or British Wars, but that there shines in their characters what called out that heroism that in their sisters crystallized into acts of heroism when the occasion came.

The daughters of a Revolutionary soldier and a mother disciplined in goodness and truth they naturally inherited the prime virtues of earth and heaven; they were deft housekeepers, intense patriots, fine singers, good Bible and English scholars and full of vim and the spirit of industry. In their countenances we see intelligence, determination and integrity. Beneath we see cheerfulness, good nature, vivacity and wit. Every year until past the age of seventy they met in annual reunion, played jokes upon each other and sang with great gusto and tremendous volume the songs they learned at the singing-school in the country school-house. Each one took her musical part, and when the Sapphic Ode was rendered the ceiling would nearly crack and the roof slowly raise. Here is the first verse of the Sapphic Ode which they sang with such intense unction:

When the fierce north wind, with his airy forces,
Rears up the Baltic to a foaming fury;
And the red lightning, with a storm of hail comes rushing amain down,
How the poor sailors stand amazed and tremble!
While the hoarse thunder, like a bloody trumpet,
Roars a loud onset in the gaping waters quick to devour them.

In the refrain Anna, who sang in a low key, would stop long enough to say, "That's base, but I have to sing it." All eventually married except Mary, the youngest, and all lived to be eighty and over, while three of them reached ninety and more. Their aggregate ages amounted to 524 years, 8 months and 7 days. Martha married Uriah Hayden of Essex, Ct., and died in her ninety-fourth year; Rebecca married Chauncey Wetmore of Middletown, Ct., and died in her ninetieth year; Anna married Augustus Phillips of Ithaca, N. Y., and died in her eighty-second year; Sarah Sill married Josiah Meigs Hubbard of Middletown, Ct., and died in her ninety-third year; Phebe married Seth S. Hall and died in her eighty-third year; and Mary died unmarried in her ninety-third year.

In proper order under the head of Descendants of George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct., will be found their exact ages in years, months and days. May the shades of their goodness and graciousness fall benignly upon many coming generations.

Remember the relation that bindeth you to unity, and prefer not a stranger to thine own kin—

Robert Dodsley.

(The following dates are only approximately correct. The compiler has been unable to obtain family records from descendants of this line.)

WILLIAM HUBBARD, youngest son of George and Mary (Bishop) Hubbard, was born in 1642 in Connecticut (probably Milford). He married Abigail Dudley and removed to Greenwich, Ct., before 1664. He owned land there in 1667, and prior to 1672 bought "Miosehasseky" of the Indians in common with 26 others. They were styled the "27 proprietors of 1672," and called their tract Horseneck and later West Greenwich. This is where Gen. Israel Putnam made his famous leap with his horse, though the name was imposed because of the shape of the tract, which jutted out like a neck far into the sound and was a famous public horse pasture.

Between 1664 and 1750 mention is made of the name "William Hubbard" ten times in the land records there, meaning sometimes the father and sometimes the son. It is thought WILLIAM afterward removed to Stamford, where he died in 1684.* Children—Abigail,

There are no further traces of him in Greenwich, though at a later period another George is mentioned seven times in the land records,

Oh! Could we from that unknown land bring spirits to our aid,
And subsidize the angel band, the heavenly courts invade,
These sombre clouds, which now conceal our ancestors from sight,
Would vanish, and their forms reveal fresh from the realms of light—Anonymus.

It has been generally believed by GEORGE HUBBARD'S descendants that he was the son of George Hubbard of Wethersfield, both apparently coming overland from Massachusetts to Connecticut at the same time. There being no positive evidence on file to support this statement, the compiler is disinclined to accept it. Edwin Hubbard and Douglas Hubbard, genealogists, gave his birth as 1614 and 1620, respectively. They could certainly have never seen his will. It is true that there were two George Hubbards, a William Hubbard, and a Thomas Hubbard in and about Hartford and Wethersfield between 1636 and 1640. There may have been, and probably were, some relationships amongst them, but nothing so far has come to light to convert the theory into a fact. William disappears soon from the records, leaving no traces of descendants except a daughter Sara, and Thomas' children appear to have left no issue. Thomas' son Ebenezer was a witness to GEORGE HUBBARD'S will. This might have indicated some relationship between those families. The names Richard, Nathaniel, Daniel, John, and William were common in the families of George of Wethersfield, George of Middletown, and William of Ipswieh, Mass. Some might infer relationships because of that coincidence. Royal Hinman, in his "Puritan Settlers," has confused the two Georges into one person. Dr. David Dudley Field merely wrote of them that they were "two distinct persons," while J. Hammond Trumbull, LL.D., in his "Memorial History of Hartford County," uses the expression "George Hubbard, son of George Hubbard of Milford and Guilford, a prominent surveyor." The latter declaration undoubtedly sprung from a tradition only, which the compiler prefers to abandon in this instance, not caring to establish such degree of kinship upon mere conjectural grounds, though he concedes the high standing Mr. Trumbull occupies as a reliable historiau.

CEORGE HUBBARD was born in 1601, and probably in eastern or southeastern England, where those bearing the name were located in great numbers. Nothing in the form of records has yet been found determining his birthplace or time of arrival in America. His name first appears in 1639 in a list of the early settlers of Hartford. These settlers came overland from the vicinity of Boston during the years 1635 and 1636, and located the towns of Windsor, Hartford, and Wethersfield, Ct., also Springfield, Mass. GEORGE HUBBARD was one of the number. He was given six acres of land "by courtesy of the town, with privilege of Wood & keeping cows on the common," and resided on a lot adjacent to the land of James Ensign and George Graves on a road that ran parallel with the Connecticut River, according to an early map, now extant. This road ran from the South Meadow to George Steel's land, and then turned and ran across the "ox pasture" towards Wethersfield, passing near to the Great Swamp. In 1640 he married Elizabeth Watts, daughter of Richard* and Elizabeth Watts, and was then assigned a "home-lot" and land upon the east side of the "Great River." The colonial records show that "William Swavne and George Hubbard were appointed Sep 4, 1640, appraisers of the estate of Edward Mason," and, April 24, 1649, Geo. Hubberd was "fined f, 10 for exchanging a gunn with an Indian." He appears to have disposed of his land and removed with about fifteen other families in March, 1650-51, to Mattabesett, so called until 1653, when it became Middletown. It swelled rapidly in size from accretions from Wethersfield, Ct., and Rowley, Chelmsford, and Woburn, Mass., requiring afterward a division into sections known as, respectively, Middletown, East Middletown or Chatham-now Portland, North Middletown or Upper Houses-now Cromwell, and, later, Middlefield and Westfield. About 1650, or when he left Hartford, he carried with him a commission from the Colonial Government as "Indian Agent and Trader for the Mattabesett District." In 1654 he was made freeman, and settled with his son-in-law, Thomas Wetmore, upon opposite corners on the east side of Main Street. He owned large land tracts on the west side and on the east side of the river. These lands were recorded Sep 5, 1654. He, Thomas Wetmore and two other land owners on the west side of the street, gave land for the second meeting-house. Steps were taken for erecting the first meeting-house Feb 10, 1652. Mr. Samuel Stow of Cambridge College, England, for several years temporarily had charge of this congregation. The records read: "It was agreed at a meeting at John Halls hous to build a meeting hous and to make it 20 fot square & 10 fot between sill and plat, the heygt of it." This structure was a one-story log house with a palisade around it, and GEORGE HUBBARD, living adjacent, was naturally

^{*} He was an original proprietor of Hartford, and died about 1665 and his widow about 1676. They had children besides Elizabeth (Watts) Hubbard, William Watts, who returned to and died in England, and Captain Thomas Watts, who married Elizabeth Steel, sister of James Steel who married Ann Bishop, the sister of Mary Bishop who married George Hubbard of Wethersfield. Captain Thomas Watts commanded the troops against the Narragansett Indians in 1675 and the river expedition in 1677. He died about 1683 quite wealthy, leaving an estate of £1,383, 108., of which £100 apiece went to the children of George Hubbard; and to his son Samuel Hubbard, whom he brought up, being childless, he left his home lot and considerable more property, real and personal. The other daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Watts was Eleanor, who married Dec 23, 1647. (1) Nathaniel Brown, son of Percy Brown of Snelston, Derbyshire, Eng., and nephew of Lady Elizabeth Morgan and Sir John Morgan, Kt., of Chillworth, Surrey, Eng. He came over under the charge of Rev. Thomas Hooker, Eleanor (Watts) Brown then married (2) Jasper Clements of Middletown, b in England in 1614, d in Middletown in 1678, leaving a handsome bequest for the support of schools. She then married (3) Nathaniel Willett of Hartford and died Sep 28, 1703, leaving Thomas, Nathaniel, John, and Benoni.

THE OLD FIRST MEETING HOUSE* OF MIDDLETOWN, CT.

selected as its keeper. Dec 17, 1666, he was allowed "40 shillings for sweeping the meeting-house and keeping the glass [hour-glass]." This also included the services of his eldest son, Joseph, who beat the drum to assemble the congregation and to give warning of the approach of Indians. Ten men organized this church formally in 1668 and signed its covenant, the first minister, Nathaniel Collins, one of the first graduates of Harvard, heading the list of signatures. Much of the "confession of faith" is still the creed of the church, which eventually came to be known as the Old North Church. The donated land abutted "against the corners of George Hubbard & Thomas Wetmer on the east side— Thomas Wetmer half a rod at ve north corner; George Hubbard half a rod wide, three rods in length, against ye body of ye meeting-house and from thence out into an angle thre or four rods further," making in all thirty-two feet square. In case the meeting-house was removed the land given was to "return to ye proprietors again." This site was exactly in the middle of the highway, near or between what are now known as Liberty and Grand streets. Most of these covenanters located near this meeting-house, at the northern end of Main street, where is now St. John's Square, though three resided at "Upper Houses." An appraisement of his property March 22, 1670, showed him to be worth £,90. 10s. 15d., and in 1673 £132. 10s. At his death his inventory showed him worth £243. 105., and possessed of a dwelling-house and home lot worth £50, "2 1-3 acres of long meadow" worth £18. 10s., 3 "acres of meadow (at (?) Pessenchaug) on the east side the Great River "worth £9, a tract at Long Hill of 226 acres, another "parcell west from the towne" of 300 acres, one "parcell on the east side the Great River" of 464 acres, and the "one-halfe Lott" of 30 acres, a total of over one thousand acres. His original will is on file in the Hall of Records at Hartford, Ct., in a box labelled "Wills-H, 1647 to 1750," and bears date of May 22, 1681. In this document he states that he is "eighty years in age, yet in comfortable health of body & haveing the use of my understanding," etc. In his inventory, taken May 13, 1685, it is stated that he "deceased the 18 of March, 1684." Sergt. Samuel Warde, John Hall, senior, and Ebenezer Hubbard were the witnesses. His widow died in 1702. One record of him says that he was "highly respected, and of marked integrity and fairness." He appears at this distance of time to have been devout, industrious, and possessed of those sturdy, wholesome qualities of mind and body without which the composition of our country to-day would not possess that element of robustness and stability that has enabled it to so successfully withstand foreign infections, manners, and monarchisms. This New England fibre in the governmental-politico texture is now, sad to note, becoming gradually obliterated by unAmerican innovations and practices. He must have been a man of "marked integrity and fairness" to have been selected by the colony as its Indian Trader. Much judgment had to be used by this representative of the colony in these dealings. Promiscuous trading by any one was forbidden, as fire-arms and fire-water were frequently bartered by indiscreet persons, which produced direful results. This resulted in the selection of one man to do the trading for all. On his judgment and prudence much depended. He must have erred, however, at one time, for the Colonial Court fined him fro for exchanging a gun with an Indian. In a spirit of charity, his descendants are privileged to conjecture that he might have regarded the gun as an old and harmless one and incapable of going off and hurting any one.

GEORGE HUBBARD and his widow were buried in the Middletown Riverside Cemetery (near the original log church), laid out in 1650, and lying triangularly on the west bank of the Connecticut River, close to the Union Depot, and within a stone's throw of where he resided. This cemetery was laid out shortly after the year 1750, and was the only burying-ground until 1713, the inhabitants upon both sides of the river using it. In it are several tombstones bearing the years upon them of 1600. These are mostly of blue slate, upon which the lettering better retains its contour than upon the brown sandstone, though the slate sometimes flakes off and is thus lost. one then and there where are now the stone quarries. Tradition locates GEORGE HUBBARD'S grave close to the burying-ground entrance, fronting west, on St. John's Square, but no headstones show where he or his widow's dust is mouldering. This ancient graveyard will soon disappear. Already the octopus railroad has fastened upon two sides of it, and the shrill locomotive whistle is daily sounding an alarm to the resistless dead that they must make way for the progressive living. Sacred dust has no commercial value, and wild vine-clad mounds and crumbling, tottering tombstones, are no match for cormorant corporations. Children—Mary, Joseph, Daniel, Samuel, George, Nathaniel, Richard and Elizabeth.

Cinthia Smith—b Sep 29, 1793, d May 6, 1853, dau Rev. Samuel Smith of Derby, Vt. He moved in 1800 into what was then called "The New State," settling at Windsor, Vt. In 1813 Asahel and his older brother, Phineas, were engaged in a mercantile business at Windsor, where they also kept a tayern. Asahel making two trips a year with a double ox team to Boston to buy supplies for their store. In 1828 Asahel invented and received a patent for a rotary pump, which was adapted for houses or for larger uses in factories, water works, etc. For over ten years he manufactured these pumps in all sizes. They were also made into fire engines, on the same rotary principle of a series of leather cups inside a eylinder, sucking the water up, and forcing it out through a "goose neck." One house pump that was made in about 1840 is still in constant use in New Haven, Ct. The business was carried on under a corporation known as "The National Hydraulic Company," with factory at Proctorsville, Vt., and afterward at the State Prison in Windsor, where Asahel was warden. He also made guns at the prison, in partnership with his son-in-law, Nicanor Kendall. The pumps, guns and fire engines were sold all over the United States, in all principal places, Asahel being salesman and traveling quite extensively. In 1830 one of the large rotary pumps was furnished the city of St. Louis for its water works. It was propelled by a steam engine of twenty horse power, drawing water from the Mississippi, and forcing it through 1,300 feet of iron pipe, supplying the reservoir, 104 feet above the level of the river. In part payment for this pump, a collection was taken up by the Chamber of Commerce of St. Louis, to make up what the city authorities could not pay at that time, but this was not quite sufficient, so Asahel took a white horse in settlement, which horse he drove across the prairie to Chicago, thence took it by steamboat through the lakes to the Erie Canal as far as Albany, and then over the hills to Windsor, Vt. The old settlers of Windsor still remember this old white horse. While West on business Asahel was pleased with the appearance of Davenport, Iowa, and entered up a quarter section for settlement. In 1839 he sold out his business in Windsor and settled down as a farmer, "away out West" in Iowa. He afterward went out as a leader of a party of surveyors, executing a contract for surveying government land. He had children Colman Smith, b Sep 16, 1816, in Windsor, Vt., d May 14, 1877. m Jan 13, 1845, Mary Platts Read, b in Chester, Ct., Apl 2, 1821, day of David and Hannah (Spencer) Read, of Deep River, Ct., and had Harlan Page (see Abridged Descent Line), George David Read.*b Feb 20. 1857, at Painted Post, N. It was here he was married, his eldest son being the publisher of this genealogy. When this boy was still in dresses, Mr. Hubbard slipped on the ice and was laid up for several years. This accident changed the whole course of his life, as, being obliged to take up lighter employment, he canvassed Middlesex County for books, magazines, &c. Having the exclusive agency for "Uncle Tom's Cabin," he sold over 2000 copies in the county. In 1855 he gave up his book store and removed with his family to Painted Post, N. Y., where he was bookkeeper and cashier for Bissell, Stevens & Co., a large lumber concern. In 1860 he returned to New England and occupied a similar position with Eli Whitney, as secretary of the Whitney Arms Co., at New Haven, in the then only private gun factory in the United States, which was kept very busy during the Civil War. This position he resigned in 1865 to go to Boston, where he accepted a position of trust with Wm. L. Bradley (afterward the Bradley Fertilizer Co). In 1870 he became interested in the American Timber & Mfg. Co., a corporation of New York, and went to Vicksburg, Miss., where immense quantities of the finest black walnut lumber was bought and milled under his direction for the northern market. In 1875 the large gate of the cotton compress swung to in a gale, striking him on the head, resulting in injuries and sickness which eventually caused his death. He was always noted for his

IEREMIAH HUBBARD spent his young days upon his father's farm, but upon reaching manhood indulged his mercantile propensities by selling goods through Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. This brought him a competence, and he returned and purchased the farm in Long Hill District, Middletown, of his grandfather, Deacon John Hubbard, which had descended to a daughter, and upon her marriage had temporarily gone out of the Hubbard name. Here he passed his remaining days, earning a reputation for industry, integrity and uprightness of character. He was of the better class of farmers, of fine physique and presence (see portrait), and a member of the North Congregational Church* in Middletown that his ancestor, George Hubbard, with nine others, founded in 1668. He also filled with great credit various offices of trust and responsibility, being for many years a Justice of the Peace, when such office was of considerable importance. He had ten children, of whom two died young, and the others he fairly educated. His youngest son inherited the farm and estate, which has been in the family for about two centuries, and which is yet in the family name. Children (all born in Middletown)—HERBERT R. $\mathbb{S}^9 MATTHEW—b in Middletown Apl 29, 1783, d in Ashtabula, Ohio, July 9, 1869, m Nov 4, 1803, at Trenton, Oneida Co, N. Y., Mary Willard (b in Wethersfield, Ct., June 17, 1785, d in Ashtabula Sept 5, 1865), dau of Simon and Sarah (Robins) Willard. At 15 he came with his parents to Trenton, and May 4, 1804, set out on horseback for Ashtabula, then a small settlement on the shore of Lake Erie. He arrived in 12 days. Here he acted as land agent for Nehemiah Hubbard of "Old Connecticut," also for Samuel Mather and Elijah Hubbard, all very extensive land owners. He spent his winters in the East with his family.

In the winter of 1807-8, he took his wife and infant son (leaving a daughter with grandparents) as far as Erie, then a small village of log houses, where he left them and continued on to Ashtabula, cleared eight acres of land, girdled as much more, and built a log house on the south ridge. In April following he brought his wife and son, then six months old, on horseback, mostly over an Indian trail, to their future home; and thenceforth, during years of joy and sorrow, they became part of the band of permanent pioneers, and were noted among their neighbors for their good looks, which descended in a great measure to their children.

Among the first in opening and constructing highways and turnpikes, he was, also, one of the chief early projectors and promoters of a railroad from Ashtabula to the Ohio river, now, at last, by another generation realized. In the War of 1812 he went as volunteer, under Captain Payne, to defend the threatened frontier. After the war there came an era of immigration, on foot, horseback, and by wagon, and no opportunity to reasonably assist the settlers was neglected by him. The Rev. John Hall, who arrived in 1811, in a paper furnished to the Ashtabula County Historical Society, states that "he had a large family of small children, was a farmer, land agent, and surveyor, and one of the principal business men, public-spirited, liberal, helpful to the poor, and hospitable and kind to strangers and way-worn travelers." He filled acceptably the offices of appraiser, township clerk, postmaster, and associate judge of the county court. One of his important life labors was acting in successful conjunction with Hon. Elisha Whittlesev, M. C., to secure great harbor improvements for Ashtabula. Children-MARY (b in Trenton, N. Y., Nov 23, 1804, m Nov 9, 1824, Henry J. To his grandson and myself his society was the acme of entertainment, and his precepts the perfection of wisdom. When he was 16 years old his father died, leaving him to provide for his mother and several younger children, which responsibility he successfully assumed. He was schooled in the science of medicine and surgery by Dr. [Albigence?] Waldo, once an army surgeon, and at 21 was practicing as "Dr." THOMAS HUB-BARD. Nearly his whole life was devoted to raising his profession to the highest scientific elevation. He was a member of the Connecticut Legislature for several terms, both as Representative and Senator, President of the State Medical Society, and actively engaged in furthering the prosperity of such institutions as the Asylum for Deaf and Dumb, the Retreat for the Insane, and the State Hospital. He was called to the Chair of Surgery at Yale in 1829, which position he filled until his death. SAMUEL BIRDSEY HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.), eldest son of Charles and Delia S. (Birdsev) Hubbard, was born in Wadesboro, N. C., June 13, 1833, where his father, with his four brothers, Asa, Elisha Sears, Jacob and George Stocking, had come to make their respective fortunes. They were all successful, and returned to Middletown one by one with their families to enjoy the modest results of their industry until their days were closed. The subject of this sketch, however, remained South and entered into an active mercantile career, coming North in 1861 and remaining in Middletown until the close of the war, when he returned South and engaged in the hardware business. Mr. HUBBARD appears to be president of nearly every important corporation in Jacksonville, viz.: The Citizens' Gas Light Co., The Jacksonville Electric Light Co., The Southern Savings & Trust Co., and The Main Street Electric Railroad. He is also president of the "S. B. Hubbard Co.," wholesale and retail dealers in hardware, steam and gas fittings, etc., which supplies many Southern business houses His son, Samuel Birdsey Hubbard, Jr., is secretary of the firm. Mr. HUBBARD did not reach the apex of business success by short cuts towards the gaol nor by the assistance of rich relatives. He traveled the arduous paths that most self-made men do, and his many true Middletown friends rejoice that a poor boy against trying odds in a chilly world stands out so prominently now a victor over adverse circumstances, circumstances not mentioned by himself, but which came to the notice of the writer of this sketch, nevertheless. In February, 1860, Mr. HUBBARD married his cousin, Almira T. Hubbard (b June 25, 1839), daughter of Asa and Sarah Anne (Tryon) Hubbard. Children—Carrie (b Jan 4, 1861), Miriam (b Oct 18, 1862, d Oct 23, 1867), MARIE LOUISE (b Jan 6, 1866, d Dec 30, 1869), Myra Tryon (b June 15, 1869, d Jan 15, 1870), Samuel Birdsey (b Mch 8, 1871), ARCHER STANFORD (b May 23, 1874), ALBERT TRYON (b Dec 2, 1876, d Jan 14, 1877), and Thomas Rowland (b Nov 3, 1883, d June 22, 1886).

SAMUEL DICKINSON HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.), son of Elijah and Abigail (Dickinson) Hubbard, was born in Middletown, Ct., Aug 10, 1799. In 1819 he graduated from Yale University with the expectation of adopting for a life's vocation the legal profession. With this intention he began by reading law with his uncle, Judge John Dickinson, of Troy, N. Y. The requirements of the times, however, led him to engage in manufacturing industries, and he became connected for several years with the Pamecha Manufacturing Company and also with the Russell Manufacturing Company as agent, and, finally, treasurer. His sound judgment and skillful financiering brought the latter company through several critical periods of monetary dangers. This line of business experience made him an ardent protectionist, and in politics a Whig; thus the Whig party selected him as their standard bearer from 1845 to 1849 to represent them in the 29th and 30th Congresses. There he engaged in active and scholarly debate and attracted the attention of public men. When the Hon. Millard Fillmore became President he showed his admiration for his qualities by selecting him as his Postmaster-General, which place he filled with credit to himself, to President Fillmore and to the nation from Aug 31, 1852, to March 7, 1853.

Mr. HUBBARD was not unmindful of the demands made upon him by educational, religious and benevolent societies. His heart was always with them, and he earnestly identified himself with the spirit of their aims and purposes. In 1854 Wesleyan University conferred upon him the degree of LL. D., of which institution he was trustee from 1831 until his death. He married in Feb, 1853, Jane Miles, daughter of Isaac Miles of Milford, Ct. There were no children, His niece, Miss Susan Carrington Clarke, descended from Hon. Stephen Hopkins (a signer of the Declaration of Independence) through Admiral Esek Hopkins and John Hopkins Clarke (Senator from Rhode Island), occupied a daughter's place in his home circle until his death, which occurred Oct 5, 1855, in Middletown, Ct.

WALTER HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard of Middletown Ct.), eighth child of Jeremiah and Eunice (Prout) Hubbard, was born in Middletown, Ct., April 23, 1828, and attended the common schools and the Chase Preparatory School while not engaged upon his father's farm. Believing his fortunes lay in a mercantile direction, he entered as clerk a store in Meriden, Ct., and from 1852 to 1860 was engaged in the dry goods trade and manufacturing. In 1854, with N. L. Bradley, the Bradley & Hubbard Manufacturing Company was founded, now doing the largest manufacturing trade in its line of any in the world, and having stores in Boston, New York and Chicago. Their immense factory at Meriden, Ct., covers seven acres of ground and employs hundreds of workmen, who earn good wages and never strike, and whose welfare is most carefully looked after by the firm. They manufacture lamps, lighting fixtures, bronzes and art metal goods of an infinite number of designs and varieties.

Mr. HUBBARD is deservedly wealthy, and applies the money accumulated by his energy, industry and keen business ability to the most appropriate and humane purposes. His integrity is marked, and his business record and private life clean and spotless. For his adopted town he erected the finest hotel in the State, and gave it a famous New England name, "The Winthrop." He has traveled extensively, circling the world with friends in 1883-4. His library is well selected, and with no desire for political preferment frequently tendered to him he devotes his leisure moments among his books and art treasures. Mr. 11UB-BARD is President of the Bradley & Hubbard Manufacturing Company, the Meriden Trust & Safe Deposit Company, besides being a Director in different institutions and banks. He is also a member of the Union League Club, the New England Society and the American Geographical Society of New York City. In 1852 he married Abby Ann Bradley, daughter of Levi Bradley, of Cheshire, Ct., and sister of his partner, N. L. Bradley. She died four months after marriage, in February, 1853, aged 20, from fever contracted in nursing her mother, then undergoing a serious and fatal sickness. She was a very beautiful young woman and possessed of many virtues. Mr. HUBBARD never married again.

LEVERETT MARSDEN HUBBARD, son of Rev. Eli and Georgianna (Leach) Hubbard, was born in Durham, Ct., April 23, 1849, and educated at Wesleyan Academy, Wilbraham, Mass., and Wesleyan University, Middletown, Ct. He graduated from the Albany (N. Y.) Law School in 1870, and settled in August of that year in Wallingford, Ct., where he has earned distinction as one of the first criminal lawyers in Connecticut, being at one time counsel in the famous Hayden-Stannard murder case, and also the case of "Anderson, the Swede." Leading corporations throughout the country have also used his legal talent to advantage. His executive ability, sterling character, and high standing in business circles had naturally led to his selection for many administrative positions of trust, responsibility and honor.

In 1872 President Grant appointed him postmaster at Wallingford. He was reappointed successively until after the inauguration of President Cleveland in 1885, when he resigned with an unexpired commission of three years. In token of their appreciation, without regard to party, his fellow-citizens tendered him a farewell banquet. Other important positions he has held have been Borough Attorney since 1870, member of the Board of Education, vice-president and director in the First National Bank of Wallingford since its organization in 1881; also vice-president and director of the Dime Savings Bank since 1884, being now its President. In 1881 he was elected trustee of the Wesleyan Academy, his alma mater. He was elected in 1886 the first Judge of the Municipal Court of Wallingford, which position he still holds. He is associated.

with John W. Alling, one of Connecticut's leading lawyers. In 1886 Mr. HUBBARD was elected Secretary of State by the largest vote given any candidate for a State office in that election, and during his two years of service in that important and honorable position he gained universal honor and esteem for the intelligence, fidelity and enterprise that marked his administration.

The mother of Mr. HUBBARD, Georgiana Leach, was the daughter of a prominent merchant of Durham, Leverett Woodbridge Leach. She died in 1852, and Mr. HUBBARD spent his childhood with his grandparents. In 1873 he married Florence Gazelle Ives, dau Wooster Ives, of Wallingford. Children—Georgianna, Samuel Wolcott, Leverett Marsden and Kenneth Davenport.

JOHN HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard of Guilford, Ct.), son of John and Mary (Ball) Hubbard, of Townsend, Mass., was born in Townsend Aug 8, 1759, a posthumous child. He graduated from Dartmouth College in 1785 and studied theology, but a vocal weakness forced him to abandon a contemplated ministerial career, and he therefore became a teacher, becoming the first Preceptor of New Ipswich, (N. H.) Academy in 1789-95. In 1798-1802 he was the Probate Judge for Cheshire Co., N. H., and in 1805 a Professor of Mathematics and Philosophy at Dartmouth. He published an "Essay on Music" and "Hubbard's Anthems," containing, as the volume relates, "Thirty Anthems selected from the works of Handel, Purcell, Croft and other eminent European authors" (which were sung in New England Churches for many years), "Rudiments of Geography" and the "American Reader." August 10, 1791, he married Rebecca Preston, daughter of Dr. John and Rebecca (Farrar) Preston, of New Ipswich, N. H., and died in Hanover, N. H., August 14, 1810, where a monument, with many Latin inscriptions upon it testifies to his worth as a man, author and scholar, His widow died at Dracut, Mass., Apl 9, 1846, aged 77. RICHARD DUDLEY HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbare of Guilford, Ct.), son of Lemuel and Elizabeth (Dudley) Hubbard was born in Berlin, Ct., Sep 7, 1818, and was "early left an orphan with means barely sufficient for his education." He graduated from Yale in 1830, studied law with the late William Hungerford of Hartford, and was admitted to the county bar in 1842. This same year he married Mary Morgan, of Hartford, Ct. He was a member of the Connecticut Legislature and State's Attorney for Hartford County from 1846 to 1868 with the exception of two years, and a member of the law firm of Waldo, Hubbard & Hyde, Hartford, Ct. In 1867 he was elected to Congress as a Democrat, but declined re-election. In 1876 he was elected Governor of that State, being the first to serve under the twovears term. During the late civil war he was an earnest Unionist. He died in Hartford, Ct., Feb 28, 1884, leaving a widow and several children. As an example of the self-made man there is probably none more shining. From a poor boy, through years of patient toil and a studious application to books he forced himself to the top and compelled the admiration, respect and esteem of everybody in his native State, not excepting his political foes. He was not only the first lawyer in the State, but its greatest orator. His mind was eminently a philosophical one, and found recreation in the study of philosophical systems and abstract speculation. His success was attributed largely to great natural powers, superadded to which, though, was scholarly culture and the utmost familiarity with the ancient and modern classics. Upon the death of Mr. George D. Sargent in 1886 it was found that a bequest of $5,000 had been made in his will toward the erection of a statue to Mr. HUBBARD. The statue was begun and finished, the designer being Mr. Karl Gerhardt, and was unveiled June 9, 1890, in the presence of the highest officials of the State and Bar. A bronze tablet upon it bears the brief description: "RICHARD D. HUBBARD, Lawyer, Orator, Statesman." It stands in a conspicuous position near the Capitol Building upon the southeast corner, and is of heroic size, east in bronze, and represents him standing in a natural position as though addressing the Court or Jury. Children—Dudley (b 1849), William (b 1850), CATHERINE (b 1853), HENRY (b 1855), MARY (b 1859), and Nellie (b 1861).

HENRY GRISWOLD HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.), second son of Elijah and Lydia (Mather) Hubbard, was born in Middletown, Ct., Oct 8, 1814, and attended successively Captain Partridge's Military Academy at Norwich, Vt., the Ellington High School and Weslevan University at Middletown. It was as plain as the midday sun that his capacity was abnormally a business one and that he was destined to command men and mark out great fields of enterprise. His training field was in New York City in the woolen goods house of Jabez Hubbard, in Middletown later, in 1833, at the age of 19, as partner of Jesse G. Baldwin, dry goods merchant, and at the age of 21 as Manager of the Russell Manufacturing Company. Subsequently (1844) he became a Director in the Middletown National Bank and President of the Middletown Savings Bank. In 1866 he was elected State Senator from the 18th Connecticut Senatorial District, but he much preferred business activity to the honors of political preferment, and thereafter devoted himself principally to affairs requiring the genius of skillful and shrewd business managers. He of course became wealthy because of the possession of these faculties and left a large estate. Of a decisive nature, he trusted nearly always to his own peculiar powers of discrimination in his charitable donations, giving alike to Catholic, Jew, or Gentile institutions as the emergency appealed to his own particular view. He knew nearly all his employés by name, and was easily approached by them. He was a gentleman of magnificent personal appearance. June 19, 1844, he married Charlotte Rosella McDonough, daughter of Commodore Thomas* and Lucy Ann (Shaler) McDonough. HENRY GRISWOLD HUBBARD died July 29 1801, and was buried in Indian Hill Cemetery at Middletown. Children— MARGARET SILL (b Mch 30, 1745, has traveled extensively, lives in Middletown), Lucy McDonough (b Nov 6, 1846, d Feb 2, 1876, the wife of Samuel Russell of the Russell Manufacturing Company of Middletown) and Charlotte Elizabeth (b June 3, 1848, d Mch 14, 1850.)

^{*} Commodore Thomas McDonough was well known in naval circles and elsewhere as the hero of Lake Champlain. He was born in New Castle County, Del., in 1783, and died of ill health Nov 10, 1825, while returning from a sea voyage, his body being brought home on the ship in a cask of brandy to preserve it, where it was buried alongside of his wife in Riverside Cemetery at Middletown. At 19 he was in the Navy, and with Commodore Decatur in the Mediterranean, and at one time commanded the old heroic "Constitution." His principal brilliant naval exploit, however, was in disastrously defeating Sep 11, 1813, upon Lake Champlain the British ships Confiance, Linnet, Chubb, Finch, and 12 gallies, commanded by Commodore Downie with 95 guns and 1050 men, with his inferior fleet of 86 guns, 820 men, and ships Saratoga, Eagle, Ticonderoga, Preble and 10 gallies. This was a remarkable victory. Commodore Downie surrendered and Sir George Provost who was supporting the British fleet at Plattsburgh rapidly retreated, while Commodore McDonough received thanks, medals and resolutions of gratitude from Congress and the nation at large. The brownstone shaft in the cemetery bears record of his distinguished services to his country, and is situated close to the entrance, near the site where George Hubbard is supposed to have been buried.

LUCIUS FREDERICK HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard of Guilford, Ct.), eldest son of Charles Frederick and Margaret (Van Valkenburg) Hubbard, was born Jan 26, 1836, at Trov, N. Y., where his father was sheriff of Renssalaer County. His early life was spent in Chester, Vt., and Granville, N. Y. At the age of fifteen he left Granville and went to Poultney, Vt. In 1854 he removed to Chicago and there worked at the tinner's trade for three years. He was entirely self-educated, being thoroughly inclined toward literary studies and investigations, and from the age of fifteen had devoted himself during all his spare time to systematic study and reading, being satisfied with nothing less than a complete mastery of whatever subject absorbed his attention. In 1857 he moved to Red Wing, Minn., and started the Red Wing Republican, the second paper in Goodhue County. From the very first the paper proved a success, and still remains, a living monument to its founder. In the fall of 1858 he was chosen by the people of Goodhue County to his first elective office, that of register of deeds.

In December, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company A, 5th Minnesota Infantry Volunteers. On the fifth of February, 1862, he was elected captain, and March 20, 1862, advanced to the rank of lieutenantcolonel. On August 31, 1862, he became a colonel. As regimental and brigade commander he participated in thirty-two engagements during the war and "for conspicuous gallantry at the battles of Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 15 and 16, 1864," he was brevetted Brigadier-General. He was mustered out in October, 1865, and returned to Red Wing with shattered health, the result of over fatigue and exposure. In 1866, his health having returned, he engaged in the grain business at Red Wing. In 1872 he was elected to the State Senate, and again in 1874. In the fall of 1881 Gen. HUBBARD was nominated for Governor of Minnesota, and was elected by a majority of 27,857, the largest ever received by a Governor elected in that State. In 1883 he was renominated and re-elected by a large majority. He is now president of the United States Savings and Loan Company of St. Paul, as well as manager of the Duluth, Red Wing and Southern Railroad, with headquarters at Red Wing, Minn.

For nearly forty years a prominent citizen of Minnesota, he has honorably linked his name with the splendid record and the magnificent development of his State. By his conspicuous gallantry during our great civil war, by his creditable service in the State Senate, and by his wise, efficient and honest administration as governor for five years, he has conferred honor upon his State. He married in May, 1868, at Red Wing, Amelia Thomas. Children—Charles Prederick, Julia Mary and Lucius Virgilius.

BELA HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard of Guilford, Ct.), fourth son of Daniel and Diana (Ward) Hubbard, was born August 27, 1739, in Guilford, Ct. He graduated at Yale College in 1758 (which in 1804 conferred upon him the degree of D.D.), and afterward studied theology at King's (now Columbia) College, under the instruction of its President, Rev. Dr. Johnson. In 1763 he crossed the ocean with his friend Rev. (afterward Bishop) Jarvis to obtain holy orders, there being no Bishop in this country. He was ordained Deacon by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Frederick Keppel, Bishop of Exeter, in King's Chapel, London, Feb 5, 1764, and Priest by Rt. Rev. Dr. Charles Lyttleton, Bishop of Carlisle, in St. James Church, Westminster, Feb 19, 1764. Returning from England he officiated at Guilford and Killingworth, Ct., until 1767, when "the Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts" appointed him their missionary at New Haven. He remained loyal to the King of Great Britain during the Revolutionary struggle, and in consequence was able to protect the personal property of many of his parishioners during the occupancy of New Haven by the British Army. It is related of him that he guarded the personal valuables of his parishioners in his church by standing in its doors with his vestments on as the British soldiers passed by. They, recognizing him as of the Church of England, did not, out of respect for the cloth, attempt to enter and loot the premises. He also, it is further said, saved from destruction a young girl who was being pursued by a ruffianly British soldier. After the Revolution he organized the Parish of Trinity Church in that City and remained its rector until his death, December 6, 1812, in the 48th year of his ministry and the 74th of his age. His tombstone in the cemetery at New Haven bears the following inscription:

Amiable in all the relations of life, he was an able, tender, and diligent pastor, the friend of the poor and the comfort of the afflicted. Eminent for his charity, he was greatly beloved. After a long life of successful labor in the edification of the Church, he departed in faith and hope, ardent for the crown of righteousness. In testimony of their affectionate regard to the memory of their beloved pastor, a grateful people have erected this monumental stone.

A bronze tablet to his memory is also erected in the chancel of Trinity Church, where he did such faithful service.

A fac-simile of his signature: Pela Hubbard

He married in May, 1768, at Fairfield, Ct., Grace Dunbar Hill, dau of Thaddeus and Elizabeth (Isaacs) Hill (born in the Island of Antigua in 1747, died in 1820). Children—John James (b 1769, d 1823), Nancy (b 1770, d 1796), Grace (b and d in 1772), Bela (b 1773, d 1841), Grace (b 1775, d 1777), Elizabeth (b 1777, m Hon. Timothy Pitkin), Thomas Hill (see elsewhere under Prominent American Hubbards), Frederick (b 1779, d 1822) and William Henry (b 1786, d 1792).

GURDON SALTONSTALL HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard, of Guilford, Ct.), eldest child of Elizur and Abigail (Sage) Hubbard, was born in Windsor, Vt., Aug 22, 1802. His father, a lawyer, settled in Montreal, Canada, in 1815, where Gurdon, who disliked schools and books, clerked in a hardware store. In April, 1813, he embarked with a party for five years' service with the American Fur Company, controlled by John Jacob Astor, of New York. He passed an eventful life in its employ, enduring the customary pioneer's hardship, and participating in the Black Hawk Indian War with his company of 150 men who marched 250 miles in seven days. He was the most famous walker in the Northwest at that time, establishing "Hubbard's Trail," and walking in March, 1823, 75 miles over a wild, rough country between daylight and darkness, and outstripping a famous Indian walker who had been pitted against him unbeknown to GURDON. The Indians called him Pa-pa-ma-ta-be, the "swift walker." He entered Ft. Dearborn October 1, 1818, and thereafter was closely identified with its (Chicago's) interests. He says Chicago derived its name from the Indian word "chi-cack" (onion) and not from "chi-goug" (skunk) as some claim. In 1831 he married Elenora Berry, of Urbana, Ohio, and on his wedding trip saved from drowning in the Ohio River, filled with ice, the young son of Mr. Linton, a merchant of Terra Haute, Ind. The grateful father immediately changed the boy's name to Gurdon Saltonstall Hubbard Linton. His first wife died in 1838, and he then married his cousin, Mary Ann Hubbard, daughter of Ahira and Serena (Tucker) Hubbard. She was born in 1814. He wrote the first insurance policy in Chicago, established the first packing-house, helped organize the first Episcopal church, inaugurated the first line of packets between Chicago and Buffalo, built the Lake House (the first large hotel), was a director in the company that started Chicago's famous water-works and was one of the first trustees to found the "Town of Chicago, Feb 11, 1835." He helped organize the Chicago Board of Trade, became a member of the State Legislature, a director in both a State and a savings bank, and, in fact, was active in nearly all of Chicago's important early enterprises. He became blind during the last two years of his life, and patiently and in darkness awaited heavenly light, which came September 14, 1886. His name is syonomous with charity, patriotism, integrity and morality.

JOHN HENRY HUBBARD (descended from John Hubbard of Pomfret, Ct.), youngest son of Parley and Anne (Catlin) Hubbard, was born in Salisbury, Litchfield County, Ct., in 1804. He applied himself diligently to study in the district schools, becoming eventually a good Latin scholar and mathematician, and at fifteen years was qualified to teach a district school. He afterward studied law in the office of Hon. Elisha Sterling, a prominent lawyer of Salisbury, and before his twenty-second birthday was admitted to the bar, establishing himself at Lakeville, Ct., where he resided for thirty years. His industry and perseverance brought him to the front and secured for him a very handsome estate. In 1847 and in 1849 he was elected to the State Senate from the Seventeenth District, where he distinguished himself by successful opposition to the movement to bridge the Connecticut River at Middletown. Twenty years later, however, he saw that result achieved. In 1849 he was appointed State's Attorney for Litchfield County and held that office four years. He was known as one of the "Conscience Whigs" until the formation of the Republican party, when he became an active local leader in it. The cause of Unionism was dear to him. and he became its zealous client, sacrificing in consequence much of his business and estate to further its integrity. He helped to recruit the Thirteenth and Nineteenth Connecticut regiments, and gave freely of his funds to the men and their needy families. In the spring of 1863 he was elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress and re-elected in 1865 to the Thirty-ninth from the Fourth District. At Washington he labored faithfully for the public weal.

HON. JOHN HENRY HUBBARD, M. C., of Litchfield, Ct.

(Descended from John Hubbard of Pomfret, Ct.)

June 1, 1864, more than four hundred men of his own county regiment (Nineteenth Conn. Vols.) were killed and wounded. They were his neighbors, acquaintances and friends. Many of them had enlisted at his solicitation. It was an anxious time. Every hour that he could snatch from his public duty he devoted to the soldiers. There was not a day that he did not visit one or more of the Washington hospitals. He sought out every Connecticut man, sat by their bedsides, wrote letters for them and procured for those who were unable medicine and delicacies at his own expense. No one appealed to him in vain. Many dving messages he faithfully transmitted to loved ones at home. He assisted friends to identify and obtain the bodies of their dead, and in more than one instance he paid for embalming bodies to be sent North, which he never regretted. He always declared he had abundant reward in the success of the cause for which these men fought. After his return from Congress he engaged again in law practice and continued in it until a short time before his death, which occurred July 30, 1872.

Mr. HUBBARD had three brothers, Joseph Augustus, Hiram Bos-WORTH and ALEXANDER. CHESTER DORMAN HUBBARD (descended from William Hubbard of Ipswich, Mass.), son of Dana and Asenath (Dorman) Hubbard, was born Nov 25, 1814, in Hamden, New Haven County, Conn., and died in Wheeling, West Virginia, Aug 23, 1891. He graduated from Weslevan University, Conn., in 1840, and removed to western Pennsylvania in 1815 and to Wheeling, West Va., in 1819 with his parents, where in 1840-53 he was extensively engaged in the lumber business; during 1851-2 he was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates; President of the Bank of Wheeling in 1853, a member of the Richmond Convention in 1861, and voted against secession; also a member of the Wheeling Convention which adopted the restored government of West Virginia: a member of W. Va. Senate 1863-4; a member of the National Republican Convention at Baltimore in 1864; Republican Congressman in the 30th and 40th Congresses; Secretary of the Wheeling Iron and Nail Company, President of the Pittsburg, Wheeling and Ky. R. R. Co., and also of the German Bank of Wheeling, and a member of the Republican National Convention in 1880.

CHESTER DORMAN HUBBARD was one of the foremost figures in his city and State. In business, politics, education, religion and society he was an active force to the day of his death, and always for good. His tall, spare figure, earnest face and dignified, kindly bearing made the physical man noteworthy, and his alert intelligence, liberal and thoughtful education, firm and unselfish purpose made him an intellectual and moral power. His name meant integrity, not merely obedience to the civil and moral law, but an affirmative, aggressive righteousness. It was well illustrated by his refusal, when a member of Congress, to accept the back pay which Congress had voted to its members. The City of Wheeling owes to him the existence of considerable manufacturing establishments and an important railway line, and more than to any one else the original establishment of its free school system and the maintenance of higher schools for both sexes. The Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he was attached through life, received his best support and service in all branches of its church and Sundayschool work, from a seat in its general conference to its humblest position.

In politics he was originally a Whig. With all his might he resisted secession, voting against it as a member of the Virginia Convention, and coming home from Richmond to aid in the civil and military organization of the Union men of the State. He called to order the first Union Convention of the State and was a delegate to the succeeding convention which reorganized the government of Virginia, and paved the way for the formation of the State of West Virginia. After the war he was a warm adherent of the Republican party. Perhaps the most remarkable thing in his long career was his youthfulness. Through all struggles and trials this was manifest. Age wrought lines in his face, but not in his heart. In all relations of life he drew young people to him. And with all his honors and duties and labors he was greatest in his humility and charity, and, to those close to him, in his tenderness. His life honored the name of Hubbard.

He married Sep 29, 1842, Sarah Pallister, of Wheeling. Children-WILLIAM PALLISTER (b Dec 24, 1843, grad. Wesleyan University in 1863; lawyer at Wheeling, West Va.; served in West Va. SAMUEL HUBBARD (descended from William Hubbard of Ipswich, Mass.), son of William and Joanna (Perkins) Hubbard, was born in Boston, Mass., June 2, 1785, and died there December 24, 1847, a distinguished jurist, scholar and citizen. In 1802 he graduated from Yale and commenced the study of law. After his admittance to the bar, he commenced practice at Biddeford, Me., taking the law office of Judge Mellen in 1806. In 1810 he returned to his native city and was elected to the legislature as representative, and afterward for several terms as state senator. In 1827 Yale, and in 1842 Harvard University conferred upon him the degree of LL.D., and in this latter year he was elected to the high office of Judge of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, which honor he held until his death. His ancestry upon both sides has been a distinguished one, representing the best element that left England to live an untrammelled life of religious liberty in New England, and the element that naturally fell heir to the power to govern in a newlyformed colony. Gov. John Haynes, Gov. John Leverett, Sir Richard

Saltonstall and Rev. William Hubbard, the New England Historian, all rose up prominently in early colonial life, and were a few of the number of his noted ancestors. Mr. HUBBARD married June 8, 1815, in Boston, (1) Mary Anne Greene, b in Demerara, British Guiana, Apl 10. 1790, d July 10, 1827, dau Gardiner and Elizabeth (Hubbard) Greene (Gardiner Greene was born Sep 23, 1753, and d in 1832 the wealthiest man in New England). GARDINER GREENE HUBBARD (descended from William Hubbard of Ipswich, Mass.), eldest son of Samuel and Mary Ann (Greene) Hubbard, was born Aug 25, 1822, at Sweet Auburn (now Mt. Auburn), Cambridge, Mass., where his father was spending the summer. He graduated at Dartmouth College in 1841, and received the degree of LL. D. from Columbian University, Washington, D. C., in 1888, and from Dartmouth College, N. H., in 1894. He was also made Regent of the Smithsonian Institute in 1894. Choosing the law he studied it and practiced the profession in Boston, in December, 1842, as partner of Benjamin R. Curtis, subsequently Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and continued in the profession until 1869. He also interested himself in prominent business enterprises; among others, the starting of the street railroad from Cambridge to Boston, the first road of that kind ever built outside of the city of New York; also the Cambridge Water Works and Gas Light Companies. Of these companies he was president for many years. He was also a member of the Massachusetts State Board of Education for eight years, in which cause he has also been prominent.

HON. SAMUEL HUBBARD, LL.D., of Boston, Mass.

(Descended from William Hubbard of Ipswich, Mass.)

HON. GARDINER GREENE HUBBARD, LL.D., of Washington, D. C.

(Descended from William Hubbard of Ipswich, Mass.)

That which Mr. HUBBARD regards as the best work of his life is the establishment of the first school for the deaf in this country at Chelmsford, Mass., in 1866, where instead of signs the children were taught speech and lip reading. This little school was very successful, and after repeated appeals to the legislature of Massachusetts (in which he was opposed by the teachers of the sign system then in use), a charter was obtained by which the Clarke Institution of Northampton, Mass., was organized and the little school at Chelmsford transferred to it. Mr. HUBBARD has been connected with this school either as president or director since its organization. It is now one of the foremost schools in the world, and has completely changed the method of instruction of the deaf in this country.

He was commissioner to the Centennial Exposition in 1876, and the same year he was appointed by President Grant Chairman of the United States Commission to investigate and determine the proper rates to be paid by the Post Office Department for the transportation of the mail; but his last work has been the bringing to successful culmination, through numberless obstacles and public skepticism, the now well known Bell Telephone system, invented by his son-in-law, Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, and brought to successful realization by his capital and executive ability.

Mr. HUBBARD is President of the National Geographic Society, in which he takes a lively interest; a trustee of the Columbian University, First Vice President of the American Association of Manufacturers and Inventors, and President of the Board of Trustees of the Church of the Covenant of Washington, D. C., and Director in various Telephone and other corporations. Mr. HUBBARD is foremost among Americans in advancing the interests of science. His position as President of the Geographic Society is his while he chooses to retain it. As the foster father of the telephone system his is the praise. The litterateur, and all men of cult and enterprise are welcomed at his home. His fine library in Washington is always accessible to the worthy student. His hospitality is unbounded and equally extended to his friends by Mrs. Hubbard, who aids him in many good works and beneficent movements. His ancestry includes a long list of early colonial representatives, and being so distinguished in their varied spheres, it has seemed fitting to briefly outline these relations.

Mr. HUBBARD is ninth in descent from William Hubbard of Ipswich; eighth in descent from his son, Rev. William Hubbard of Ipswich; ninth in descent from Rev. Nathaniel Rogers, Pastor of the Congregation at Ipswich 1638–55, whose father, John Rogers, was President of Harvard College; eighth in descent from Sir John Leverett, delegate to the General Court of Massachusetts 1651-53, 1663-64, member of the Governor's Council 1665-71, Major General of Provincial Forces 1663-73, Deputy Governor of Massachusetts 1671-73, Governor of Massachusetts 1673-76 during Philip's War, and knighted by Charles II, for services in that period; ninth in descent from John Haynes, third Governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony, first Governor of Connecticut, commissioner of the United Colonies of New England for defense against the Indians in 1643, and Colonel of the Connecticut forces in the Pequot war of 1636; eighth in descent from Richard Russell, member of the General Court of Massachusetts and Speaker 1658-9, 1654, 1656, 1658, assistant and member of the Governor's Council 1659-74, and Treasurer of Massachusetts 1644-74; ninth in descent from George Wyllys, assistant and member of the Governor's Council of Connecticut 1639-40, Deputy Governor 1641, and Governor in 1642; eighth in descent from Samuel Wyllys, assistant and member of the Governor's Council of Connecticut 1654-85, and Commissioner to the Congress of the United Colonies 1661-62, 64, 67; fifth in descent from Jean Paul Mascarene, b. 1684, of a Huguenot family in France, who entered the English army as a lieutenant and came with it to Nova Scotia; he was a member of the Council in 1720 and associated with the Governors of New Hampshire and Massachusetts in negotiating the treaty of 1725 with the Eastern Indians, Acting Governor of Nova Scotia 1740-9, Major General in 1788, and died in Boston in May, 1760.

As a matter of a little curious interest, herewith is also given his descent line through various male and female ancestors from King Edward I., eldest son of King Henry III., House of Plantagenet, England, tempo 1272, down to himself, making him of the twenty-third generation:

(1) King EDWARD I-House of Plantagenet:

(4) Margaret de Audley m Ralf Stafford, 1st Earl of Stafford and Steward of Gascony;

NEHEMIAH HUBBARD (descended from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.), third child of the thirteen children of Nehemiah and Sarah (Sill) Hubbard, was born April 10, 1752, in Middletown, Ct. He married Cornelia Willis in 1777, who died November 28, 1781. He then married Lucy Starr February 12, 1785, and at her death married April 22, 1823, widow Hannah (Burnham) Latimer. At fourteen he entered the store of Matthew Talcott and continued there until twenty-one, when he embarked for the West Indies, first as supercargo and then as captain and merchant. In 1776 Governor Trumbull appointed him paymaster of Colonel Burrill's (Connecticut) regiment. In May, 1777, General Greene appointed him Deputy Quartermaster-General for Connecticut. He was present at the siege of Yorktown at the surrender of Cornwallis. As a provider of army supplies none ever excelled him in fertile resources, promptness, decision and executive ability. At many a critical juncture the supplies from Connecticut came to hand most opportunely through his masterly energy and relieved the starved fighting patriots. He possessed the warm confidence of Generals Washington and Greene, Governor Jonathan Trumbull, and Alexander Hamilton. (See portrait under Revolutionary War Hubbards.)

The subjoined original letters* addressed to him have recently come to light and are introduced here as subjects of interest, bearing as they do some of the famous signatures of foremost Americans. His own handwriting is of considerable historic value. They are literal transcriptions:

HEAD QUARTERS, 15th October, 1778.

Sir: You are immediately on receipt of this, to use every exertion in your power to furnish Mr. (? Meason) the Clothier with an ample supply of teams and carriages for bringing on the new clothing to camp with the utmost dispatch.

I am, Sir, Your most obed, servt.

Giggshengsen

The Quarter Master at Hartford.

Morristown, [N. J.] Decem. 16th, [17]79.

Sir: Mr. Olney wrote you a day or two since to send for the use of my family, if to be purchased, some Sugar and other Articles. If you can send me a quarter cask of wine, either of Port or Maderia it will oblige me, as Mrs. Greene has none to drink, and expects to be sick in a short time. I have only time to add that I am, with esteem,

Your friend,

Mr. Hubbard.

[Major-General Nathaniel Green].

LEBANON, 12th Jany, 1779.

Sir: Be so good as to inform me if you can furnish me a Horse from the Public Stables for Carriage of my baggage to Philadelphia. He must be a stout, strong, well-fleshed fellow.

I am not certain how soon I shall need him. Suppose my Receipt to deliver him to the Public in Phila will be sufficient.

Please send me word by my Brother what I may depend on.

I am, sir, Your most humble servt,

Nehemiah Hubbard, Hartford.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3, 1792.

SIR: I heared with much regret, though under the appearances which must have struck you, not with much surprise, of your determination to decline the appointment of Superintendent of the Manufacturing Society. This institution has presented itself to my mind as of such real public importance, that I feel myself much interested in its success; and I acknowledge that I continue to entertain a conviction of the practicability of ensuring that success by judicious management. To this end a fit person as Superintendent is undoubtedly an essential mean. And my repeated reflections have proved to me that it is far from easy to find a choice of proper characters. Hence I feel a peculiar anxiety that you should reconsider your resolution and still consent to undertake the business.

^{*} Originals now in possession of William Edward Hulbert (descendant of Thomas Hulburt, Saybrooke and Wethersfield, Ct., 1635-39), Cromwell, Ct.

Those characters in the Direction, who were too much invelopped in Speculation to pay proper attention to the truth, will henceforth be out of the question, and I entertain no doubt that the next Election will supply their places in a manner which will inspire confidence. I am allso persuaded that the Superintendent, if a competent and trust worthy person, will be cloathed with such a portion of discretionary authority as will enable him to fulfill the objects of the Society. To this I may add that subordinate characters to be placed at the head of the several branches (I mean of the Cotton Manufactory) of whose competency there is satisfactory evidence, are actually engaged, and that a considerable progress has been made in preparation.

The Society meet on the 15th instant. It is my intention to meet them, and I feel a confidence that I shall be able to give just [such] a direction to their measures as will recover the ground that has been lost by delay and indecision. If I can by that time announce that you are willing to join the Company, it will give me particular satisfaction.

I will however observe that in such case it is of moment you should be able to enter promptly on the business. The spot must be fixed upon and the buildings commenced. Let me, I pray you, previous to that time hear from you on the subject.

I am aware that the step proposed to you is of consequence. I will only add that if the event shall not answer expectation, I should feel myself bound to endeavor to render it not injurious to you by any source which might be in my power.

I am, with assurances, Your Obed. Servant,

[NEHEMIAH HUBBARD'S STATEMENT OF HIS SERVICES—NOT DATED.]

"The following is a Narration embodying the Services of Nehem. Hubbard of Middletown, County of Middlesex, State of Conn., in the service of the United States, which are as follows, viz.: That in May, 1776, he was appointed by Governor Trumbull a paymaster to a Regiment of Connecticut Troops Commanded by Colo. Burrell, Lieut. Colo Buell, and Major Sedgwick, as field officer, & was ordered to Ticonderoga: That on my arrival at Albany (I had an order from Genl. Schuyler) I was employed by Jona. Trumbull, Esq., Paymaster of the Northern Department.

"By order of Genl. Schuyler, then at Albany, I was ordered to take a sum of money and proceed to the westward for the payment of the Troops stationed at various Posts on the Mohawk River, Colo. Dayton's Regiment being at Fort Stanwix. Having compleated that Service, I returned to Albany, & from thence Proceeded to Ticonderoga and joined the regiment of Colo. Burrell on Mount Independence, where I remained till some time in Jany, when I returned to Hartford and for some time served under Jeremh. Wadsworth, Esq., Commd. Genl; that in May, 1777, I was appointed by Major Genl Green, the Quarter Mr. Genl of the Army of the United States, his Deputy for the State of Connecticut; that I served in that capacity untill the resignation of Genl Green; after which I was again appointed by Colo. Pickering, then acting as Quarter Master Genl. I declined to accept of the appointment by Colo. Pickering, having it in my Power to do much better for myself in other business. I nevertheless continued in the business untill I was relieved by the appointment of a person to take my Place, when I quit the service of the United States. My Accounts at the Treasury department, together with the letters herewith annexed, will be sufficient to substantiate the foregoing statements. For which services I have a just claim on the United States for compensation; and my accounts will prove that my services were more than some others of the Deputies of other States; and as I am nearly eighty years of age, a compensation for part services will be accepted."

After the war he resumed the occupation of merchant, and from 1808 until 1822 was President of the Middletown Savings Bank, also a justice of the peace and city treasurer of Middletown. The land upon which now stand the Wesleyan College Buildings was freely donated by him as an evidence of his public spirit. In Trumbull County, Ohio, he owned vast tracts of land, and Hubbard, Ohio, was named after him, He was of fine stature, erect, of frank deportment, accurate judgment, and keen discrimination. He was very liberal, and the tried and true friend of the struggling young man striving for a competency through rectitude of conduct His church work was earnest and of inspiring influence. He died Feb 6, 1837, one of Middletown's most exemplary citizens, and is now enjoying the fruits that a well spent earthly life entitles one to in the upper world. The inventory of his estate amounted to $79,374,34, a large fortune in those days. AMBITIOUS NOMENCLATURE.

Romeo and Juliet, Act III.—Shakespeare.

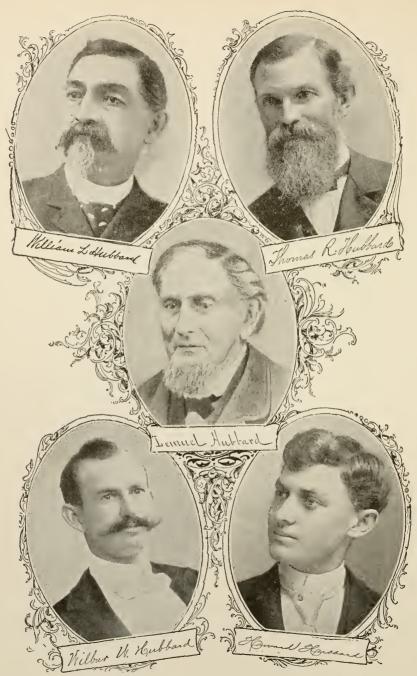

Besides the regulation lot of ordinary, queer, and odd, Scripture and ancient given names which will appear in the index, there are a few living Hubbards on the publisher's lists (of whom no particulars appear, through no fault of this office) whose names are historic, histrionic and otherwise famous. Romeo lives in New Jersey, while Juliet sojourns in the West, near to Ophelia, whose home is in Nebraska. Alabama holds firmly to Diana, Michigan is safe with Leonidas in its borders. Georgia rejoices in Virgil, Massachusetts in Darius, while New York is doubly happy with Homer and Orlando.

GOVERNOR HENRY HUBBARD of Charlestown, N. H.

(Descended from George Hubbard of Guilford, Ct.)

A LINE OF MARYLAND HUBBARDS.

(Descended from Adley Hubbard of Maryland.)

Land of my Sires! What mortal hand Can e'er untie the filial band That knits me to thy rugged strand—Sir Walter Scott.

A DLEY HUBBARD, like all of the name who came to America, was an Englishman. His ancestry in England has never been traced. When he arrived, which was in 1660, he settled in Maryland. It is recorded that after 18 years his sister "Bridget" joined him in America. He was a Quaker, as were his descendants. A large proportion of Hubbards through the States of Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina were Quakers about this period and later. It is yet undiscovered who his wife was and how many children they had. One son, however, was named—

RICHARD HUBBARD, who was called "Captain." He bought land of one John Ward. The deed of conveyance was made out at Sassafras River, Cecil County, Maryland, and bears date of April 7, 1705. Among his children was a son named—

CHARLES HUBBARD, who removed to Dorchester County, Maryland, and took out a patent for a tract of land in 1724. This was known as "Hubbard's Addition." He had a son named—

SOLOMON HUBBARD, who was born in Dorchester County, and who, in the year 1765, secured a patent for a tract of land in this county, which was called "Hubbard's Desire." SOLOMON had a son named—

JESSE HUBBARD, who was born in 1742 and died in 1815. He was a planter and lived in Caroline County, Maryland. (There was a Jesse Hubbard in the "State Navy" of Virginia during the war of the Revolution and he may have been the person mentioned.) He left six children—Peter, T Edward (see following), Jesse, Rebecca, John and Nicla.

T¹ EDWARD HUBBARD was born in 1765 and died in 1832. He was a planter and inherited his father's plantation, which was situated near Denton, Caroline County, where he lived until his death. Until this period EDWARD and his ancestors were all Quakers. He left eight children—Newton, Celia, T² Lemuel, Sarah, Eliza, Mary, Wright, and Jesse who had a son Alva.

T² LEMUEL HUBBARD, third child of Edward Hubbard, was born June 2, 1799. His occupation was that of a planter. He resided near Preston, Caroline County, Md. In the year 1823 he married Mary Rumbold, daughter of Judge John Rumbold of the same County and State. They lived to celebrate the 50th anniversary of their wedding he dying eight years later, on August 23d, 1881.

LEMUEL HUBBARD was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for upwards of fifty years. His widow, at this writing, is still living, having attained the advanced age of 88 years. She is a most remarkable and most estimable old lady, whose companionship is sought by old and young. Her health is excellent and she is in full possession of all her faculties. She reads and writes without the aid of spectacles. Children—Eliza Jane (b Jan 17, 1827, m Jan 31, 1844. William Pritchett, who d in 1871), JOHN EDWARD (b Mch 16, 1829, m Jan 5, 1868, Emma Wainwright), T3 THOMAS RUMBOLD (see following), Elizabeth Anne (b Oct 3, 1833, m Jan 13, 1857, Capt. Peter N. Willis), Zebdial Potter (b June 2, 1847, m Jan 9, 1878, Nettie Parks) and Matthew Patton (b May 23, 1849, m 1879, Mollie Parks).

T3 THOMAS RUMBOLD HUBBARD, third child of Lemuel and Mary (Rumbold) Hubbard, was born in Caroline County, Maryland, June 28, 1851. He lived at the parental homestead until his 21st year, when he entered into the mercantile business, which he pursued until 1875. He then with his brothers, John Edward and William Lemuel, commenced the manufacture of super-phosphates at Chestertown, Md., under the firm name of Hubbard Brothers, being the pioneer manufacturers of fertilizers on the Eastern shore of Maryland. In 1878, the firm being dissolved by mutual consent, he associated his son, Wilbur Watson Hubbard, with him in the business, which to the present time has been conducted under the firm name of T. R. Hubbard & Son. He married, Nov 29, 1859, Josephine Mason Watson, daughter of George W. and Mary Watson of Milford, Del. Children—T4 WILBUR WATSON (see following), and Anna (b Apl 22, 1862, m Sep 20, 1892, Rowland Watts,

A. M., Professor of Mathematics in Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md.).

T⁴ WILBUR WATSON HUBBARD, only son of Thomas Rumbold and Josephine Mason (Watson) Hubbard, was born Sep 19, 1860, at Greensborough, Caroline County, Md., and was educated at private schools, and completed his education at Washington College, Chestertown, Md. At the age of 18 years he entered into business with his father in the manufacture of fertilizers. His keen business push has contributed largely to building up an extensive trade in Maryland and adjoining States. In 1890 he was largely instrumental in organizing the Second National Bank of Chestertown, Md., and of which institution he has been one of the most active directors since its foundation. He married November 20, 1890, Etta Belle Ross, daughter of Judge James E. and Miriam (Warren) Ross of Mexico, Mo. Children—Miriam Warren (b Sep 20, 1891), and Thomas Ross (b Dec 30, 1894).

WILLIAM LEMUEL HUBBARD, seventh child of Lemuel and Mary (Rumbold) Hubbard, was born Apl 18, 1841, on the plantation of his father, near Preston, Caroline County, Md., where he remained until he attained his majority, during which time he attended one of the public schools of the county. He went East at the age of 21, making his home in Portland, Maine, where he remained until the close of the Civil War in 1865, when he returned to Maryland. He was then married at the age of 24 to Sarah Lavenia Wiley, daughter of Levin Wiley, Esq., of Federalsburg, Caroline County, Md. At this age he entered the mercantile business in the State of Delaware, which was continued six years. In the year 1872 he formulated plans to engage in the manufacture of fertilizers, which was commenced on a small scale, associating his brother, John Edward, with him as a partner, and trading under the firm name of Hubbard & Brother, at Easton, Md. In the year 1886 his brother retired. He then established his business in Baltimore City at No. 10 Light Street, under the firm name of Hubbard & Company.

This firm's business has assumed large proportions, and is now regarded as one of the staunchest enterprises in Baltimore City. Mr. HUBBARD is the senior member of this firm and one of the pioneers of the fertilizer business in this country. He is regarded as valuable authority upon the subject of chemical manures. He makes his home in Easton, Talbot County, Md., where he has other large business interests. Mr. Hubbard has followed in the footsteps of his father in his Church views, and his entire household are strict adherents to the Doctrines of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Children—Julia A. (b August 2, 1866, d Nov 22, 1869), J. Harry (b Oct 11, 1868, d Apl 6, 1890), T. May (b Oct 20, 1870, m June 6, 1894, Dr. Joseph Shermer Garrison), U² Howard (see following), Grace W. (b Sep 28, 1884), and William Lemuel (b Feb 15, 1888).

U² HOWARD HUBBARD, fourth child of William Lemuel and Sarah Lavenia (Wiley) Hubbard, was born January 22, 1874, at Wyoming, Del. He received his primary education at the schools of Easton, Md., and graduated at Baltimore City College and Bryant and Stratton's Business College. In the year 1893 he accepted a position with Hubbard & Company of Baltimore City, of which firm his father is the senior member.

Mr. HUBBARD, though young, has exhibited marked business ability for one of his years. His attention to duty was rewarded by an admittance as a partner in the above firm, January 1, 1895. He married Feb 6, 1895, F. Louise Broumel, daughter of James Broumel, Esq., deceased, late of Baltimore City.

T⁴ Mr. WILBUR WATSON HUBBARD was one of the delegates at the "World's Congress of Bankers and Financiers" which convened at the Art Palace, Chicago, June 19th, 1893.

PUBLISHER'S NOTE.

When I was a baby, of course, like all other babies I was helpless, but I was (I am told) lusty, fat and made my existence known by the usual method! "Such a baby!" my parents evidently thought, for I was cight months old before I was named. The gamut of names was run over and over again, but without agreement or decision. Finally the Rev. E. D. Chapman, pastor of Baptist Church in Deep River, Ct., calling, was appealed to as a sort of referee. He coolly took a memoir of Harlan Page, the celebrated divine, from his overcoat pocket, and calling for pen and ink, wrote what has ever since been my name. This memoir was published in 1835 by the American Tract Society, in the building directly opposite my present office window!

It was an odd name, in the nomenclature of the Hubbard tribes, and I was surprised some ten years since to find another of the same "front" name living in Bradford, Pa., and now within a few months of publication, his son, with same name, pops up, living in Chicago. What line they belong to, or where to locate them, I have been unable to learn.

His literary taste was for the stirring class, however, and so prosaic law books were closed and shelved and live journalism embraced instead. He removed to Iowa City, Iowa, and found ample opportunities there for his graceful and forcible pen by editing the State's leading paper, then known as the Iowa Capital Reporter. With the exception of about five years in business at Memphis, Tenn., shortly after the war, he has ever since been connected with the press in St. Louis, and Washington, D. C. Since 1889 "Dick" Sylvester has been the associate editor of the Washington Post, the Capital City's leading journal, and is widely known by all his fellow-scribes in Washington and elsewhere. His review of the political and public career of Samuel J. Kirkwood, the famous war governor of Iowa, in the Washington Post, was the finest effort of its kind the compiler ever read. She married Henry Hamilton Sylvester (b in Leicester, Mass., 1792, d 1871 at Hartland, Vt.), Feb 25, 1816, in Charlestown, N. In 1866 he engaged in business in Boston, Mass., for three years, and in 1875 went abroad and traveled for a year in foreign countries. Returning to his native town Mr. HUBBARD devoted himself to the management of the extensive business interests which his father was compelled to abandon on account of his failing eyesight. One enterprise of his was the development of an extensive system for supplying Montpelier with "pure spring water." In 1894 he undertook the construction of a handsome building to be known as the Kellogg-Hubbard Public Library, which, when completed, will be donated to the town. Mr. HUBBARD has extensive real estate interests there, which have become valuable through the capable management of his father and himself. He is a member of the "Sons of the American Revolution," and has never married.* His father was-

ERASTUS HUBBARD, eldest child of Roger and Fanny (Burbank) Hubbard, who was born in Montpelier Sep 8, 1811, and died there Oct 10, 1890; he married May 2, 1837, Arabella Gratia Blake (b in Chelsea, Vt., Nov 26, 1815, now living-1894), dau Amplias Blake (b in Keene, N. ERASTUS HUBBARD attended the town schools and Washington County Grammar School and then entered mercantile life, which he pursued from 1832 to 1855. In 1848 an explosion in his store caused his almost entire blindness later in life. He was one of Montpelier's substantial citizens, and in 1857 signed a $100,000 bond to secure the rebuilding of the State House at Montpelier which was destroved by fire that year. He never desired official preferment, but contented himself with doing unostentatious good and enjoying the respect and good-will of his fellow-townsmen. His large real estate interests passed into the hands of his only son at his death. His only daughter Lucy (b in Montpelier May 6, 1838) married in Jan, 1865, Hon. Benjamin Franklin Fifield (son of Col. Orange Fifield of Orange, Vt.) of Montpelier, Vt., a prominent railroad and corporation lawyer of that State, and has three daughters.

Mr. STRADER also spent two years in Spokane, Wash., but is now living in Ashtabula with his mother. He retired in 1880 from the hardware firm of George C. Hubbard & Co. So far he has successfully resisted all temptations to become a Benedict. His mother—

CORNELIA FRANCES HUBBARD was born in Ashtabula Aug 1, 1818, and in journeying to Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, in the Spring of 1842, with her parents and sisters, met aboard the boat running from Cincinnati to Burlington, Iowa, an enterprising young steamboat man, Peter

He served an apprenticeship in a printing office there and then engaged in steamboating upon the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers until he was thirty, amassing during this period a snug property. In 1848 he began to operate in railroading, banking and insurance, and in 1868 enjoyed the distinction of being the first Democrat elected to Congress from the first District of Ohio, owing to his personal popularity. George Hubbard—Mary Bishop, John Hubbard—Mary Merriam, Isaac Hubbard—Anne Warner, John Hubbard—Hannah Cowles, John Hubbard—Anne Hunt, Samuel Hubbard—Elizabeth Swan.

THOMAS SWAN HUBBARD, youngest child of Samuel and Elizabeth (Swan) Hubbard, was born in Franklin, Vt., Dec 20, 1811, and graduated from Middlebury College in 1834 and from Andover Theological Seminary in 1838. He was pastor of Congregational churches at Stockbridge and Chelsea, Vt., about eight years each, and later of churches at Dunton, Ill., and Gaysville and Rochester, Vt., and has held also various civil positions in life, being Superintendent of Schools of Windsor County, and a member for many years of both branches of the Vermont Legislature. He displayed great activity and earnestness in the debates concerning his State's welfare, especially at the convention called to amend the State's Constitution. To him was largely due the change from annual to biennial sessions. He was also an earnest Unionist during the Rebellion, and has practiced faithfully the precepts he has taught from the pulpit, living and enjoying always to the fullest extent the blessings of his faith. At all times was he the ready foeman of intemperance and tobacco. During his ministerial career he accomplished much in advancing the science of agriculture, and witnessed good results from his efforts. Though over 80, his mind is still clear and active, and, though now retired from the ministry, he is always ready to step into a vacant pulpit and deliver a forcible discourse. He is the sole survivor of ten children, and was a cousin to the late Henry Hubbard, Governor of New Hampshire. He married at Stockbridge, Vt., Sep 24, 1839, Mary Fay. H., Dec 29, 1891. Among his business associates he was credited with great integrity and honesty of purpose. He then went to Boston, Mass., and studied and practiced Mechanical Engineering until 1867, retaining in the meantime and developing his fondness for Chemistry and Materia Medica. A two years' course at European institutions then ensued and equipped him with abundant scientific and medical knowledge which in past has enabled him to invent a valuable compound known as "Dr. Hubbard's Vegetable Germicide." This he has manufactured since 1885, and it has acquired a world-renowned reputation.

2. 1864, and graduated from Goddard Seminary, Barre, Vt., in 1883. He commenced business life at Huron, South Dakota in July, 1883, with the lumber firm of Hubbard Brothers (Albert Allen and Robert Morris Hubbard) in the eapacity of book-keeper, resigning his position in December, 1884, to take that of examiner of lands with his brother, John Frank Hubbard, Loan Agent at Atlantic, Iowa. At this place in 1885 he established a system of daily "County Reports" for the use of bankers and business men, which has since been generally adopted throughout the western states. In

May, 1887, he opened a farm loan agency at Broken Bow, Neb., in which he is still interested. Always an ardent sportsman, the year 1891 was passed in the training and study of hunting dogs (setters and pointers), and articles from his pen under the nom de plume of "Hub" appeared in many of the leading sportsmen's journals. As Kennel Editor of Sports Afield of Denver in 1892-3 the results of his previous careful study of canine nature were given to the public. The severe drouth in the West of 1890 and 1893 set the irrigation movement afoot and in March, 1894, he was offered the management of the Culbertson Irrigating and Water Power Co., with which corporation he has since been actively identified. His father-

DESCENT LINE OF ROBERT HUBBARD, JOSIAH MEIGS HUBBARD, SARAH SILL (HUBBARD) WILLIAMS, MARY ANNA (HUBBARD) BUNCE, MARTHA LOUISE HUBBARD, AND LUCY LYMAN (HUBBARD) HUBBARD.

(Paternal Line)—George Hubbard—Elizabeth Watts, Nathaniel Hubbard—Mary Earle, John Hubbard—Elizabeth Stowe, Jeremiah Hubbard—Elizabeth Meigs, Josiah Meigs Hubbard-Sarah Sill Hubbard.

(Maternal Line)—George Hubbard—Elizabeth Watts, Nathaniel Hubbard—Mary Earle, Nathaniel Hubbard—Sarah Johnson, Nehemiah Hubbard—Sarah Sill, Elisha Hubbard—Martha Roberts, Sarah Sill

Hubbard—Josiah Meigs Hubbard.

ROBERT HUBBARD was born in Middletown April 19, 1831, and in 1852 went to California, where he resided for four years and then returned to his home in Middletown. At President Lincoln's call for 600,000 men in 1862 he felt that the country was upon the eve of a civil conflict of great magnitude, and that it was his duty to enroll as one of the 600,000. He immediately enlisted in the 14th Conn. Infty and wrote to his brother Josiah, then in Kansas, telling of his act, and entreating him to come home and care for their aged parents. Josiah, in the meantime, had mailed a letter to him of like import, and the two communications passed each other in transitu. ROBERT HUBBARD was killed at the battle of Antietam Sep 17, 1862.

JOSIAH MEIGS HUBBARD was born in Middletown July 16, 1832. In 1856 he went to Kansas with the Beecher Rifle Company, and was a member of the first Kansas State Senate. In 1862 he was impelled by the same sense of duty his elder brother was, and enlisted in the 11th Kansas Cavalry, serving until the close of the war, when he returned to Middletown and settled upon his father's farm, who, in the meantime, had died. He is in touch with those who believe in progressive farming, being a member of the Board of Agriculture and a trustee of the Storrs Agricultural School. He has represented Middletown in the State Legislature. In July, 1863, he married Harriet Fairchild, and had ROBERT (b Nov 16, 1867). Nov 26, 1894, Mr. HUBBARD m at Los Angeles, Cal., Mrs. Lavinia (Bacon) Coe of Pasadena, Cal., formerly of Middletown, Ct.

MARY ANNA HUBBARD was born in Middletown January 3, 1838, and May 17, 1865, married James Hough Bunce of Kensington, Ct., now the leading dry goods merchant of Middletown, and the most genial and popular citizen of the town. Mrs. BUNCE takes a prominent part in all enterprises that are helpful to Christianity and humanity, and is a member of the senior (Wadsworth) Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Connecticut. In 1893 she was elected its treasurer. Children—Mary Emeline (b Nov 24, 1866), Grace (b Sep 2, 1872), James (b Dec 31, 1875), and Richard (b May 11, 1881).

MARTHA LOUISE HUBBARD was born in Middletown October 1, 1840, and has never married. She resides at the family homestead situated at Johnson's Lane, about three miles south of Middletown, and is the owner of a mountain, from the top of which can be seen so picturesque and enchanting a view that it has been enumerated along with the famous views of Europe and the world.

LUCY LYMAN HUBBARD was born in Middletown Jan 15, 1845. Feb 27, 1866, she married Nathaniel Newell Hubbard of Greensburg, Ohio. They resided in Rock Creek, Ohio, until his death in 1868, and then she returned to Middletown. Dec 23, 1889, she married Joseph Warren Hubbard of Kenilworth, Ohio, and makes that place her residence. Mrs. HUBBARD, though residing in the West, can not be weaned from her attachment for New England, whose fair name she is always proud and anxious to defend. She is a Daughter of the American Revolution of the Ohio Chapter, a real Yankee, and a fervent hater of the Democratic party. One son was born to Mr. and Mrs. HUBBARD Jan 29, 1893, who died Feb 1, 1893.

DESCENT LINE OF EDWARD WARREN DAY, NEW YORK CITY.

George Hubbard—Elizabeth Watts, Joseph Hubbard—Mary Porter, John Hubbard—Mary Phillips, Nathan Hubbard—Lydia Judd, John Hubbard—Hannah Paine, Josiah Hubbard—Eunice Chapin, Lewis Hubbard—Evaline Adams, Harriet Hubbard—Edward Parsons Day.

EDWARD WARREN DAY, son of Edward Parsons and Harriet (Hubbard) Day, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1857, and was educated in the Brooklyn schools and, later, graduated in 1875 at Leroy Academy, Leroy, Genesee County, N. Y., where he lived his childhood years with his grandparents, Lewis and Evaline (Adams) Hubbard. Afterward he went to Rockford, Ill., and lived with his aunt's husband, Judge Charles Works, learning there the printing and newspaper business and eventually becoming a traveling correspondent, visiting nearly every large city in the United States. With the exception of four years spent traveling in the West, he has lived since 1880 in Washington, D. C., being employed for ten years in the government service upon the Staff of the Congressional Record, the United States Biennial Register, and in the compilation of the Rebellion Records. In 1887, he superintended the compilation of the names of 140,000 government employés, with incidental data, which embraced two volumes. These volumes are called the Biennial Register or "Blue Book." He resigned from the Interior Department April 22, 1889, to accept a civil service appointment in the War Department, from which bureau of the government he was retired June 30, 1894, with hundreds of others, by an economical Democratic Administration. He then returned to New York City and gave his sole attention to the interests of this publication. While living in Washington he became a Knight Templar, a Member of the National Geographic Society (Hon. Gardiner Greene Hubbard, President), and a member of the Sons of the American Revolution and of various rowing, athletic, and bicycle clubs. He has devoted several years to disentangling Hubbard genealogical threads that have been sent to him from every quarter to be straightened out. He has never married. His mother-

HARRIET HUBBARD, eldest of the six children (three of whom died young, leaving Harriet, Alfred Joel and Ellen) of Lewis and Evaline (Adams) Hubbard, was born March 2, 1832, in Sandisfield, Berkshire County, Mass., and removed "West" in 1834 with her parents. The family journeyed in primitive pioneer style (there being no railroads), riding behind oxen and leading their horses until they reached Avon Springs, N. Y. Her father did not become suited with the fertility of the soil there and removed shortly to Pavilion, about three miles south of Leroy and there built himself a substantial log house. In this they lived several years or until a large frame one, with a huge fire-place, could be constructed. HARRIET HUBBARD attended the district school and finally graduated from the Lima Female College. She married Dec 25, 1854, Edward Parsons Day, of Richmond Centre, N. Y., son of Rev. Warren Day* and Sarah Kellogg, who was the daughter of Deacon Jabez and Temperance (Walton) Kellogg, of Hanover, N. H. HARRIET HUBBARD, an invalid for many years, was a resigned, patient Christian. She was of tall and stately presence, somewhat reserved, and by many was considered as beautiful in feature as she was in manners. She died of consumption in Leroy, March 19, 1868, and was buried in Maplewood Cemetery at Pavilion. Her father—

LEWIS HUBBARD, sixth child of the nine children of Captain Josiah and Eunice (Chapin) Hubbard, was born March 15, 1803, in Sandisfield, Mass., and died in Leroy June 9, 1886. He married March 24, 1830, a descendant of the famous Adams family of Massachusetts, Evaline Adams, of Egremont, Mass. (b Jan 11, 1805, d in Leroy March 19, 1872), and was a prosperous farmer, wool-grower and horticulturist. No farm in his vicinity was better tilled or more productive, no sheep compared with his, no orchards contained finer fruit. His 100-acre tract vielded twice the revenue that his neighbors' 200 and 300 acre tracts did. He was extremely industrious, methodical and pious, and was continually performing kind deeds for his neighbors. He could be stern and inflexible though, if the occasion demanded it, to the writer's personal knowledge, whose young blood was occasionally set into active circulation by him, just to "get the dust out of his jacket and keep him from the gallows," as he tersely put it. He was an exemplary member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which he attended regularly for years, never missing a Sunday. Though horses were plentiful in the stables, he considered it his duty to walk to allow them to rest upon the Sabbath. No matter how deep the snow or how fiercely the March winds blew he could always be found on the Lord's Day dressed in a black suit with a high old-fashioned collar and a long-winding neckcloth on listening intently to the words of the good exhorter. He was also buried in Maplewood Cemetery and his death was deeply felt by his neighbors.

^{*}Rev. Warren Day graduated from Dartmouth College in 1814 in the next class after Daniel Webster's, who was his firm friend in after as well as in his college life. In consequence of receiving this college education he agreed to forfeit his rights in his father's estates, which agreement his father faithfully kept. He was the son of Orion Day (and Joanna Everett) of Wrentham, Mass., and Sharon, Vt., who entered the Revolutionary War at seventeen and was at West Foint at the time of the capture of Major Andre, the British spy. Rev. Warren Day was the sixth in descent (through Orion, Ichabod, John, John) from Ensign Ralph Day, of Dedham, Mass., who settled there previous to Jan 1, 1645, and married Oct 12, 1647, at the old Fairbanks homestead Susan Fairbanks, dan of Jonathan and Grace Fairbanks, formerly of Sowerby, Yorkshire, England. The Fairbanks Homestead is about the oldest one in New England (the Craddock garrison house at Medford, Mass., being possibly a year older), and was built in 1636 by Jonathan, one of the pioneers of Dedham. (See Illustration.)

The town is indebted to him for the munificent gift of a fine library, as well as for other benefactions. State Agricultural College and Model Farm. He was also a Trustee of the State Asylums for the Insane and for the Deaf and Dumb. He has written many scientific, literary, and historical papers, and in 1888 published a volume entitled "Memorials of a Half Century in Michigan and the Lake Regions." In 1892 he received from his alma mater the honorary degree of LL.D. The Doctor is still residing in Detroit. He married in 1846 Sarah Baughman of Detroit, daughter of Rev. John A. and Sarah (Harvey) Baughman. Children—Henry Guernsey (see following), Collins Baughman (see following), Thomas Hill (b May 30, 1855, d Jan 24, 1870), Mary (b Oct 9, 1856), Edward King (b June 12, 1855, d Aug 16, 1879), Robert (b Nov 10, 1857, d Aug 16, 1879), Alice (b Oct 25, 1862) and Sarah (b Jan 15, 1864).

HENRY GUERNSEY HUBBARD, eldest son of Bela and Sarah (Baughman) Hubbard, was born in Detroit, Mich., May 6, 1850, and graduated at Harvard University in 1873, taking first honors in Natural History. He made this science the aim of his life, his specialty being entomology. Receiving an appointment from the U. S. Department of Agriculture as entomologist to investigate the insects injurious to cotton, and subsequently the orange, he spent several years in Florida, and prepared a voluminous report on the orange insects and remedies, which the Department published in 1885. He also largely interested himself in orange growing and the experimental culture of semi-tropical plants, and has contributed many papers to the leading scientific journals. He owns a large and valuable collection of insects. In December, 1887, he married Kate Lazier, daughter of Frederick L. and Martha (Garrison) Lazier of Detroit. Children—Bela (b Aug 13, 1890) and Margeret (b June 12, 1892).

COLLINS BAUGHMAN HUBBARD, second son of Bela and Sarah (Baughman) Hubbard, was born in Detroit Feb 8, 1852, and engaged in the real estate and banking business, being now President of The Citizens' Savings Bank of Detroit. He was a member of the State Legislature in 1881, and made one of Detroit's Police Commissioners in 1892, which position he still holds. He is also largely interested in orange growing in Florida. Mr. HUBBARD possesses a handsome seal ring that bears upon it (intaglio) the Edward Hubbard, Burchanger, Essex, Eng., Coat of Arms. His great grandfather, Rev. Bela Hubbard, D. D., brought the design from England in 1764. In 1875 he married Ida M. Haigh, daughter of Henry and Martha (Murray) Haigh of Detroit, who bore him Frederick (b May 20, 1877). In 1890 he married Anna Georgiana, daughter of Anna (Elliott) Knight and Hon. George Knight, counsel for the Crown County Meath, Ireland. Children—Edward King (b in Aug, 1891) and Anna (b in May, 1893).

bard of Guilford, was b in Hollis, N. H., June 30, 1808, and d Sept. 18, 1894. in Greenwich, Conn. He was 86 years old, and left a widow, Mary Cummings (Tenney) Hubbard, and four children. He received his education in the district school, and later in Pinkerton Academy, at Derry. In 1824 he helped to build the first cotton mill in Nashua. The next year he took up his father's trade, that of a stonecutter, and was first engaged at Quincy, Mass., in shaping the stones of the Bunker Hill Monument, and later those of the Onincy Market and the Tremont House, Boston, Mr. HUBBARD came to New York to live in 1827, where his handiwork can still be seen in Wall and Pearl street buildings. He afterwards became the confidential clerk in the office of Ira Norris &

Co., granite dealers. Mr. HUBBARD was the first to distribute Bibles in New York for the Marine Bible Society. This was in 1833. He soon afterward took a desk in the office of the American Seamen's Friend Society, of which he became financial agent in 1863. He took his family to Greenwich, Conn., and they have been living there ever since. For forty years he was the Secretary of the New England Society of New York City. He was also a warden of the borough of Greenwich. He became famous for his antipathy to tobacco, and wrote a leaflet on "How a Smoker Got a Home," of which he printed and circulated over one million copies, some of them in foreign languages. He published in 1872 a partially complete genealogical pamphlet of his particular branch of the family, using as a motto the quotation: "He who regards not the memory of his ancestors deserves to be forgotten by posterity."

Mr. HUBBARD married Nov. 28, 1832, (1) Sarah Ogden Johnson, b

LUTHER PRESCOTT, JR., is connected with the famous Pillsbury flouring mill at Minneapolis. Mr. HUBBARD married Nov. 29, 1848, (2) Mary Cummings Tenney, b in Hollis, N. H., Nov. 9, 1819, dau Hon. WILLIAM PENN NIXON, youngest of the four children of Samuel and Rhoda (Hubbard) Nixon, was born in Newport (now Fountain City), Ind., March 19, 1832. He graduated from an academy, taught school two years, and in 1858 graduated in law from the University of Pennsylvania, opening thereupon a law office in Cincinnati, which prospered until 1861, when his wife (Mary Stites) died. This bereavement was a deep one and benumbed his ambition for a time. For many months he never entered his office. The engines supplying his vital power could not long remain inactive, however, and soon found play for his versatile ability in a two-term service in the Ohio Legislature.

In 1868 he embarked upon the rapid current of journalism. After piloting four years the Cincinnati Daily Evening Chronicle (consolidated eventually with the Cincinnati Times) he anchored in 1872 in the port of Chicago, a place never less lively than a South Sea simoon or a menagerie at supper-time. Mr. NIXON grasped in exultation the situation as he repeated over to himself the words,

This is the place I long have sought, And mourned because I found it not.

The Inter-Ocean had a door wide open for him. He entered and assumed management. As one tingles when an electric battery current pervades him, so did the Inter-Ocean begin to vibrate and scintillate at his touch. It became a great paper. It is a great power. Mr. NIXON is a stiff-backed Republican, and is the Editor-in-Chief of this great plant. He owns the controlling interest that shapes the paper's daily policy. (His brother, Dr. Oliver W. Nixon, who married Louise Elston, owns also a part interest in it, and ably assists in its management). Being one-eighth Indian, Mr. NIXON has a double right to be called Chief NIXON. He is descended from a Cherokee Chief.

About 1740 Joseph Hubbard, a Quaker preacher, married Anne Crews, who had a sister Susanna. Both were the daughters of a Cherokee Chief who married in North Carolina a white woman. The Cherokees of North Carolina at that time were wealthy, powerful, friendly to the government, and highly civilized. Anne and Susanna were finely educated in the Virginia schools, where Anne met Joseph Hubbard. They had eight children—Hardy, Joseph, Jeremiah, Woodson, Jacob, Anne, Susanna and Rhoda. (See Virginia Hubbards). The sons were known as the "Five Big Cherokee Boys," whose physical prowess made them well known locally and inspired much wholesome respect. Rhoda married a well-known planter, Samuel Nixon, who lived on the banks of the James River seventeen miles from Petersburg, Va. Joseph Hubbard was born in Mecklenburgh County, Va., and lived to be over ninety years. He freed all his slaves when it became to the Quakers odious in principle to continue holding them. Anne (Crews) Hubbard died in 1812. The father of this Joseph Hubbard might have borne the name Joseph also, according to tradition that relates that a Joseph Hubbard came over in 1681 with William Penn, though the earlier Joseph could not have been the one who married Anne Crews.

Mr. NIXON married for his second wife Elizabeth Duffield and has children Mary Stites, Bertha Duffield and William Penn Nixon, Jr. They reside in Chicago, Ill.

The compiler has picked up motley scraps of Hubbard data from early colonial records so disassociated from genealogical landmarks that he can not properly classify them. It has been thought best to preserve this data, even in a heterogeneous form, rather than have it lost, perhaps, forever. Superficially, a great deal of this seems valueless, yet many descendants now investigating their pedigrees may be able to use these clues to advantage.

A considerable portion of what follows has arrived too late for careful investigation or proper classification. The compiler's urgent requests have met with varied results. Some have ignored them entirely; others have forwarded much that was found to be deficient in names, dates, places, or other valuable clues necessary for identification and appropriate arrangement among the different branches; many more have waited until the book was nearly printed before forwarding material; still more have trusted to the possible chance of others attending to the matter, and will be, consequently, disappointed to find desired data missing. Thousands of Hubbards are scattered throughout thousands of towns, villages and cities. One person can not obtain such data except by voluntary contributions. The co-operation of many is necessary. This labor is usually irksome, and but few are willing to trouble themselves about it. These things account for the appearance of this disjointed data and the incomplete statistics to be found in some parts of the context.

"Bobbie" Burns had a poor opinion of his ancestors; he says: "I have not the most distant pretentions to what the fye-coated guardians of escutcheons call 'a gentleman.' My ancient but ignoble blood has crept thro' scoundrels ever since the flood!"

Rachell Hubbard, widow of John Hubbard, mariner, Mary Newton, widow, Rachell (?) Hassok, widow, Margaret Williams, widow, Elizabeth Raven, and John Hubbard, all of Boston, are mentioned in a deed of some property to Benjamin Barnard, cooper.

John Hubbard was a private in Captain David Henchman's company (composed of 121 men) in the King Philip War. As this company operated principally in eastern Massachusetts, this John may have been either the son of Anthony of Dedham or the Rev. William of Ipswich.

Francis Hubbard's certificate of administration dated Boston, Feb 7, 1769, mentions Rachel Hubbard, widow of James Tucker, wheelwright, both of Boston. In the settlement papers are mentioned his second daughter Mary Burton, and four other children. Mary Burton gets a house and land near Fort Hill.

The Paymaster-General of Chancery in England, according to the London Times of July 4, 1864, had in hand at that time £77,693,769, awaiting claimants, many of whom have been kept out of the enjoyment of their inheritances because of inability to prove their line of descent. This does not include amounts in the Bank of England awaiting claimants, which is also enormous. In American money the sum amounts to over $380,000,000, and is in itself not an insignificant argument in favor of keeping careful and accurate genealogical records. In Dougal & Company's English Register of heirs wanted for estates and legacies are mentioned 16 Hubbards, Hubbords, or Huberts.

In the New England Genealogical and Historical Register, Vol. 22, page 28, appears a very able article upon English local nomenclature. It treats of the derivation of names from their ethnological source, showing the particular prefixes and suffixes of different nations by which their origin is made known. "Hubbard" is of Danish origin.

Almost all passengers who embarked from England for St. Christophers, or the Bermudas or Sommer Islands (named after Sir George Sommers about 1609) eventually arrived in New England. A small percentage, however, remained there. Vessels then did not take a direct course across the Atlantic, but sailed southwesterly, touching at West Indies, and then sailed northerly along the North American coast.

Since the summer of 1858 the descendants of the Ipswich Hubbards descended through Dr. John Hubbard of Meriden, Ct., have met in annual reunion. These meetings have usually been held at Meriden or West Haven, Ct., and have been productive of the heartiest good fellowship and family feeling. Branches of other Hubbard families would do well to emulate these worthy efforts to keep alive fraternal ties.

When Rev. Bela Hubbard, D. D., of New Haven, Ct., was ordained in London in 1764 the Bishop requested his name. He complied. Not understanding his first name he asked him to spell it. The bright young applicant for holy orders then slowly spelled it—"B-E-L-A." "A very strange name," remarked the Bishop; "I never heard it before!" "Quite likely," replied the youthful cleric; "it is a scriptural name."

Henry Ainsworth Parker, in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Volume 41, page 95, gives in an article many reasons why our ancestors frequently made their mark instead of signing their names. He freely quotes from Rev. S. R. Maitland in his "Dark Ages," who says that there were several reasons for this condition of things: (1) Ignorance of letters; (2) physical inability (blindness, paralysis, etc.); (3) an affectation of dignity, which caused many to require their notaries to sign their names for them. Dr. Maitland mentions the names of many kings who indulged themselves in this whim. So it need not necessarily follow that the sign of the cross for a signature indicated inability to write. The compiler found evidence of this while perusing old records in a case where sometimes the name was signed and sometimes the cross used.

The will of Michael Hubbard, of Baltimore, Md., was probated in Boston, Mass., April 13, 1759. He appointed his son Peter sole executor, and admonished him to let his Uncle Thomas of London, Eng., have sums of money from time to time for his necessities. He also bequeathed to his two daughters in London, catherine and (?) Antis £100 each per annum "provided they retire from the city of London—where I suppose they now live—and afterward live in any country town distant from London."

In a list of "Anglais Captives" (mostly children) taken in the wars between New France and New England in the 18th century, there appears the name of one Joseph Philip Ouabird (Hubbard) who at the age of 17 was baptized December 12, 1706, in the Roman Catholic Church at Cape St. Ignatius. This partly accounts for the existence of some Hubbards in Canada, with the additional fact that some Tory Hubbards fled there (to New Brunswick, principally), and settled during the Revolutionary War.

An extract taken from the Proceedings of the Royal Society, London, from Chambers Encyclopedia, reads as follows: "Another matter to which the Society turned their attention was the formation of a museum, the nucleus being 'A Collection of Rarities formerly belonging to Mr. Hubbard,' which, by a resolution of Council, passed February 21, 1666, was purchased for the sum of £100. This Museum—at one time the most famous in London—was presented to the Trustees of the British Museum in 1731, upon the removal of the Society to Somerset House."

In the Middletown (Ct.) Riverside Cemetery is the following inscription on the headstone of Mary, wife of Mr. Nathaniel Hubbard, who "died May 20, 1738, in the 86th year of his age." She died April 6, 1732, aged 60:

Here's a cedar tall gently wafted o'er From Great Brittains Isle to this Western Shore, Near fifty years crossing the Ocean wide, Yet's anchored in the grave from storm and tide. Yet remember the body only here. This blessed soul fixed in a higher sphere.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL.

The British took possession of the hill about 5 o'clock, so that the heat of the battle must have lasted about two hours. * * * Daniel Hubbard wore a cue, braided in two strands down his back. As he passed by, Mr. Craige saw him dodge his head, and it was afterwards found that a musket ball had cut one of these strands so close to his head as to graze the skin. * * * 51 years after the battle (1826) six of this company were alive; among them Daniel Hubbard. He was selectman from 1806 to 1810.—History of Leicester, Mass.

The English Parliament enacted in September, 1752, that eleven days should be dropped from that month and thereafter the year should begin with January 1 instead of March 25 (Annunciation Day), as theretofore. This was the abandonment of the old style of chronology or Julian Calendar inaugurated by Julius Cæsar 45 years B. C., and the adoption of the Gregorian Calendar, instituted by Pope Gregory XIII. in 1582 to absorb the surplusage of 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 49 seconds over the year of 365 days, which wise scientific innovation Great Britain refused to adopt then because of its Catholic origin. January was then called the eleventh month instead of the first, and March the first month instead of the third. This explains why in this volume there is an additional figure to the year (separated by a hyphen) in many cases.

A certain George Hubbard, aged 16, left London, England, September 3, 1635, for "Bormodes," aboard the Dorsset, John Flower, master. He may have continued to New England, or he may have been the one who with a John Hubbard, were in the list of "The names of ye Govern' & Councill of ye Assembly of ye Sommer Islands." The following is an extract from the official records of the "Somer Islands Company:" "An accompt of the Generall Lands belonging to the Somer Islands Compa, taken out Mr. Richard Norwood's Survey booke: by him made in the yeares 1662, 1663: The Lands in S. AN OLD HUBBARD CHEST.

This antique relic of olden times was made across the broad Atlantic, and confronts us to-day in a very sound state of preservation. It is of oak, about four feet high and two feet deep, with a crude scrollwork embellishing the outside front, or panels. It was constructed with rather clumsy implements, the back of it appearing to have been roughly hewn out with an axe. The wood, except the panels, is very thickabout 2 inches-and is held together with wooden pegs, the forerunners of the iron nail. This chest was doubtless kept to store linen in, and has never been out of the familv's possession since it was brought over from England by George Hubbard, in 1633, to Guilford, Ct. MARY LINSLEY HUBBARD now living on the old George Hubbard building-site in Guilford, is the fortunate possessor of this valuable heirloom. She inherited it from her aunts Anne and Betsy Hubbard, and will take good care that it falls into appreciative hands at her demise. It was earnestly sought after to exhibit at the World's Fair; but knowing that money could not replace it if it was destroyed by fire or railway wreck she wisely retained it. What a chapter of rich historic incidents might it not relate had it only the power of language, and how many vexed genealogical tangles could it not unweave, is left to the reader to conjecture. It has excited considerable interest among antiquarians. It formerly opened at the top, but Miss HUBBARD had it altered so that the two front panels were converted into doors which swing open like those of a cupboard. A shelf was also inserted. These alterations made it far more convenient for use.

A PLEASANT SEAT OF LEARNING.

Hobart College, situated at the foot of Seneca Lake, in the pretty town of Geneva, N. Y., was founded through the active instrumentality of the Right Rev. John Henry Hobart, D.D., Bishop of New York, who descended from Edmund Hobart of Hingham, Mass., who emigrated from Norfolk, England, in 1633. The Annual Catalogue of Hobart College reads: "In 1818 Bishop Hobart recognizing the importance, if not necessity, of having in the western portion of his great diocese a school of liberal culture, as well as a theological school, communicated to friends in Geneva his plan to transfer the Theological School from Fairfield to Geneva. In 1821 the transfer was made. In 1826 the first class was graduated. Of the earlier additions to the permanent resources of the college, a noteworthy one was the benefaction, in 1851, of Trinity Church, N. Y., amounting to $3,000 annually. One of the results of this benefaction was the change in the following year of the corporate title of the College to Hobart Free College, which was further modified in 1860 to Hobart College." Bishop Hobart founded in 1825 the Charles Startin Professorship. The Hobart Professorship was founded in 1852 by gifts from friends of the College. Though Hobart College is not large in point of numbers, it ranks with the highest of its class for superior theological training.

CAPABILITIES OF A HUBBARD HORSE.

New Brunswick, N. J., Jan. 11, 1895.—Ben, a faithful old horse who has done various kinds of duty for Liveryman John V. Hubbard of this city, saved his owner considerable loss at 2 o'clock this morning when a fire broke out in Mr. Hubbard's private office. Ben occupied an open stall about fifty feet from Mr. Hubbard's office. The horse is always quiet, but he must have scented danger, for he broke away from his halter, backed out of the stall and ran 150 feet through the corridor of the stable to the rear office, where slept George Witt, the night man. The door of this office was closed. The first thing Witt knew the horse was standing over him and he was lying on the floor. Witt had all his clothes on, and Ben had taken a firm hold at his waist and lifted him off his couch. He might have carried him out of the door, but the office was too small to move around. Witt was dumbfounded until he smelled smoke. Then he led the horse out of the rear office and Ben trotted along with him to Mr. Hubbard's office, where there was a lively blaze. Neighbors were warned and the fire was soon checked. A rug had taken fire from the stove. Mr. Hubbard says he would not part with Ben at any price. He considers that the intelligent horse saved him his thirty horses and carriages, valued at $15,000 -New York Sun.

TWENTY FIVE HUBBARDS.

VERSIONS OF THE ORIGIN OF THE NAME HUBBARD AS FURNISHED BY CORRESPONDENTS.

In the Welsh language Hub means "non" or "without," and therefore Hubbard is non-poetical, or without poetry—in other words, practical.

It came from "Hopyard." An Indian woman in remote times gave birth to a child in this field of viniculture and called him "Hopyard," from which the name "Hubbard" was derived. [This is a most absurd account].

A History of Christian Names says, according to a correspondent, that William Arthur, M.A., records the belief that Hobart, Hibbard, Hubert and Hubbard are synonyms, and mean "bright form, fair hope." In Saxon, hiewe—color, form, beauty; sometimes beart, bright. [This account, strictly speaking, scarcely defines its origin.]

Hugibert, or bright mind, belonged to the Bishop of Liege, to whom attached the Teutonic story of the hunter's conversion by the cross,—bearing stag, making him the patron of hunters and his name very popular in France, Flanders, Northern Italy and probably once in England. Since it has left us the two names became "Hubbard" and "Hobart." It used to be wrongly translated "bright of hue."

Some think the word "Bard" was the root and the prefix "Hub" an after thought. There are people living named Obard and Obbard who have claimed kinship to Hubbards on the strength of the word "Bard." "Bard" is of Celtic origin and one tradition says it originated among the Druids in Wales. It was often spelled Barde, Bardd, Barz and Bardigan. Bards were originally composers of poetry who sang their compositions about heroes and princes in accompaniment to stringed musical instruments. [There may be a grain of truth in this version, in so far as it relates to the word "bard"].

A New York gentleman, a linguist, gives the origin of the name Hubbard among the Indians as meaning "a man in a canoe," which may account somewhat for the following interesting tradition among the Delawares, who were part of the Cherokee nation. They believe that every one has a guardian spirit, which comes in the form of some bird or animal in dreams, and tells them what to do and what will happen. The guardian spirit is sent from the Great Spirit. Ten years before white men came to America a young man told his dream in the temple when the Delawares lived on the Atlantic coast. He saw coming across the great waters a large canoe with pinions (wings) and containing strange people. He told this dream and predicted the arrival of the white men each year until they came and were seen by his people. Consequently, any white man seen approaching in a canoe was a "Hubbard."

THE PEACE ASSOCIATION OF FRIENDS IN AMERICA.

This society, which has for its motto: "Put up your sword—Love your enemies," is presided over by WILLIAM GILMER HUBBARD of

WILLIAM GILMER HUBBARD.

Columbus, Ohio. It was organized in 1868 and incorporated in 1894. Daniel Hill is its General Secretary; Samuel C. Mills, Recording Secretary; and John Kendall, Treasurer. Including the foregoing, are the following Directors: Allen Jay, A. H. Hussey, Dr. J. E. Rhoades, Hannah J. Bailey, Richard H. Thomas, Joseph Arnold, John F. Harrison and Naomi W. Harrison.

As is well known, the members of this society are opposed to war with its bloodshed and desolation, and manage to live at peace among themselves and with their neighbors without invoking its aid to enforce their rights. Their persecution in Old and New England in early days is well known to the student of history. Where they were once treated with ignominy and reproach they are now revered and held up as bright examples of morality and inflexible honor. A number of them came from the South, principally Virginia and North Carolina, from where they were driven by the slaveholders, though previous to 1688 they owned slaves throughout the Atlantic States. Then an agitation began which lasted for forty years. After 1728 no man was allowed to remain a member of the Friends' Church who would not "testify against it." John Hubbard, the father of Mr. HUBBARD, the President of this society, was one of those who were compelled to leave North Carolina about 1844 because of his anti-slavery views. (See page 81.)

THE SALEM WITCHCRAFT.

ELIZABETH HUBBARD, born about 1647, lived with her aunt, Mrs. Dr. Griggs, at Salem Village, Mass. About 1690 she, with other young ladies, whose ages ranged from ten to twenty years, used to visit their pastor's residence (Rev. Mr. Parris's) to practice in a social way fortune-telling, necromancy, palmistry and magic. Among these young ladies was the minister's daughter. Soon they became quite expert, and their performance elicited much wonderment, and to many were construed as emanating from an evil source. In the history of Salem Witchcraft by Charles W, Upham it is claimed that this was the beginning of the famous tidal wave of persecution which has so badly stained the fair character of New England's body politic. In the deposition of Ezekiel Cheevers, taken before the magistrates of Salem Village in March, 1691–2, at the trial of Sarah Good, Sarah Osburn and Tituba, the Indian woman, for witchcraft, the following remarks appear of record:

Mr. Ezekiel Cheevers affirmed to ye jury that he saw Martha, wife to Giles Cory, examined before ye magistrates. At which time he observed the ye, s'd Cory, sometimes did bite her lip: and when she bit her lip, mercy Lewis and Elizabeth Hubbard and others of ye afflicted persons were bitten; also when s'd Cory pinched her fingers together, then mercy lewise, Elizabeth Hubbard, and others were pinched and according to ye motions of s'd Martha Coryes body, so were ye afflicted persons afflicted. This he affirmed to be true, according to ye best of his observations. Mr. Edward Putnam affirmed ye same to ye jury of inquest that Mr. Cheevers doth; Mr. Thomas Putnam affirmed ye same, all upon oaths, all of them.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS WRITTEN TO HARLAN PAGE HUBBARD BY EDWIN AND DOUGLAS HUBBARD.

Chicago, March 1, 1878.—I have been collecting memoranda for more than forty years and have hoped some time to publish a book—the hard times make it doubtful as to when. * * *

Chicago, October 21, 1882.—I have always cherished the hope that I might some time secure a patron who had the means and disposition to employ me to arrange for the publication of my Memoranda of the Hubbard Family, now in my possession and in my reach. In the past forty years I think I have obtained memoranda of some 200 individual Hubbard families, more or less complete. I have never dared to attempt to arrange them. I will submit the following proposition. * * *

Edwin Hubbard

New York, June 30, 1883.—Your favor handed me by Mr. Richard Hubbard I very gratefully acknowledge, for it has been of material benefit to me. * * * I am now at the "Home" on Hudson Street, and shall continue to make "collections of the Hubbards" corresponding with all I hear of, and endeavor to "connect" them with their original ancestor, writing out sketches for such as are willing to recompense me. * * * I intend crentually to put all this matter in such shape and situation that it will not be lost. * * *

A TRIBUTE TO GENIUS.

FRANCIS SALTUS SALTUS, son of Francis H. and Julia (Hubbard) Saltus, was born in Waverly Place, New York City, Nov. 23, 1849, and died in June, 1889. He was a born poet, a phenomenal linguist, and a master of harmony and music. The poems published since his death are The Witch of Endor, Dreams After Sunset, Flasks and Flagons, and Shadows and Ideals. Many of his dramas, memoirs, poems, comic operas and musical gems yet remain unpublished. He was an extensive traveler about the world, and passed many years in the realm of arts in Southern Europe, acquiring while there a mastery of twenty-three languages, besides dialects. This gifted person's physical temple appeared to the eye to be a most fitting repository for the cultivation of belles-lettres and the finest arts. He was the perfect beau ideal of artistic beauty and grace, so much so that Cabanel, the famous artist, once followed him, being much struck with his appearance, and begged the privilege of painting him. Afterwards in referring to him he said: "His is the most perfect ideal Greek head and face I have ever seen, and if he will allow me to paint a portrait of him for myself I will duplicate it for him." At the age of ten he was a skilled pianist. His musical talent he inherited from his mother, Julia Hubbard. Godey's Magazine for June, 1803, says of her-"so wonderful were her musical accomplishments, so celestial her voice, that entranced crowds used to gather in Washington Square on summer evenings to catch through the open windows of her father's residence the heavenly strains of her singing. Her father, Mr. Hubbard, was music mad, and gathered about him all the noted singers of the day. Although of independent wealth and exalted social position he was frequently approached by operatic managers with offers of engagements for his daughter. Marti, Manager of the Tacon Opera House, Havana, in 1848, offered him in his zeal $1,000 per night for fifty performances. These overtures were graciously but firmly declined."

FRANCIS SALTUS SALTUS had a severe attack of typhoid fever while in Paris in 1874, which undermined his health and gradually brought his brilliant and phenomenal career to a close. The following poem to Marie ———, a lovely French girl, was the immortalization of the holiness of his passion for her. Her death was untimely, and but a few months before their appointed marriage day. Other poems were consecrated to her, notably "My Faith" and "A Farewell." The latter he wrote just before leaving her for a second trip around the world. It was the voice of "Love's sweet misery." He was buried in historic Sleepy Hollow at Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, a fitting place for the clay of genius to forever repose.

PAX ET PURITAS.

When'er my sad gaze lingers in thine eyes, That glow with all the idyllic warmth of Greece, I find from care a lovable release— My heart throbs warmer in a charmed surprise.

Floods of fancy awake, and I surmise, While subtle pleasures, vaguely known, increase, That the calm spirit of delicious Peace, Candid and beautiful, within them lies.

Then as I look again, with whims and dreams, Another shape appears in stainless white, Smiling upon me radiant and fair; And to my rapt and ravished mind, it seems As if sweet Purlty, in robes of light, Had come to take eternal refuge there.

IMPORTED HUBBARDS.

FREDERICK CHARLES HUBBARD, his mother, and sister Laura, now Mrs. William J. Patton, Albany, N. Y., came from Newmarket, Suffolk, England, and settled in the United States. He was a soldier in the late civil war, and left a daughter, Eurilla E. Hubbard, now of Paterson, N. J.

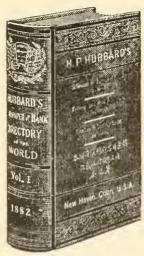

JOHN HUBBARD, born in London, England, came to America and settled in Prince George County, Va. He married about 1820 and had William, Ann Elizabeth (m — Whitney, of Richmond, Va.) and John T. Hubbard, of Petersburg, Va., whose children are Mary M., Nannie O., John B., Charles L., Ann E., William T., Nelia F., Christopher B., and Vernon R.

Members of the great "Hubbard" Family are scattered over the world. Some of them are located in India. ISAAC HUBBARD, son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Gardiner) Hubbard of Great Bentley, Essex, Eng., was in the Bengal Foot Artillery at Fort William Huttyghur, East India, November 12, 1818. He had children Matilda and William HENRY HUBBARD—also brothers WILLIAM and THOMAS. WILLIAM was an extensive florist in Colchester, Essex, Eng., while THOMAS joined the British Navy and subsequently the Revenue Marine Service. In the North Sea, aboard the cutter "Ranger," he was wounded in a fight with smugglers, which caused his retirement from British service. though as an owner of vessels trading between Great Yarmouth and Baltic and Mediterranean ports he continued a seafaring life. While commanding one of his ships he was drowned in a gale in Yarmouth Roads with one of his sons. He married Elizabeth Warren and had THOMAS, JAMES, ANN, MARGARET, and ISAAC GARDINER HUBBARD. The latter was born August 18, 1818, at Great Yarmouth, Eng., married Rebecca Penny (the only daughter of Captain Joseph Penny of the British Navy), and came to the United States in 1845 with his wife and infant son to reside. This son, Isaac Penny Hubbard, the only child, was born December 3, 1844, in Great Yarmouth, and educated in New York City schools. He served in the late civil war in Co. "K," 37th New . York Volunteers, and is a member of James C. Rice Post No. 20, G. A. R., and a practicing lawyer in New York City, having been admitted to the bar there in 1867. He has the care of several large estates, and has won cases in several will contests. He married Harriet Armstrong. daughter of William and Maria (Benney) Armstrong of New York. Children - Franklin Armstrong (b Aug 10, 1884), Edith Rebecca (b June 11, 1887), William Pesoa (b July 27, 1890) and Gardiner Benney Hubbard (b May 22, 1892).

A WORLD FAMOUS BOOK.

In 1880, Mr. H. P. Hubbard, the publisher of this book, then at the head of the International Newspaper Agency at New Haven, Connecticut, conceived the idea of publishing a Newspaper and Bank Directory of the World, which should be complete in every respect.

He secured the aid and endorsement of Hon. William M. Evarts, Secretary of State, who, in a special letter, requested each American consul to give all the aid in his power to Mr. Hubbard in "this work of international importance."

With this endorsement he was fortified at every point, and in seventeen months from the time pen was first put to paper, the first two volumes were issued complete, and at once rivetted the attention of newspapers and business men generally.

It was the first work of the kind ever published, and up to this date no one has essayed to follow him. The year following Volume 3 was issued, being partly printed on "Cosmopolitan Paper," made from old newspapers from every country in the world. These books weighed over four pounds each, aggregating over 3,900 pages, and cost to produce 5,000 copies of each volume over $60,000. They contained over 700 illustrations and 160 languages. The books are now very scarce, being out of print.

They contained, in addition to the names and descriptions of over 40,000 newspapers and 20,000 banks, a gazetteer and maps of all countries.

Of this unique compendium, the New York Tribune said in a two-column review, "This marvelous work is worthy to stand beside the dictionary and the encyclopædia." The preface, as well as all important descriptive matter, was in English, French, German and Spanish, in addition to the vernacular of each country.

To give an idea of how far this was carried, the title of the book is herewith given in English, Greek, French, German, Chinese, Spanish, Italian and Arabic.

What the secretary of the New York Geographical Society was pleased to call "the most important contribution to geographical literature for twenty years," also appeared in the gazetteer department of the work, in the shape of the name of each country in all obtainable languages.

One specimen will give an idea of how much difference there is:

EGYPT.

Egyptian—Musr. French—Egypte. German—Aegypten. Russian— Egiptia. Italian—Egitto. Spanish—Egipto. Portuguese—Egitto. Swedish—Egypten. Turkish—Kibt; or, Keebt. Arabic— Missr; or, Musr. Coptic—Cham; or, Kehn. Hebrew— Mizr; or, Mizraim. Chinese—An² Chi². 埃及

It was dedicated jointly to President Arthur and Queen Victoria as "Representative heads of the great English-speaking Nations of the earth, whose one hundred millions of people, having the same origin, the same language and the same standards of civilization, occupy the front rank among the instrumentalities for the enlightenment of mankind."

The regular business edition was bound in scarlet cloth and gold, with red edges. Its outside brilliancy caused the late Oliver Wendell Holmes to write Mr. Hubbard in the following happy vein:

"When I first looked upon it, red all over, so that it seemed to Blush like a banner bathed in slaughter,"

I thought it must be an account of all the bloodiest battles ever fought, and I was much pleased to find, on looking through its pages, that it might rather be called a General Index of Peaceful Civilization."

Copies of volumes 1 and 2 were sent to all American consuls, and several have informed the writer that they are the most useful and most called for books in the consular library.*

^{*}Mr. Felix Mathews, the American Consul at Tangiers, Morocco, in making his report that there were "no newspapers or banks in Morocco," thought Mr. Hubbard too liberal to reward him for so slight (though to Mr. H. necessary) service; and as a special compliment obtained from the Sultan and sent to Mr. Hubbard several gold coins which were struck by the Moors at Granada when they occupied Spain in about 1200, together with a piece of the curtain of the Alhambra, which the Moors despoiled. It is silk embroidery on just such canvas as the ladies use to-day, and the colors of the silk are remarkably clear and bright.

An edition de luxe was prepared on very heavy paper and bound in embossed Russia leather, and sent, through the State Department at Washington and American Ministers Resident, to all the crowned heads and rulers of the world, from all of whom Mr. Hubbard received acknowledgments in their languages. A large portfolio containing these memorabilia, together with letters from John Bright, Mr. Gladstone, Tennyson, Victor Hugo, Longfellow, Whittier, Emerson and scores of others prominent in literary, military, political and social life, is among his choicest treasures.

Six enormous scrap-books filled with newspaper reviews of this book in over a dozen languages attest the opinion of the press of the world. In these reviews the adjectives "marvelous," "stupendous," "unparalleled," "unique," "grand," and others, were used liberally.

The Edinburgh, Scotland, Guardian, when the book was first announced, said that the feat was "too great even for an American to accomplish." When it was finished, the Guardian took the space of nearly four columns to own up that it was well done!

BRAVE HUBBARDS.

In the war of 1812 several hundred citizens of Marblehead were captured by the enemy and confined in Dartmoor Prison. Among them was Mr. John Hubbard, son of the pastor of the First Congregational Church of Marblehead. In 1815 they were released and put on board cartel ships for home. The Captain of John's ship was inimical to Americans and a timid sailor, being afraid to set all sail. The Marblehead prisoners, expert navigators, were disgusted with his slow progress and unskilful sailing, and impatient to reach welcome homes and embrace glad hearts, so they elected John Hubbard commander of the ship, who politely informed the Captain and his crew that they would be relieved for a short period. The Captain seeing a determined look of business upon his face yielded, and de facto Captain John Hubbard crowded on all the ship's canvas and speedily reached Marblehead.

William B. Hubbard, Marblehead, manned one of the guns on the Cumberland when she was run into by the rebel ram Merrimac and sunk. "When the ship was sinking, and death stared them in the face, the first thought of many was, naturally, that of self-preservation. Not so with Hubbard. His powder-boy had become frightened and could not be found. 'I am determined to have one more shot at them,' cried the gallant Hubbard, and immediately went below to procure ammunition. On his return, as he approached his gun to reload it, a shot from the enemy laid him on the deck. He went down with the ship, nobly dying at his post."—Samuel Read's Hist. Marblehead, Mass.

ANCIENT WATERTOWN OR "NORUMBEGA."

Along the shores of the Charles River in Massachusetts are unmistakable traces of the visits of Norsemen in the 10th and 11th centuries, the principal adventurers being Biarni Heriulfsson, Leif Ericsson, his brother Thorvald, and Thorfinn Karlsefin. Prof. Eben Norton Horsford, deceased, performed an inestimable service to the intelligent world by years of arduous labor spent in pursuing the delights of archaeology about this section of Massachusetts. He found their landmarks principally at Cambridge, Elmwood or Gerry's Landing, Watertown, and above that point. The sagas of Iceland corroborate the Professor's conclusions. Sites of log houses, forts, dams, docks, fish-pits and an amphitheatre testify to the truth of these discoveries.

At Watertown, where George Hubbard the American emigrant probably landed, himself descended from that hardy, exploring race, is the amphitheatre. (The place was then called Norumbega, Norvega or Norbega, meaning "from Norway.") The terraces, six of them, are plainly marked, and a pool of water occupies the center. At the dams at Watertown was a pretty fall of water, the dams being constructed of smooth boulders from the adjacent fields. Mrs. Elizabeth G. Shepard says that "the docks are plainly discernible—walled channels between the islands—these islands once being wharves where the masur wood was loaded, the dried salmon, and the furs and skins. * * * Leaving Fort Norumbega with its paved ditches and evidences of extensive fisheries you can go down the Charles (the Norumbega River of other days) until you approach the site of the olden city on its banks. The terraces which rise above the walls are well worthy of inspection and are extremely interesting. They are sharply defined, and here and there very old trees grow out from their edges, having sprung from seeds that lodged there. The distance from the walls to the first terrace is quite enough to have given space for games, wrestling, or other pastimes; and as the Norsemen were exceedingly fond of swimming, performing wonderful feats of strength and endurance under water, these terraces might have afforded opportunity for an extended view up and down the river during such performances."

"Thevet saw Norumbega in 1556 and described it as situated on the banks of 'one of the most beautiful rivers in all the world." Wytfliet saw it in 1597, Douay in 1607, and Lescarbot in 1610. All quote the statement that 'to the north of Virginia is Norumbega, which is well known as a beautiful city and a great river."

In 1659 David Ingram, an English sailor, found Norumbega. Sir Humphrey Glibert, Capt. John Smith, and Champlain searched for it, but were unable to re-discover it.

HENRY EUGENE HUBBARD,

WILLIAM ARTHUR HUBBARD AND KATHERINE EGGLESTON HUBBARD, of Dansville, N. Y.

Descended from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.)

A GOOD OLD FOREFATHER.

EBENEZER HUBBARD (b in Concord, Mass., abt 1778, d there in Oct. 1870) was an eccentric bachelor farmer who pooh-poohed at women and battled at adverse odds against the small boys of the town. Notwithstanding his eccentric nature he possessed a sturdy patriotism. It was of tough fibre, and stood out prominently when seeking to accomplish a purpose. He lived in retirement in the house on Hubbard Street which he inherited from his forefathers, and in which stopped John Hancock and Samuel Adams while attending the first provincial congress in 1774. He was found dead one morning by the neighbors sitting in his chair. Through his persistent agitation and philanthropy America now rejoices in the possession of a handsome monument to her sons' martial pluck. It is situated on the left bank of the Concord River (looking toward the mouth), directly opposite to a tall granite shaft erected by Concord inhabitants in 1836 upon the right bank of the river, or where the British stood. The pedestal is of granite and the statue is seven feet high.

Ralph Waldo Emerson's address, April 19, 1875, at the ceremonies of the dedication of the monument is as follows: "Fellow-Citizens! EBENEZER HUBBARD, a farmer who inherited land in this village on which the British troops committed depredations, and who had a deep interest in the history of the said town, erected many years ago a flag-staff on his ground, and never neglected to hoist the stars and stripes on the nineteenth of April and the fourth of July. It grieved him deeply that yonder monument, erected by the town in 1836, should have been built on the ground on which the enemy stood in the Concord fight, instead of on that which the Americans occupied; and he bequeathed in his will $1,000 to the town of Concord, on condition that a monument should be erected on the identical ground occupied by our minute men and militia on that day; and an additional sum of $600 on the condition that the town should build a foot-bridge across the river on the site where the old bridge stood in 1775. The late Mr. Stedman Buttrick [grandson of Major John Buttrick who commanded the American ploughboy fighters at the battle having given the necessary piece of land on the other side of the river, the town accepted the legacy of Mr. HUBBARD, built the bridge, and employed Daniel C. French to prepare a statue to be erected on the specified spot. Meanwhile the United States Congress gave to this town ten bronze cannon to furnish the artist with fit material to complete his work," etc.

The handsome statue was erected, and added materially to the reputation of the sculptor, Daniel C. French, an inhabitant of Concord. On it is a verse of Ralph Waldo Emerson's, who is now sleeping the long slumber (near the grave of Nathaniel Hawthorne) on a hill in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery in Concord. The words are familiar to all patriots:

> By the rude bridge that arched the flood, Their flag to April's breeze unfurled; Here once the embattled farmers stood, And fired the shot heard round the world.

The "rude bridge," which was quite rustic, was torn down when THOMAS was about ten years of age. It was replaced by its counterpart, which gave way to another a short time ago. So intense was his interest to have his heart's desire fulfilled that at the State muster in Massachusetts in 1869 he invaded General Butler's headquarters and endeavored to enlist his support in its projection. Thus may the tourist not only see the fatal spot where British oppression was strangled and a new-born liberty cradled, but he may also see the standing testimonial of a HUBBARI) who commemorated the imperishable event by an enduring manifestation of his Americanism.

COPY OF A LOVE LETTER WRITTEN BY DANIEL HUB-BARD TO HIS FIANCEÉ MISS MARTHA COIT.

Dear Creature:

My tenderest wishes are that the fair Soverign of my Hopes and Fears be now as happy as the season looks gay and joyful: it is a most beautiful and charming hour! every favorable circumstance of Nature conspires to crown it with Honour and Delight. The happiest Period the various year can boast now hovers towards us in all the radient airs of genial Light, attendant on the approaching Sun. The youthful morning unveils her rosic blushes: and the faithful Day is so far risen that I have already visited a neighbouring Verdant Field where I have given it in charge to all the choicest Herbs and Flowers, by the ministry of Ten Thousand sun-beams which alite to paint their colours, or drink their juices, to offer up a sacrifice of pure Incense to the gracious Power who indulges us mortals so much Pleasure in his excellent Works. The Heavens are all serene; The clear air perfumed with the sweet odors of opening Flowers and spreading Blossoms of faithful Trees.

The face of the earth smiles; everything seems pleased and all the creatures in good Humour; in a word, my Dear, my charming all, this once the whole creation looks like you. All these Beauties I severally admire in proportion of the Resemblance they bare to you; and none of the Pleasures errising from the contemplation of them shall I ever want while I may call you mine. This prerogative is the highest distinction my ambition aspires after. When what I now write comes to your hand, walk into your garden and imitate the pleasure I have now been enjoying.

There view with curious eye the fair and elegant structure of your Tulips and Twenty more little Darling vegetables, for which I have no names, and the beautiful light of colours which hover over them; and assure yourself that there is less harmony in the nice arrangement of their lights and shades than there is in a sett of generous Passions, regulated by the Love of an ingenious and virtuous woman. Think withal what Improvements in Happiness we may hereafter help one another to make when with the sweets of nature and the nameless joys of Love we shall possess the superior Blessing of a Daily Intercourse with the great Original of Bliss, who amidst the Temporary Delight his goodness shall indulge us, will prepare us for a state of immortal youth and Pleasure in the fairest garden of his own planting in the Paradise above. that happy Place my fair, my dearest Soul, we'll travel Hand in Hand. The virtuous joys of all our tenderest Hours shall shoot up into Divine Transports at the expectations of an eternal Possession of all the Good an infinite Benevolence has to give. The Duty of my station calls me off: I must forbare writing: My regards, &c. Martha, do'n't forget me: for as never other man was, intirely and by your own condescending choice. I am forever yours,

Dan Hubbard

A HUMOROUS SKIT.

"One Thousand Years of Hubbard History" is the title of a book now in press and to be published in New York. Though this takes the family back two centuries beyond the Norman conquest and to Norseland, what good is it? They are bound to trace to and can not trace beyond the original Mother Hubbard.

The publication of the above editorial in the St. Louis Star Sayings led a well-known newspaper writer, a Hubbard descendant, to sharpen his pencil and write the following about what is probably the oldest nursery rhyme in existence. The publisher of this volume, in common with all other descendents of the name, duly bore his share of raillery about his maternal ancestry. He found it the best way to join in the rhyme in a jolly way. That seemed to take the edge off from his companions fun somewhat. He therefore feels at liberty to insert this bit of humor, according to those who do not appreciate the keen points and bright satire on all who would travesty the name the privilege of removing the pages from the book.

OUR MATERNAL PROGENITOR.

Manifestly it would be abortive to present a genealogical history of the Hubbard family without recognizing the fact that the illustrious tribe had a maternal as well as a paternal progenitor. In fact, it would be worse than that, for while the fierce sea king. Hubba, thundered down the corridors of time for a short distance, and then slid off unnoticed into some of the by-ways of history that are only trodden by the tireless footsteps of antiquarians and such the old lady who bore the full name Hubbard, from the first, has ambled along on the broad highway of public attention, quietly and quaintly, leading her dog, and making no disturbance. Hubba was prominent for a time. She is prominent for all time. Her history is briefly told in the books. To the world, more familiarly, it is repeated more often than that of many heroes and heroines who achieved more startling feats than she. Not even truthful George, the heroic child with the hatchet, is more often mentioned or better remembered than is Old Mother Hubbard. It is very unfortunate that we have no data to present of her lineage. Some sensitive relative, we understand, destroyed the records. She doubtless had parents, but who they were is not apparent. She had family ties, unquestionably, else the tribe of Hubbards would hardly be as numerous as it is. Of these family ties, however, tradition tells us nothing. After the manner of nearly all the chroniclers of antiquity who wrote contemporaneous history, those who wrote of her contented themselves with recording those salient facts in her life story which best illustrate the prominent and attractive traits of her character.

From the meagre details of this most admirable woman's history, which are all that remain to us, it is, however, altogether impossible to obtain a comprehensive idea of what she must have been, and of the influence which she unquestionably exerted on the people and the manners of her era. What that era was it is, unfortunately, impossible to say. The rude rhymes which perpetuate her noble deeds have been handed down from generation to generation, until looking backward. we are utterly unable to imagine how remote was the period of her life. Certain allusions, as those to a cupboard, to a tailor, to linen, and the like, make it certain that some measure of civilization had been attained before she died, if, indeed, she can be said to have died in any true sense of the word. The unquestionable antiquity of her story, however. proves that that civilization must have been immature. This being demonstrated, it is easy for the careful student to see that she was no ordinary person, as, of course, she would not be, being a Hubbard. In the first place she was notable for being old at the period when the historian's attention was first attracted to her. She was, in her youth. no social reformer or agitator, else she would have attracted notice sooner. She never occupied a box at the opera, could not ride a bicycle. and was indifferent upon the subject of "tariff reform." Her placid. well-ordered life had proceeded, doubtless on conventional lines, so quietly and under such social discipline, that it was not until after her family had grown up and gone out to people the corners of the earth, as they have since done, that she became in any way notable. Of course, she had had a family. The existence of that family to-day is sufficient evidence of that fact, but, aside from their existence, the fact that she was Mother Hubbard is proof positive. A person can not be a mother without having progeny. When we first learn of her, however, she is living alone, save for one faithful retainer.

Mrs. Hubbard had a dog. It was not merely that she was kind to animals generally in an era when cruelty to the lower orders of creation was almost universal, but she had adopted this particular dog for her own. Doubtless her motherly bowels yearned for the little ones whom she had reared and who had gone their several ways after growing into blooming womanhood and lusty manhood. A dog was not much, but he served as a solace to her desolate old age. The dog was hers. Whether pug, water-spaniel, or one of other aristocratic lineage, history saith not. He was probably just plain dog. Upon him she lavished all the kindliness and tender affection which had made her house a nest of refuge to those numerous young Hubbards whom she had lost. She hunted for bones for him when her own larder was empty. She sought to array him in purple and Irish linen. She went, weeping, to provide him with proper sepulture when she believed him defunct. She would have done for him anything which lay in her power, and it was this patient, long-suffering, never-tiring affection of her loving heart that not only educated the dog into the doing of remarkable stints, but caused the historian to immortalize her name by simply recording some few of her deeds.

Such in brief was the character of the Mother of all the Hubbards. Slight and trivial as the records may seem, they are clear indications of some of the traits that have made the race notable. That these traits are hereditary no Hubbard can doubt, and there is none that can fail in filial, not to say grand-filial, respect for his great progenitress.

Her simple and touching annals have inspired not only the historian but the poet and artist, and to close this volume without an appropriate mention of her well-rounded out life would manifest such a marked lack of fair play and gallantry towards the fair sex that coming generations would feel injured beyond repair at such uncalled for and conspicuous omission.

SOME AMERICAN PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES.

THE ORDER OF THE CINCINNATI was founded by the American and French officers at the Cantonments of the Continental Army on the Hudson River at the close of the Revolution in May, 1783. Thirteen State Societies were formed, and one in France. The eldest male lineal descendant only from one of these original officers is eligible to membership. This keeps the membership list quite reduced in numbers, and somewhat impairs the enterprise of the Order, it now being only a little over 400 in point of numbers. The present General Officers are Hon. Robert Milligan McLane, of Maryland, Acting President-General; Hon. Asa Bird Gardiner, LL.D., of Rhode Island, Secretary-General; Mr. John Schuyler, of New York, Treasurer-General; Mr. Thomas Pinckney Lowndes, of South Carolina, Assistant Secretary-General; and Mr. Henry Thayer Drowne, of Rhode Island, Assistant Treasurer-General.

THE AZTEC CLUB was formed in 1847 in the City of Mexico, and was originally composed of officers of the United States who served in the Mexican War, and who were actuated in associating themselves together by a worthy desire "to cherish the memories and keep alive the traditions that cluster about the names of those officers who took part in the Mexican War." Membership is confined to officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps who served in the war or their blood relatives. Each primary member may nominate as his successor his son or a blood relative, who during the life of the primary member is known as associate-member, and on the death of the former is entitled, as his representative, to full membership. The headquarters of the organization are in Washington, D. C. There are 235 members, which include the following officers:

President, General John Porter Hatch, U. S. A., New York City; Vice-President and Treasurer, Colonel De Lancey Floyd-Jones, U. S. A., New York City; Secretary, General Horatio Gates Gibson, U. S. A., Washington, D. C.; Assistant Secretary, Mark Burckle Hatch, Washington, D. C.

The Society of the SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION was the outgrowth of a sentiment born in a far-away State. July 4, 1876, some warm-blooded descendants of the Revolutionary Patriots in California were moved to organize themselves into a body termed "Sons of Revolutionary Sires." In 1889 this Society reorganized and took the name of Sons of the American Revolution to keep in line with various State Societies in the East which had then been formed and were bearing this title. These State societies formed a National Society in New York April 30, 1889, and were chartered in Connecticut in this same year. There are now besides the National Society in New York twenty-seven State societies and one in the District of Columbia, which is third in numbers, New York and Connecticut leading it, respectively, with Massachusetts fourth. Its membership is now nearly 5,000, and is constantly growing.

The National Officers are: President-General, Gen. Horace Porter, New York; Vice-Presidents-General, Gen. J. C. Breckinridge, U. S. A.; Col. T. M. Anderson, U. S. A.; William R. Griffith, Maryland; Edwin S. Barrett, Massachusetts: John Whitehead, New Jersey; Secretary-General, Franklin Murphy, New Jersey; Treasurer-General, C. W. Haskins, New York; Registrar-General, A. Howard Clark, District Columbia; Historian-General, Henry Hall, New York; Chaplain-General, Rt. Rev.

C. E. Chenev, Ill.

THE SONS OF THE REVOLUTION came into existence in 1876 in New York City, and claim priority of inception. Their purposes are similar to those of the other society, viz.: "to keep alive among ourselves and our descendants the patriotic spirit of the men who, in military, naval, or civil service, by their acts or counsel, achieved American independence; to collect and secure for preservation the manuscript rolls, records, and other documents relating to the war of the Revolution, and to promote intercourse and good feeling among its members now and hereafter." Eligibility to membership is confined to male descendants, above the age of twenty-one years, from an ancestor who as either a military, naval, or marine officer, soldier, sailor, or marine, or official in the service of any one of the thirteen original colonies or States, or of the National Government, representing or composed of those colonies or States, assisted in establishing American independence during the war of the Revolution between the 19th day of April, 1775, when hostilities commenced, and the 19th day of April, 1783, when they were ordered to cease.* The general society of the "Sons of the Revolution" was organized by delegates from the then existing State societies in 1890. There are now twenty-one State societies. Their enterprise is not so marked as that of the other society, nor their membership nearly as large, but the personnel is equally as good.

The General Officers are: General President, Ex-Gov. John Lee Carroll, Maryland; General Vice-President, Garrett D. W. Vroom, New Jersey; Second Gen. Vice-Pres., Col. John Screven, Galveston; General Treasurer, R. M. Cadwalader, Pennsylvania; Assistant Gen. Treas., Stephen Salisbury, Massachusetts; General Secretary, J. M. Montgomery, New York; Assistant General Secretary, Wm. H. Harris, Maryland; General Registrar, John Woolf, Jordan, Pa.; General Historian, T. B. M. Mason, U. S. N.; General Chaplain, Rev. Morgan Dix, D.D., New York.

THE DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION were organized as a Society in the City of Washington, D. C., October 11, 1890, their present headquarters. Their membership is reported by the Secretary-General to be about 7,000. State chapters exist in thirty-six States, presided over by regents. Any woman may be eligible for membership who is of the age of eighteen years, and who is descended from an ancestor who, "with unfailing loyalty, rendered material aid to the cause of independence as a recognized patriot, as soldier or sailor, or as a civil officer in one of the several colonies or States, or of the United Colonies or States," provided that the applicant shall be acceptable to the society. Every application for membership must be endorsed by at least one member of the National Society, and is then submitted to the Registrars-General, who report on the question of eligibility to the Board of Management, and upon its approval the applicant is enrolled as a member.

The officers of the National Society are: President-General, Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson, Illinois; Vice-President-General (in charge of organization of chapters), Mrs. A. C. Geer, Washington, D. C.; Vice-Presidents-General, Mrs. W. R. Beale, Mrs. F. W. Dickins, Miss Eugenia Washington, Mrs. A. Howard Clarke, Miss E. L. Dorsey, Mrs. Harry Heth, Mrs. R. Ogden Doremus, Mrs. J. S. T. A New York society of DAUGHTERS OF THE REVOLUTION was organized August 20, 1890. The general society was organized in the city of New York September 9, 1891. Chapters exist in a large number of States and others are being rapidly formed. Eligibility to membership is restricted to "women who are lineal descendants of an ancestor who was a military or naval or marine officer, soldier, sailor, or marine in actual service under the authority of any of the thirteen colonies or States, or of the Continental Congress, and remained always loyal to such authority, or descendants of one who signed the Declaration of Independence, or of one who as a member of the Continental Congress or of the Congress of any of the colonies or States, or as an official appointed by or under the authority of any such representative bodies, actually assisted in the establishment of American independence by service rendered during the War of the Revolution, becoming thereby liable to conviction of treason against the Government of Great Britain, but remaining always loyal to the authority of the colonies or States."

The officers of this society are as follows: President-General, Mrs. Edward Paulet Steers, No. 2076 Fifth Avenue, New York City; Curator-General, Mrs. Louise F. Rowe; Secretary-General, Mrs. D. Phænix Ingraham, No. 2052 Madison Avenue, New York City; Treasurer-General, Miss Lucretia V. Steers; Registrar-General, Mrs. M. C. Martin Casey; Assistant Registrar-General, Mrs. Hans S. Beattie; Historian-General, Mrs. L. De B. Gallison; Librarian-General, Mrs. L. Scofield Davis; Chaplain-General, Rev. George R. Van De Water, D.D. The title of "Founder-General" has been conferred on Mrs. Flora Adams Darling, to whom the society owes its creation.

CAPT. JONAS HUBBARD AND THE QUEBEC EXPEDITION.

JONAS HUBBARD, b in Worcester, Mass., May 21, 1739, d at Quebec Dec 31, 1775, was the son of Daniel (b 1695, d Apl 28, 1784) and Dorothy Hubbard (b 1698, d Apl 4, 1769) and had a brother Zurriah (b Mch 31, 1732) and sisters Lucy (b Sep 28, 1727) and Elizabeth (b Oct 23, 1729). He married Mch 7, 1759, Mary Stevens. Children—Reuben

(b Sep 13, 1761), Levi (see Prominent American Hubbards), Sally (b Oct 25, 1767), Jonas (b Dec 19, 1770), Thaddeus (b Sep 7, 1772?) Abel (b Apl 20, 1773?) and Artemas (b Mch 19, 1775). After the death of Capt. JONAS HUBBARD his widow and children removed to Paris, Me., where they were early settlers. The following account of Arnold's expedition into Canada, wherein Capt. HUBBARD (who left a wife, several children and a babe in arms to serve Freedom) figured so heroically has been principally gathered from Lincoln's History of Worcester County, Mass.:

During the winter of 1774-5 General Gage contemplated seizing stores about the vicinity of Boston that a bold yeomanry, recognizing the portentious signs, had secreted for possible forthcoming emergencies. He sent out British officers disguised as countrymen to learn their whereabouts and to learn further the condition of the roads and the topography of the country. These officers visited Worcester, Mass. The alert citizens divined their objects and began preparations at once. Captain Timothy Bigelow and Ensign, afterward Lieutenant, Hubbard began drilling the minute men. Lieutenant Hubbard was a farmer, but had also other business interests in the town of Worcester. In March, 1775, the company of minute men were directed to train half a day in each week, and a payment of one shilling was allowed to each for this service, and a penalty provided, equal in amount, for absence. The company had met almost daily for months. When the weather permitted they paraded on the common or occupied the streets. In the storms of winter they were drilled in some hall. Under the instruction of Capt. Timothy Bigelow they had attained great proficiency in military science, and when afterwards mustered at Cambridge received commendations from their superior officers for good discipline and celerity of evolution. A few months before hostilities commenced Captain Rufus Chandler, a decided royalist, afterwards a refugee, and an active and influential man, paraded his troops before some British officers who had visited him from Boston, and boasted to his guests of great loyalty among his men, which the King vainly expected would sustain his assumptions of power. Amidst a bold and intelligent yeomanry, knowing their rights and willing to defend them, he beheld these hopes rudely blasted; but few remained steadfast to the King when the men were called upon to avenge the atrocities of the British at Lexington and Concord. The call soon came. Before noon on the 19th of April an express came to the town, shouting, as he passed through the street at full speed, "To arms! To arms! The war has begun!" His white horse, bloody with spurring and dripping with sweat, fell exhausted by the Church. Another was instantly procured and the tidings went on.

The bell rang out the alarm, cannon were fired and messengers sent to every part of the town to collect the soldiery. As the news spread the implements of husbandry were thrown by in the field, and the citizens left their homes with no longer delay than to seize their arms. In a short time the minute men were paraded on the green, under Capt. Timothy Bigelow. After fervent prayer by the Rev. Mr. Maccarty. they took up the line of march. They were soon followed by as many of the train bands as could be gathered under Capt. Benjamin Flagg. On that day 110 men marched from the town of Worcester for Concord. Intelligence of the retreat of the enemy met them after they advanced. and they turned toward Boston. When Capt. Bigelow reached the ancient Howe Tavern in Sudbury he halted to rest his men. Capt. Benjamin Flage, who had commenced his march an hour or two later, came up, and, insisting on pushing forward without loss of time, both officers moved on to Cambridge. The troops were there reorganized. Captain Bigelow was made Major in Col. Ward's Regiment, and Lieutenant Hubbard succeeded him to the captaincy. April 24 the company consisted of 59 men, all from Worcester. John Smith and William Gates were lieutenants.

After the exciting events around Boston had passed and a lull had ensued, the autumn of '75 found a few active minds planning the bold expedition against Quebec, alike memorable for boldness of conception, chivalrous daring of execution and melancholy failure in its results.

The object of the service or the destination of the troops were known only to the superior officers. It was understood that it would be attended with danger, labor and suffering. Hubbard, brave and energetic, did not shrink from peril or hardship in the cause to which he had devoted himself, and, at his own request, was appointed to the command of a company in the detachment of Arnold. While the troops halted at Fort Weston on the Kennebec, he wrote to his wife in terms worthy of a patriot martyr: "I know not if I shall ever see you again. The weather grows severe cold, and the woods, they say, are terrible to pass. But I do not value life or property, if I can secure liberty for my children." Captain Hubbard shared in the extreme sufferings of the march, and probably more than his proportion, as acting under a commission, among those who had no reverence for artificial distinctions beyond that yielded to the legitimate authority of courage and wisdom.

On the 19th of September, 1775, they sailed from Newburyport, landing the next day near the present site of Augusta on the Kennebec. Then they made their way up that river and across the divide into the valley of the St. Lawrence. The march was toilsome in the extreme. Their baggage, ammunition and provisions, were conveyed in boats, which were forced up the rapid current with great labor, and had often to be dragged or carried past unnavigable rapids or across the watersheds between the sources of one stream and those of another. On the march, Major Bigelow, in order to make out their route more clearly, by the view from its summit, climbed the high mountain which still bears his name in Northern Maine, near the head-waters of the Kennebec. It is a monument to this heroic townsman [Worcester] of ours, grander and more lasting than any ever reared by human hands.

Arnold's little army at length arrived before Quebec, near the middle of November, having suffered terribly from cold, as well as from hunger and excessive labor, for the winter sets in early in that northern region. The town, besides its great natural strength of position and its formidable defensive works, had a garrison exceeding Arnold's force in numbers. With admirable impudence he sent a flag of truce, demanding the surrender of the place. But the commander would neither surrender nor come out to fight, and Arnold did not see his way to getting in He had, moreover, only five rounds of ammunition for each man, and was therefore in no condition to maintain a siege, even if he had force enough to invest the town. So he moved up the river twenty miles or more to await the orders of Montgomery, who, in a campaign of extraordinary brilliancy, had made himself master of the Lake Champlain country, the Upper St. Lawrence and Montreal. On the 3d of December Montgomery arrived with three hundred men, some artillery and provisions, and what Arnold's men needed most, a supply of clothing suitable for the season, which was intensely cold. That patriot army, after their dreadful march through the Maine and Canadian forests, were barefooted and in rags.

Montgomery, though not sanguine, thought there was a chance of success in attempting to storm the place in a night attack. On the 30th of December the attempt was made, one party, led by Montgomery in person, attacking the defences of the lower town from the southeast, and another, under Arnold, assaulting at the same time from the northwest. The fall of Montgomery at the head of his column by the first fire from the enemy put an end to the attack in that quarter. Arnold's command, with which were Major Bigelow, Captain Hubbard, and the Worcester men, had at first better success. Arnold was disabled by a severe wound in the leg. Capt. Jonas Hubbard was also wounded beneath the walls, and refusing to be removed, died of exposure in the fierce snow-storm. Major Bigelow and some two hundred others, under the command of Colonel Christopher Greene of Rhode Island, carried the first battery, and penetrated so far into the town that their retreat was cut off and they were compelled to surrender. Sergeant Silas Wesson was killed and Timothy Rice mortally wounded in this attack; both were Worcester men. Major Bigelow and the other soldiers from this town were made prisoners and held in captivity until November of the next year.

The history of many families of New England is told in that of Captain Hubbard. His ancestor, hardy and enterprising, went out from the cultivated country to redeem new tracts from the waste. The father, animated by a noble patriotism, exchanged the sickle for the sword, the peaceful pursuits of agriculture for the privations of military life, and died the death of a hero that his country and his posterity might never know the oppression of monarchial despotism.

THE PRETTY QUAKER'S CALL.

Philadelphia boasts probably of the prettiest Quaker girls in the world. Twenty years or more ago there dwelt at the corner of Chestnut and —— streets a certain dealer in cheese and butter by the name of Ephraim Prout. He had made a fortune in the trade and was widely respected. His aged mother was one of those distinguished personages who take their seats upon the platform in the meeting houses, and occasionally—say once in six months or so—have "a call to speak." His wife was an industrious body, as young looking as her own daughter. As for that daughter, words can not describe her. Nature, in pity for the prejudice which doomed her to wear sad-hued garments all her life, had showered upon her all the brilliant tints upon her palette. Friend Ephraim's daughter was fair to look upon. Perhaps she knew it, for she had a looking-glass, but not one word of flattery had she ever heard. So, week after week, first day, found Bessy at meeting; second day, busy with household affairs, while her mother superintended the washing; third day, ironing; fourth day, baking, and so on till the seven were recounted.

She was 24-twenty-four and not married. Had you asked Friend Hannah Prout why, she would have said: "My daughter does not yet bake bread as I could wish, and I can not allow her to marry until that is well learned." Young men who saw Bessy at the meeting or in her father's store were not so calmly indifferent. More than one Quaker youth, with a pleasant appreciation of Bessy's beauty and thrifty consideration of her father's wealth, were, like Barkis, "willing." But on none of them did the paternal eye fall with favor. Ephraim Prout and his wife Hannah had already selected a husband for their child. That husband to be was one Peter Potter, a widower of 40, who talked and occasionally preached, and owned three blocks of Arch street property, or "squares" in the parlance of the Philadelphians. Bessy had not been consulted. Often she acquiesced in the maternal opinion that Friend Peter was a worthy man. And probably she would have acquiesced in the opinion that he was the proper husband to select when the time came but for one unlucky circumstance. About the middle of December, just when Bessie's loaves were beginning to merit approval, Selina Grief was married. After passing meeting and going through the other ceremonies, the new-made couple gave a housewarming, and thither, of course, went Bessy, Bessy's mother and father, and Friend Peter.

Thither also came a young man of the world's people, one Mr. John Hubbard, who wore a black coat, a pair of patent leather boots, and a stovepipe hat, and who was regarded by the youthful Friends with feelings of mingled admiration and terror. Of course, there was neither singing or dancing, but they played, the forfeits being generally kisses. Mr. Hubbard enjoyed himself amazingly. He managed to kiss Bessy oftener than any one else, and that night walked home with her. Questioned by her mother, Bessy answered: "I thought it but right to allow him lest he should think Friends proud." So maternal solicitude was put at rest, and few impressions were awakened by the fact that Mr. John Hubbard took an immense interest in butter and cheese, conversed with Friend Ephraim on those subjects with great animation when they encountered each other at that Friend's store, and managed to be invited home to tea because he really could not leave Friend Ephraim until he quite comprehended the advantages of the new patent churn.

One evening Hannah cut the loaf, and smiling, turned to her daughter and said: "Bessy, thee makes bread as well as thy mother." That afternoon was one to be remembered. The time had come when Friend Peter Potter might be gratified. His wife was ready for him. A conference was held between the father and the anxious widower respecting Bessy's pecuniary prospects should her future spouse die first, and the courtship commenced.

The three sat before the fire—Ephraim twiddling his thumbs, Hannah darning stockings, "the child," Bessy, knitting. Ephraim began:

"Bessy."

"Yes, father."

"Thee are fit to manage a house of thy own."

"I think so, father."

"In fact, it is time thee should marry."

"Yes, father, I have been thinking so myself."

"I am sorry to hear thee say that, my child," cried Hannah. "A young girl should not think of such a matter until suggested by her parent or some wise friend."

Bessy looked down abashed.

"Only last week a friend spoke to me of the matter."

- "What friend? Good Sarah Rose, doubtless; she is ever for having women marry betimes."
 - "No, mother, not Friend Rose."

"Perhaps thy Aunt Eliza."

" No, mother."

"Who was it, child?"

"Friend John Hubbard."

"Friend-John Hubbard!"

"Yes, mother. He spoke of thinking well of me and suggesting that our lives would be passed happily together." "Bessy, thee knows a female Friend may not marry a young man of the world's people. Christie Brown was read out of meeting for so doing."

"Yes, mother."

"Well, child, since the time has come for thee to marry, thee will be glad to know that Friend Peter is anxious for a wife, and prefers thee."

Bessy turned pale.

"Friend Peter is worth a lot of money."

"Yes, father."

"Also, he is a Friend."

"Yes, father."

"Consequently thee had better marry him. It is now time for thee to retire. Good-night, Bessy."

"Good-night," said Bessy, with a trembling lip.

So it was settled. It never entered into any one's heart that Bessy was not used tenderly. And the days hurried on, one after the other, toward the first day, on which the twain were to "pass meeting" for the first time, preparatory to the solemnization of their nuptials. It was Friday. All the week Bessy had been a little sad, not quite herself. The extremely fine fabric of her muslin dress did not seem to interest her as it should have done. At 2 she came to her mother. "I have some little business to attend to in Fairmount," she said. "And I have been thinking it would be a pleasant thing if Friend Peter could drive me there in his leathern conveyance." So Friend Peter was summoned. The light wagon was brought out, and away they drove. Peter discoursed volubly. Bessy answered quietly. At last the wire bridge was crossed and Fairmount lay before them. When this was in sight Bessy spoke:

"Friend Peter, thee sees that white building with white shutters?"

"Ave, verily do I."

"Thee will oblige me by taking this package and deliver it to Friend Ann, with my good wishes. Meanwhile I will hold the reins; I do not wish to alight."

Friend Peter obediently took the package and departed. He stayed ten minutes. When he returned, horse, wagon, and lady love were gone. He rushed about distractedly. No one had seen anything. Peter waddled home. They were not there. The Quaker mother said:

"Be not alarmed; they will return soon."

But the day passed with no sign. So did Saturday. At 10 o'clock Saturday evening a noise of wheels was heard. Rushing out they found the wagon, a mulatto boy, and a note, but no Bessy. In terrible anxiety they tore open the missive. It was as follows:

Dear Parents and Respected Friend Peter:

I hope you have not been alarmed. I am well. Mother knows, I presume, that it would not be easy to marry if one felt no call to do so. I had no call to be united to Friend Peter. I had a call to marry John. There is no need of the ceremony of passing meeting among world's people, so I am already Friend Hubbard.

Suggest to Friend Peter the worthy Ann Billings as a wife. She is a better housewife than I. And let me know soon that I may be forgiven, for I am in grief on account of your alarm and annoyance. Your loving daughter,

BESSIE HUBBARD.

Friend Ephraim twisted his thumbs, Friend Hannah folded her hands, Friend Peter opened his eyes and mouth and shook his head slowly. At length Hannah said:

"Call my mother, Ephraim."

Ephraim brought the old lady down stairs. Nobody said a word—not one. They gave her the note. She read, folded it, put her spectacles on the table and sat quiet—fifteen minutes, half an hour, an hour. Then she arose and said:

"I have a call to speak. When the prodigal son returned the father killed the fatted calf. Bessy is a naughty child; but verily she deserves forgiveness."

And Bessy was forgiven. Two weeks later Peter married Widow Ann, and Mr. and Mrs. John Hubbard were guests at the wedding— Yankee Blade.

JAMES HUBBARD-THE CENTENARIAN.

THE HUBBARD CAPACITY FOR LONGEVITY.

JAMES HUBBARD was born in Sussex County, Delaware, near the Maryland line, March 27, 1785, and died at Mapleton, Marion County, Ind., April 29, 1891, aged 106 years, 1 month and 2 days. His father, John Hubbard, was born in 1748 and died in Dearborn County, near Wellington, Indiana, in 1848, aged 100 years. His grandfather died at the age of 105 years. His sister, Mrs. William Glenn of Cincinnati, Ohio, died aged 100 years. Several others in the family have lived to be over 90.

When JAMES HUBBARD* was five years of age his father removed from Delaware to Orange County, North Carolina, where JAMES married in 1809 Mary Thomas (b Nov 28, 1788, d Apl 1, 1865). Living in North Carolina but a short period, the young couple removed to Lebanon, Ohio, and in 1811 to Dearborn County (then Indiana Territory), Indiana, where his father had entered land. In 1833 he sold his possessions and took up a quarter section (160 acres) in Marion County, then an unbroken wilderness, where he lived the balance of his life. During the war of 1812 he was employed as a ranger or scout in Capt. William Spencer's Co., Col. Dill's command. For these services he received a pension of $96 per annum from our grateful government, commencing in 1884, seventy years after the service was rendered. At the age of 83 he became blind from a painful cataract that formed in both eyes. This interrupted his reading and so annoyed him that he determined at 87 to have an operation, which, happily, was successful, and he enjoyed again reading his books and newspapers. At 100 years he had teeth enough to chew his food, worked daily in the garden digging potatoes, and made a new garden gate. For a little variation he would step over to see his son Richard, who lived four miles away.

The old gentleman was an ardent Republican, and never faltered in his allegiance from the party's birth to his death; he never used tobacco, and had stiff opinions on temperance matters. Feeling a little unwell one day after passing the centenary mark, the doctor was sent for, to whom he paid no attention whatever when questioned about his condition, answering his queries with remarks about what the party should do upon the temperance question. Though ardent in politics he could never be induced to hold office, and used a couplet from Shakespeare to temper the quality of his refusal:

Give me a staff of honor for mine age, But not a scepter to control the world.

JAMES HUBBARD was an exemplary member of the Methodist Church, joining it in 1866, and was buried by its rites, Rev. J. G. Chaffee officiating. His text was: "Cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not when my strength faileth." The pall-bearers were members of the Tippecanoe Club, seven in number, of which he was the oldest member, and all were past three score and ten. In 1885 he had living five children, forty-nine grandchildren, seventy-four great-grandchildren, and ten great-great-grandchildren. A picture showing five of the generations together once appeared in one of the Indiana papers. JAMES HUBBARD and Nancy Thomas had ten children. Solomon, the oldest, removed to Davis County, Iowa; RICHARD remained at Mapleton, Ind.; CHARLES went to Lincoln, Neb.; ELIZABETH married Thomas Record of Indianapolis; Jane m —— Berry of Mapleton; James Robinson, the youngest, was born May 18, 1829, and died Aug 31, 1864. He was a member of Co. D. 3d Regt. Missouri Cavalry, and married March 5, 1854, Mary C. Emerson of Pike County, Missouri, and had a son, b Sep 1, 1858, dy; Susie, b Nov 21, 1860, m W. H. Myers of Louisville, Lincoln County, Mo; and Kate, b Oct 5, 1864.

The following from an Indianapolis paper about him is so full of historical knowledge that it is herewith reproduced:

When JAMES HUBBARD, who died at his home near this city Wednesday night, was born, George III was king of England. Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette still had their heads on their shoulders, and carried the aforesaid heads very high at Versailles and the Elysee. The declaration of independence was only nine years old; the French revolution was still in the womb of the future. The thirteen feeble commonwealths which had but just wrested independence from George III. were loosely bound by the rope of sand known as the "Articles of Confederation." The Continental Congress, rapidly becoming an object of popular contempt and derision, was making, at long intervals, impotent decrees at New York. Indiana was a practically unknown and unexplored part of the vast territory of Virginia. The organization of the Northwest territory was two years distant. Four years were to pass before the Constitution of the United States would be framed. George Washington was living the life of a Virginia planter at Mt. Vernon. Pitt and Fox were the ruling spirits in England. Edmund Burke had but just completed his great parliamentary career. Ireland had a parliament of her own and Flood and Grattan were making College Green classic with their wit and their eloquence. Napoleon Bonaparte was a young lieutenant of artillery at Valence. Andrew Jackson was sowing wild oats in North Carolina. Von Moltke and William I. were not yet born.

It was a wonderful century which was spanned by JAMES HUBBARD'S life. He saw the rise and fall of dynast'es; the dawn of republicanism in the western world and its extension over a large share of the fairest part of the earth's surface; he saw half a dozen reconstructions of the map of Europe; he saw the downfall of the ancient regime in France, the great revolution, the advent of the man on horseback in the person of Napoleon, a continent drenched in blood to quench his ambition, Waterloo, St. Helena, Louis XVIII, Charles X. Louis Philippe, 1848, the republic, Louis Napoleon, the empire, Sedan, the commune, the republic. He saw England transformed by a peaceful revolution from a government by kings into a government by the people. He saw the Irish parliament wiped out and almost a hundred years of futile struggle for its restoration. He was ten years old when Warren Hastings was acquitted of high crimes and misdemeanors, and twenty years old when Nelson fell at Trafalgar. He saw the extinction of Poland, the ancient Chinese wall partly battered down by the western powers, the admission of Japan into the great family of civilized nations, the re-creation of Italy, the unification of Germany, the dismemberment of Turkey, Spain a republic- for a day-and once again the despair of Europe. He was three years old when the first permanent English settlement was made in Australia, and he lived to see the commonwealths of that great continent united in a federation destined to play an important part in the drama of humanity. He saw one after another of the Spanish American states throw off their allegance to the parent country, and when he died there was not a crowned head in all the western hemisphere.

In this country what marvelous transformations did he witness! When he was born there were four millions of people in the United States; he died leaving sixty-five millions. He found thirteen states; he left forty-two. The largest town in the country had less than 20,000 inhabitants when he first opened his eyes; when he finally closed them there were twenty-eight cities of over 100,000 inhabitants each, and three of over a million. He was eighteen when Jefferson added the magnificent domain of Louisiana to the national territory; he was thirty when Jackson prevailed at New Orleans and Wellington at Waterloo. He was a middleaged man when Andrew Jackson suppressed the nullifiers; he was six years beyond the allotted three score and ten when Ft. Sumter was fired upon; he was four score when Grant received Lee's sword at Appomattox!

But JAMES HUBBARD saw more wonderful things during his lifetime than the birth of nations. the creation of dynasties, the fall of thrones. He saw the whole face of civilization changed. He saw a complete revolution in the industrial systems of the world. He saw the passing away of an old social order and the birth of a new one. He saw the application to a myriad of practical uses of great natural forces whose potentialities had been unsuspected by all the generations of man from the beginning The lucifer match, illuminating gas, the sewing machine, the reaper and mower, the cotton gin, the steamship, the railway, the telegraph, the printing press, the telephone, the electric light, the phonograph-indeed almost all of the most familiar and useful agencies of our modern civilization had not been dreamed of when JAMES HUBBARD was born, and he was approaching the century limit when some of the most important among them were introduced. The world which this old man left the other day differed more widely in all the features of material civilization from the world as he found it than did that world from the world of Cæsar and Alexander. Indeed, it would be hard to recognize this jolly old planet of ours as the same one that was gayly whirling through space on March 27, 1785, when JAMES HUBBARD dropped down upon it from the realm of mystery for a little sojourn of one hundred and six years.

SAMUEL HUBBARD and his wife, Lucy Wheeler, were born in Massachusetts. They had a son, Simon S., who was born in Paris, N.Y., Apl 30, 1800. He married in New York State Jan 29, 1893. He was then promoted 1st Lieutenant and Regimental Quartermaster and served with the 16th Kentucky Cavalry until the end of the war, when he returned to Pennsylvania and at Bradford, Pa., built the first oil refinery in the town, which he eventually sold to the Standard Oil Co., which has employed Mr. HUBBARD for the past fifteen years as its manager in Northwestern Ohio and a part of Indiana and Michigan, with headquarters at Toledo.

THE VALUE OF ADVERTISING.

GEORGE DAVID READ HUBBARD, second son of Colman Smith and Mary Platts (Read) Hubbard, and eighth in descent from

GEORGE DAVID READ HUBBARD.

George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct., whose genealogical data is given upon page 206 of this volume, is a firm convert to the doctrine that advertising pays. He has tried it often and has never vet been disappointed. "It has great merit," he says, "and generally brings quick returns." Late in December, 1883, Mr. HUBBARD had occasion to advertise in a New Haven paper for an office boy, in connection with the Elm City Printers' Warehouse, of which he was proprietor. He specified that the boy must be neat and come well recommended. Within a few days, on January 4, 1884, his charming wife presented him with a handsome cherub weighing eleven pounds. The local paper very promptly commented on the coincidence as showing the great value of advertising, and numerous newspaper friends from Boston to San Francisco added their little jokes. This much-advertised boy was named Carlton Spencer, and with his brother, Nelson Eugene, make a bright pair of genuine New England Young Americans. Mr. HUBBARD was a student at the Collegiate and Commercial Institute up to 1875 and from there to the National Business College, both of New Haven, Ct. In 1882 he married Mrs. S. Maria Hawkes, an estimable lady of Springfield, Mass. After disposing of his business in New Haven, Ct., he entered a larger field in connection with the well known Johnson Type Foundry of Philadelphia, Pa., and is quite an expert in type faces and printing requisites. He has lived in Chicago for four years, but has recently removed to New York in the interest of a new line of business.

of sixty thousand dollars, one half of which comes from the estate of Fanny M. (Hubbard) Kellogg, daughter of Roger and Fanny (Burbank) Hubbard of Montpelier. Her estate came to her from her father, Roger Hubbard. The other half of the amount necessary to finish this handsome structure (about thirty thousand dollars) has been given to the Library Association by IOHN ERASŤUS HUBBARĎ (see page 360 for biography and descent line) of Montpelier.

The building is constructed of a very light-colored granite from the quarries at Dummerston, Vt.

REV. GEORGE WARREN GARDNER, D. D., AND CELIA LULL (HUBBARD) GARDNER.

For many years the Rev. Dr. Gardner was principal of the Baptist Academy* at New London, N. H., which is now known as the Colby

REV. GEORGE W. GARDNER.

Academy, and was afterward pastor of the First Baptist Church in Charlestown, Mass. (now a part of Boston). He was also pastor in Cleveland, Ohio, and later connected with the American Baptist Missionary Union. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College (1852), and ordained in 1858. In 1881 he was elected President of Central College of Iowa, finally returning to New London to spend his latter days in a home presented to him by the grateful and appreciative alumni.

Celia Lull (Hubbard) Gardner, his wife, was the youngest of three daughters of Asahel and Cinthia (Smith) Hubbard and sister of Colman Smith Hubbard (the publisher's father). She is a woman of remarkable refinement and unusually strong traits of character, an earnest and devoted mother, whose physical strength was not in keeping with her mental endowments. Her children are her solace and pride and, like Cornelia of notable domestic fame, she points to them with pardonable pride and says, "these are my jewels." See page 442.

" A little bit of Patience often makes the sunshine come, And a little bit of Love makes a very happy home: A little bit of Hope makes a rainy day look gay, And a little bit of Charity makes glad a weary way."

CELIA L. H. GARDNER.

Descended from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.

^{*} The writer as a boy of 14 attended this famous school in 1859-60 and "did the chores" for his board (i. ϵ ., took care of horse and cow, shovelled snow-paths and brought chunks of wood for seven stoves) in this family. The care of the dumb animals had to be done by clock work, the snow averaged four feet deep in winter and the wood was heavy, and in addition to keeping up his studies and duties as Secretaryof the Athenian Society, it was about all a slender boy measuring twenty inches (waist measure) wanted to do. But it did not hurt him, in fact it developed him.

INCOMPLETE DESCENT LINES.

JOHN HENRY HUBBARD, second son of the four children of Elijah Jones and Mary (Mangum) Hubbard, was born in Dekalb County, Georgia, March 7, 1844, and moved to Winston County, Miss., in 1855. He served as a private soldier in the Confederate service in the 14th Miss. Vols. and after the termination of hostilities engaged in the cotton-mill business with his brother Walter Jones Hubbard (now of Harwood, Tex.) at Hashuqua and also Meridan, Miss. He married (1) Mary P. Mims and had Walter; and (2) Laura E. Combs and had William Henry, Flavius Josephus, Ernest Jones, Senia Etta, and Thomas George. It is supposed that his father's ancestors came from Virginia

LUCIUS HUBBARD, eldest of the three children of Ransom and Mariette Hubbard and grandson of Jonathan and Rebecca Hubbard, was born Jan 7, 1844, in St. Joseph County, Ind., and graduated in 1866 from the Law Department of the University of Michigan. He settled in 1867 in South Bend, Ind., where he is now engaged in the active practice of law. In 1873–75 he served in the Indiana State Senate, and since 1879 has been the President of the First National Bank of South Bend. Jan 7, 1869, he married Martha O. Davis of that place. His grandfather, Jonathan (one of eleven children, three of whom were named Francis, Silas and Demus) originally came from Connecticut to Oneida County, N. Y., and thence to St. Joseph County, Ind., in 1834, and died about 1859. LUCIUS HUBBARD has one son, Arthur (b Nov 19, 1872, a member of the '94 class of the University of Michigan).

BENJAMIN VESTAL HUBBARD, youngest of the nine children of William B. and Ludah (Vestal) Hubbard, was born near Monrovia, Ind., June 29, 1854, and educated at Spiceland Academy and Earlham College, Ind. His parents were Quakers, who died when he was seven years old leaving him no legacy but good principles and a courageous heart to pursue life's struggle with. He taught school 4 years, then engaged in journalism and afterward practiced law from 1878 to 1880, when he became the Steward of Indiana Hospital for the Insane. In 1883 he acted as general life insurance agent at Rock Island, Ill., Des Moines, Iowa, Kansas City, Mo., and Chicago, Ill., and was made Superintendent of Insurance for Illinois in January, 1893. He married Dec 15, 1882, Mary F. Gentry; no children.

"ОНО HUB."

GUY HOMER HUBBARD, son of Harlan Page and Adelia Anna (Crocker) Hubbard, was born in New Haven, Ct., Jan 7, 1874. He prepared for college at the Hillhouse High School in New Haven, entering Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, N. Y., in which city he resides. He has adopted newspaper work as his profession, and is ninth in descent from George Hubbard of Middletown, Ct.

HOW TO SUBDUE AN ENTHUSIASTIC COMPILER OF GENEALOGIES.

Do not reply until he has written to you three times. Then wait a little longer. Perhaps he will write the fourth time.

Do not give names in full for purposes of identification. Send him initials only. This will keep him guessing and give his mind active play.

Do not give in one letter facts that can be distributed about in several. Our Postal System is not running for amusement, and must be supported.

Do not answer direct questions. If he particularly wishes information about your grandfather you can easily head him off by sending facts about your wife's uncle.

Do not satisfy his unblushing curiosity about yourself. He is an inquisitive person and asks point blank for your full name and age. Forward this data about others, but withhold it about yourself.

When names in several generations are the same, by careful effort they can be so distributed that 'tother can not be recognized from which. This is of immense value in cultivating the highest phase of mind reading.

When you receive letters and circulars asking for family data, reply and say that you have considerable, and ask him if he wants it. This will consume time and stationery and keep the purseproud compiler properly humble and industrious.

Do not write unusual proper names legibly. Thus you will catch him in his opaque ignorance, and perhaps be able to reduce afterward his avoirdupois by scathing references to this opaqueness. This should worry him thin, and is far more effective than the banting system.

When inquiring if your line is to be in the book, avoid mentioning full names, dates, or any possible clues that will help the compiler to settle the point. Mention in a general way that you had a grandfather who had several children. There are lines and lines, and it is the business of the genealogist to divine them off-hand or take down his sign.

THROUGH RINGS OF SMOKE.

A REVERIE.

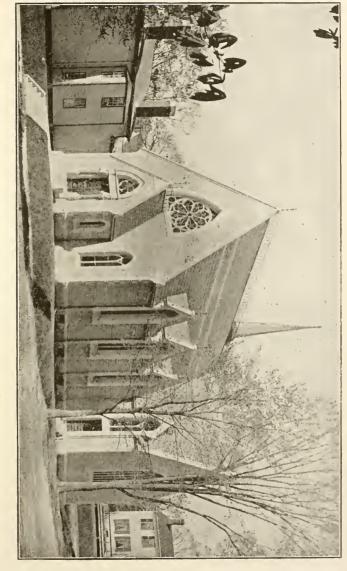

As I sit by the fire the embers grow dim;
My dainty cigarro, round, shapely and slim,
Sends airily upward a volume of smoke,
In the midst of the cloud I can see all the folk,
Living or dead, whom I once called my friends
In the long ago. Another puff lends
Additional charm, for with vision half clear,
My mind wanders back to the days—Ah! How dear
To my heart!—when in gay society's whirls,
I was free to make love to a dozen fair girls.

That small, graceful ring of blue smoke curling up Brings vividly back the dear days when my cup Of happiness, surely, was full to the brim; For I sit by the fire, the embers grow dim, And in that blue wreath that is floating above I see the dear form of fair Nan, my first love. We met at the seashore four years last July, And ere the gay months of the summer sped by We two had made vows—vows e'er to be kept, And my dreams were ever of her when I slept.

But in less than a month she had gone back to town; On another dark head I had placed my queen's crown. Her name was Marie, and if ever man loved With an ardent affection that must needs have proved His sincerity, that man was I. And 'tis now Her eyes that remind me of my broken vow, As reproachfully, tenderly, still full of love, They glance down at me from that ring just above. But no! The smoke changes! A change for the better! And now in that wreath I can see—Alfaretta!

But the vision's fast fading, and here in its place, In kaleidoscope change, are the features of Grace. Grace was a stunner, a beauteous blonde, And a girl of whom I was deucedly fond, For she and I married on May twenty-eight, Nearly two years gone by; and it was our fate Not a great while ago—but where are those rings? My cigar has gone out; still a faint odor clings. But hark! There's ... squall, half in cradle-clothes hid, That states I must walk all night long with that kid!

METERS FROM THE MUSES—WRITTEN BY HUBBARD DESCENDANTS.

Verses at Dissolving a Hubbard Re-union.—By E. II, G.)

Though parted, we are with you still,
For friendship's bond shall ne'er be broken;
With thoughts of you our hearts shall thrill,
For there is left with us a token—
A gift whose price is not in coin—
The worth of which no words can tell,
For which we thank you as we join
To speak that last sad word, "Farewell."

(By F. S. S.)

Joy stood upon my threshold mild and fair,
With lilies in her hair.
I bade her enter as she turned to go,
And she said, "No."

Fortune once bathed at my ruined porch
And lit it with her torch;
I asked her fondly, "Have you come to stay?"
She answered, "Nay"

Fame robed in spotless white before me came;
I longed her kiss to claim;
I told her how her presence I revered.
She disappeared.

Love came at last—how pure, how sweet— With roses at her feet. I begged her all her bounty to bestow; She answered, "No."

Since then, Joy, Fortune, Love, and Fame,
Ilave come my soul to claim;
I see them smiling everywhere,
But do not care.

(By E. W. D.)

You may hide from all eyes your burdens, Your weariness from heart-aches and strife: Keep grinding to the tune of "your duty" In the unmusical marches of life: You may live so the world will applaud you, Live a life both respected and bright, Sink love below the level of Duty, And rejoice in the triumph of Right-Yet still will unsatisfied longings, (Not clearly or easily defined) Steal out, during unguarded moments, From the soul that is closely confined, And ask, in voice faint and weary, For refreshment from affection's vast store; But the voice is unheard and unanswered In the noise of the world's ceaseless roar.

CLARENCE A. HUBBARD OF LAKE CITY, MINN.

JOHN ITHEAL HUBBARD was born in Genesee County, New York, February 17th, 1820, and married Lucy L. Smith on November 15th, 1843, at Leslie, Ingham County, Michigan.

On November 4, 1844, there was born to them the subject of this sketch, Clarence A. Hubbard. When he was nine years of age the family moved to Winona, Minn., and were among the pioneer settlers of that now prosperous city. His sister, Arabella Stuart, b Nov. 28, 1857, m W. S. Williams, at Winona, Minn.

In 1858 Mr. Hubbard returned to Lansing, Mich., for a course of study, and two years later he entered the State Normal School at CLARENCE A. HUBBARD.

LAKE CITY, MINN.

Winona, from which he was graduated, going into the army in 1862 and serving with his regiment, the 8th Minnesota Infantry, on the frontier during the Sioux war, and later on the staffs of Gens. R. N. McLaren and H. H. Sibley.

At the close of the war of the rebellion Mr. Hubbard embarked in the grain business in Lake City, Minn., from which he retired in 1869 and entered the banking house of C. W. Hackett & Co. In 1873 the bank was incorporated under the laws of the state as the Lake City Bank of Minnesota, and Mr. HUBBARD was elected cashier, which position he still occupies. He is also a director and the largest stock-holder of the bank, which is a strong and prosperous institution, with ample capital and good surplus. Mr. HUBBARD's wife, Helen (Blanchard) Hubbard, was born January 18th, 1859; a daughter, Florence, was born December 3d, 1888. His son, by his first wife, William A., was born August 9th, 1867, and is also a stock-holder and director of the bank. Mr. Hubbard is a Knight Templar and a member of the First Congregational Church of Lake City. He has also been Mayor of the City, and has always taken a deep interest in all matters affecting the prosperity of the city. He is evidently not "a prophet without honor in his own country," and should he consent to enter politics we may look for another Governor Hubbard of Minnesota.

DESCENDANTS OF ANN HUBBARD AND COL. JAMES TAYLOR.

From two great grand-daughters of Ann Hubbard (Mrs. Alice E. T. Chandler and Mrs. Jane B. Hart of Washington Seminary, Atlanta, Ga.), and Mr. P. F. Taylor, Louisville, the following will be of interest.

"ANN HUBBARD, daughter of James Hubbard, Jr., * b 1732, d 1814. next in descent from James Hubbard, son of James of "Gloster" (see pages 84 and 165), m Col. James Taylor, 1758, son of James Taylor, of Carlisle, Eng., who emigrated to Virginia in 1654 and was the founder of the Taylor family in this country, and of which Zachary Taylor, President of the United States, was an honored representative. Some years later he attended memorial services held in Fredericksburgh, after the death of the Marquis, and died a few days later, in his 85th year, from illness brought on by the fatigue of the occasion. ELIZABETH HUBBARD (TAYLOR) MINOR'S children were Melinda, m — Buckner; Patsy, m — Chevis; Elizabeth, m William Jackson of Fredericksburgh, Va.; Sarah, m Rev. *This seems to be in contradiction of page 84, although the Taylor genealogy gives Ann Hubbard as dau of Bery (or Benj.) and wife Elizabeth Todd, and says: "Col. James was the companion of Gen. Washington during the French and Indian wars in fortifying the frontier from the Potomac to Staunton, Va. He served through the Revolution, was High Sheriff of Caroline, Burgess 1762-4, mem. Committee of Safety 1774-6, of the convention 1775-6, delegate to convention of 1788, and member of the Va. Legislature which framed the constitution of the State. He held public office for forty years without suffering defeat."

† Mr. Taylor says: "Edmund m Mary Todd Hinde, dau Dr. Thos. Hinde (surgeon in English army), and Mary Todd Hubbard, the latter being a sister of Ann Hubbard."

Munsell's American Ancestry, Vol. IX., gives the following particulars: James Taylor, who came from England and settled in Virginia in 1644-60, married Sarah Gregory and had James, born in Caroline County, Va., 1674, died in Orange County, Va., in 1729, and who was one of the first Surveyor Generals of Virginia and great grandfather of two Presidents, married Martha Thompson Feb. 23, 1699. From this authority and the statement given above it is highly probable that his son, James Taylor, was the one who married Ann Hubbard, he being a cousin of Gen. Zachary Taylor's father. President Taylor, twelfth President of the United States, had a brother, Col. Hubbard Taylor, U. S. A., and this branch was directly related to that of Col. James and Ann (Hubbard) Taylor. One of Ann's sisters married James Harrison, grandfather of Gen. Wm. Henry Harrison, ninth President of the U. S.

GENERAL JAMES HUBBARD OF SALISBURY, CONN.

At the last moment there comes to hand a record of a brave soldier and courteous gentleman, which is so much a part of our history that it is inserted here, copied in full from The National Tribune of Washington, D. C., of Nov. 30, 1886. His photograph hardly does him justice.

GENERAL JAMES HURBARD.

MUSTERED OUT.

HUBBARD - On the evening of Dec. 31 there passed away at his residence in Washington, D. C., after a brief illness, Gen. James Hubbard, as brave an officer as ever drew sword in defense of country. Gen. Hubbard was a native of Salisbury, Conn. Prior to the war he resided in Illinois, and first took the field as Lieutenant in the 20th Ill. Later he raised a company in his native town, for service in the 19th Conn., known as the Litchfield County Regiment, and was appointed Captain of Company B Aug. 15, 1862; was promoted to Major Nov. 5, 1862; made Lieutenant-Colonel May 13, 1864, and Colonel Jan. 7, 1865. For gallant and meritorious service before Petersburg, and at the battle of Sailor's Creek, Va., April 6, 1865, he was brevetted Brigadier-General by President Johnson. The regiment to which Gen. Hubbard was attached performed provost duty in Alexandria, Va., during the winter of 1862-63; subsequently it garrisoned the forts in that vicinity, and was changed to the 2d Conn. H. A. on Nov. 13, 1863. It took the field as infantry, and at that time formed the major portion of the Second Brigade (Upton's) of the First Division, Sixth Corps. At Cold Harbor Gen. Hubbard (then Lieutenant-Colonel) led the front battalion over the enemy's works in a charge so gallant that 114 of the regiment were killed and 179 wounded. With one exception, when on leave of absence, Gen. Hubbard participated in all the battles in which the regiment was engaged, among which may be mentioned Petersburg, Winchester (Sept. 19, 1864) Fisher's Hill, Cedar Creek and Sailor's Creek. The casualties of his regiment in less than one year following May 24, 1864, were killed, 234; wounded, 470; missing in action, 24; and died in rebel prisons, 22-total, 750. It is undoubtedly true, as claimed by Comrade G. C. Stewart in the last issue of The National Tribune, that the 2d Conn. Heavy Artillery was the first to enter Petersburg on the morning of its surrender. He says: "Col. James Hubbard, now I believe located in Washington, commanded the regiment, and was appointed Provost Marshal" of Petersburg. Little did Comrade Stewart think when he penned that article that on the very day of its issue the mortal remains of the gallant Colonel of whom he spoke would be tenderly consigned to a vault in the Congressional Cemetery. Comrade Jerome B. Burke, Commander of the Department of the Potomac, who is ever working for the ex-soldiers, living and dead, took charge of the funeral ceremonies in Washington, and Department Chaplain Swallow delivered the discourse. The grief-stricken widow will take the remains to Winsted, Conn., where on the 3d prox., by the hands of the surviving members of his regiment, they will be laid to rest among his former comrades and fellow-officers who have gone before. Gen. Hubbard being of a retiring nature, had but a small circle of acquaintances in Washington, and none knew from his lips the service which he rendered his country in its hour of need.

Dr. Henry Plumb, of Chicago, the Surgeon of his regiment, in a tribute in the Winsted (Ct.) Herald of Feb. 4, 1887, said:

"He won everybody's esteem and friendship, and I question whether there was a man under his command, officer or private, who ever felt in his heart that James Hubbard had been unjust to him. In all the trying and vexatious positions in which he was placed, I believe none felt that he dealt by them otherwise than as he conscientiously believed was right. Such confidence in the correctness of his motives and his desire at all times to be just did every one feel that noue felt aggrieved.

"His character was in many respects exceptional. Modesty was a prominent quality of his nature, and had others been as slow as himself to recognize his worth the promotions he so richly earned would probably never have been awarded him.

"His desire was to do his duty, and if promotion came as a consequence, it was well; if not, it was also well. I do not believe he ever gave the subject of his own advancement, or the question as to what public opinion of his conduct on the field would be, a single thought. He was not one of those who 'seek the bubble reputation in the cannon's mouth.' He was a soldier not to win personal glory, but to do a soldier's duty to his country. And none ever did it more heroically. He was not eager for the fray; he did not love the carnage and wild tumult of the battle as some men do, but he was always ready to go forward to the most desperate undertakings when duty called him to the task. This is true heroism."

John T. Hubbard of Milton, Conn., gives the following interesting data of this family. While some of it appears elsewhere, it is inserted here as giving the family line of Gen. James Hubbard:

PARLEY HUBBARD was born about 1767 and died about 1848. His wife was Ann Catlin. He was a Captain in the State Militia. There were four sons. HIRAM B., the eldest, was born at Salisbury, Ct., about 1796, and died in 1859; he married one Polly Dean, of Canaan, Ct., a school teacher. The second son, Joseph A., born at Salisbury in 1800, died about 1877 in Honesdale, Wayne Co., Pa., was a farmer. The third, John H., born at Salisbury in 1803, married Julia A. Dodge for his first wife, who had one son and one daughter, who both died in infancy; for his second, Abbie J. Wells, of Litchfield, Ct. She is still living in Litchfield. He was a lawyer, and went to Congress about 1860 and served two terms. He had three children by his second wife, two sons and one daughter, John T., Philip P. and Annie. The eldest son, John T., is a lawyer, and is practicing now in Litchfield. PHILIP P. is in the service of the Shepang Railroad. They are all unmarried. Alexander, born in 1806 in Salisbury, died June, 1881. He married Manclain Van Duesen, of Salisbury, in 1828. He was a Deputy Sheriff in Salisbury for a good many years. His family consisted of four sons and two daughters. Jane V., born June 14, 1830, married Benjamin Durfey, of Delaware, Ohio, in 1890. He is an old soldier. Next is Gen. James, born July 12, 1833. He married Marion B. Perry, of Winsted, Ct., about 1868. I am the next, John T., born in Salisbury, Ct., Nov. 19, 1836. Am a painter and machinist by occupation. Married Fannie B. Blake, of Salisbury, Nov. 20, 1888. Next is Henry P., born in Pine Plains, Dutchess Co., N. Y., in April, 1838, a carriage painter in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Married Maria Claffie, of Hartford, Ct. The next son, Edwin S., born at Pine Plains, N. Y., in 1840, went out in the Tenth Connecticut Infantry as private in 1861, was transferred to the Second Connecticut Heavy Artillery in 1863 and was made Second Lieutenant under Col. McKensey. (See Union Defenders.) He married in Columbus, Ohio, and is now living in West Plains, Mo. The next, a daughter, Annie, born in Pine Plains, N. Y., 1842, married Henry A. Beers, of Lakeville, Ct., about 1863. They have had ten children, six sons and four daughters.

RECORDS WANTED.

Red Wing, Minn.—Mrs. Julia H. Willard writes: "My mother was Juliana Hubbard, born in West Hartford, Ct., daughter of Levi Hubbard, son of Docitheus and Tamar Hubbard. This is as far back as I know the line. Can you help me? My mother was one of fourteen children. So there are numerous grandchildren interested."

Saginaw, Mich.—Mrs. Martha P. Hubbard-Howry writes: "Elisha Hubbard, of Ludlow, Mass., is the earliest of my ancestors that I can exactly place. I find the names of John and John, Jr., and I think that the latter was Elisha's father. Elisha's wife was probably Mary or Eunice Temple. Titus Hubbard also lived in Ludlow. He died in Dec., 1839. His wife was Phebe Paddelford, of Taunton, Mass. They were married Aug. 30, 1796. John Paddelford Hubbard also lived in Ludlow and died there Feb. 21, 1881. His wife was Harriet Maria Parsons. They were married April 14, 1835. She died March, 1867."

(Unfortunately no record appears by which these names can be traced. Can any subscriber help either of these inquirers?)

POSTSCRIPT.

Like a never-ending procession, there comes in at the last hours of closing this book, from correspondents who have for various reasons been prevented from sending before, much interesting data, which, if it had been received in time, would have been incorporated in its proper place under the several heads, instead of under "Unclassified Data." It is impossible to keep the pages open longer. Much of this data is valuable, and the publisher regrets that it was not sent when asked for, and that much of it comes too late for ample verification and the filling of some blanks which are necessarily left open.

"Attempt the end, and never stand to doubt; Nothing's so hard but search will find it out,"

This very complete index is one of the most important parts of the work, as it gives the "clue" to all names of Hubbards, and the families into which they have married on both sides. Its preparation was very laborious, extra care being used to make it as perfect as possible. Over fifteen thousand names were written on slips of paper and these had to be handled over several times to assort properly—taking over sixty working days' time!

All names in general matter (not otherwise classified) will be found in the first part. Following this, indexed by themselves under special heads, are the branches treated of in the fourteen special chapters; viz., Descendants of the following families:

When a name is repeated on a page, it is indexed only once. Of course, the same name may not apply to the same person.

All names marked with an asterisk (*) are "Half-Hubbards," or those whose mothers were Hubbards by birth.

All names marked with a dagger (†) are "Quarter-Hubbards," or those whose fathers or mothers were "Half-Hubbards," and in some few cases still further removed.

All names in parenthesis are the maiden names, and if one or more marriages occurred, such name or names follow the maiden name.

SPECIMEN LETTERS.

Quantities of letters are in file, similar to the following, which of course it is impossible to answer without more data upon which to hang a tracing thread.

	1095
H. P. Hubbard, Publisher.	, , , , , father was, and my mother were married His father was te us as belonging to any particular branch?
Would be willing to pay for in	formation."

Now it is too bad that such inquirers cannot be gratified (and it exemplifies the necessity of keeping records), but of course it is impossible to do this in most cases without some clew. The publisher will be constantly receiving new data, and expects to keep a copy of this History with corrections and additions down to date. He will at all times be glad to answer queries from kinsfolk, so far as lies in his power. Exhaustive searches, however, must of necessity be charged for in proportion to the amount of labor involved.

GREAT THOUGHTS.

"Fame comes only when deserved, and then it is as inevitable as destiny, for it is destiny."—Longfellow.

"And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything."

—Shakespeare, "As You Like It."

"Fame, we may understand, is no sure test of merit, but only a probability of such; it is an accident, not a property of a man."—Carlyle.

"We sleep, but the loom of life never stops; and the pattern which was weaving when the sun went down is weaving when it comes up to-morrow."—Henry Ward Beecher.

And the Lord said unto Moses, write this for a Memorial in a Book-Exodus, 17: xiv.

These blank pages are intended for a continuation of lines of descent. Births, baptisms, marriages, deaths, burials, and biographies can be herein inscribed, and descent lines continued from the point where they are dropped in the book. From time to time these pages can be printed, if desired, and neatly pasted in the book. Preserved Genealogical Records are many times of great value in restoring property to rightful heirs, which otherwise might be lost to them. Keep your records carefully from now on, together with interesting facts in family history. It will make interesting reading for future generations and aid in the preparation of historical data a century hence.
